- But basic signal grabbing performance on the HF bands
- is where the receivers should be compared.

Yeah I Buy a Radio to be able to Hear what I want to Listen to; and too much 'stuff' starts to be 'stuff' that gets in the way of the actual Radio Listening.

Well if you Buy 16+ Acres of Land to put up Four (4) Rhombic Antennas each on it's own 4 Acres and pointing at the Four Cardinal Headings N-E-S-W then you might be in a position to discern the difference on a daily basis. Plus the Land can usually be sold at a profit sometime in the future.

remember - don't let all the knobs and buttons stop you from simply enjoying listening to you radios ~ RHF

- I don't know that we'll ever answer this question here
- on the ng.
- Yes, it boils down to basic signal capture capability
- however, if one radio makes that easier via better DSP,
- filters, easy to use controls vs embedded menus
- I bet it will more often be used to its full potential.

- On a separate note; this is one of the better threads
- good focus on on-topic material!

Linear amplification is not required for FM. The carrier is constant.

Godspeed to Sea Shepherd http://www.seashepherd.org/ for their heroic effort to stop Japan's criminal enterprise of slaughtering thousands of whales annually. It is time Japan and all other Asian countries enter the 21st Century and stop eating whale blubber, dogs, cats, bear paws, ad naseum. To learn the scope of animal cruelty that goes on in Asian nations (most which have no animal cruelty laws) do a google search. It truly is outrageous.

What difference does it make if you listen but don't comprehend?
Your motto should be what Curly of the three stooges once uttered "I keep trying to think but nothing happens."

Your solution to better listening is to buy 16 acres and use Rhombics?
You are clearly out of your mind.

That would only be a problem for you.

31. Radio Shack AM/FM Table Radio and Superadio III

I did make it back to Radio Shack this evening and looked at the radio again. The shelf tag lists it as 120-0204, however, the box itself lists 12-204. It said it is a "Hi-Fidelity Tabletop AM/FM Radio. It is pretty basic with a very large tuning knob and very small volume control. Another rotary switch selects between AM, FM, and possibly auxiliary input. This is a radio only, there is no clock in it. I have tried searching under both 12-204 and 120-0204, but I haven't found much yet. Somebody has one on Ebay, so at least you can see a photograph of it. When I try searching on the Radio Shack webpage it seems to be mysteriously absent.
http://cgi.ebay.com/RadioShack-Hi-Fidelity-Table-Top-AM-FM-Radio_W0QQitemZ140204695310QQcmdZViewItem

http://www.wpculp.net/about/receiver.html

I did not buy one, but I ended up buying a Superadio III on sale until tomorrow for $39.95 at Mills Fleet Farm. I understand that not all Superadio III's are created the same. What is the best way for me to tell if I got a good one?

J. R. Stocks must be second rate if he wants to spar with people on Goggle Newsgroups, etc. Pretty low class, but than again typical for a second rate company with a second rate product like iBiquiity HD. Especially with their questionable ethics. They have first-rate spinmasters though. Just my opinion on all this though.

Also Interesting that Bethes...@gmail.com feels the need to sound so threatening. Who is that fellow anyway?

J. R., you've got your hands full convincing retail and manufacturing partners to make and sell a blatantly defective product. I think you should return to Ginsu knives and laundry detergent myself. But then again just my opinion.

Let me know if I can help you with your new venture J. R. I'm always available

Maybe what I'm really looking for it the piece of equiptment that has that red needle. It's been awhile since I had to do the vocabulary of all this. The little needle that bops into the red area - what piece of equiptment is that?? I looked up audio clipping and that's a pretty good explanation but it still doesn't exactly say what it sounds like. Thanks.

- I did not buy one, but I ended up buying a Superadio III
- on sale until tomorrow for $39.95 at Mills Fleet Farm.
- I understand that not all Superadio III's are created the same.
- What is the best way for me to tell if I got a good one?

J&D Schnoor,

The RCA/GE Superadio III is a very good AM/FM Radio.

HD Radio Sales Restated

By Glenn Fleishman

"Industry analyst says HD Radio sales were far lower than previously stated and projected: Mark Ramsay of hear2.0 and Mercury Radio Research writes in a blog post a few days ago that while iBiquity claimed 200,000 digital AM/FM equipped radios were sold in 2006 and 1m to 1.5m would be sold in 2007, the actual numbers were far lower: 40,000 in 2006 and 330,000 in 2007. The 2008 estimate is now 500,000."

"I'm not hearing any good news about HD Radio at the moment, despite more companies selling products, and the whole iPod integration into very specific system setups."

Just in case you might have missed the iBiquity Digital Corportation spin on HD Radio sales. Good luck J.R.

I did a comparison between a Drake R8B and a high ticket Icom IC-756PROIII see:
http://www.dxing.info/equipment/icom_ic756_plimmer.dx where I clearly note the superiority of the more expensive radio. Of course the law of diminishing returns applies, so when I get my new Icom IC-7700 I do not expect the performance to be earth shatteringly better than my 756Pro3, but the differences will be there.

If it gets me only one more really exotic catch that the 756Pro3 could not resolve, then it will have been worth the extra money I am laying out.

As a matter of interest I go on DXpeditions with a mate, Vince Stevens, who has my old Drake R8A. On several occasions I have been able to demonstrate to him that I am resolving readable signals on the 756Pro3 which he has not been able to resolve on his R8A.

But I rush to say that the R8A will ably resolve 99% of all stations, so it is just those rare exotic signals that I am chasing with the more pricey full featured radio's. Also, these top end full featured radio's make DXing a lot easier, a bit like driving a top end Cadilac compared to driving a bottom end budget model.

The R9500 will definitely do a better job of receiving tough signals than a Drake R8.

Have fun and good DX

"No HD for Ford 2009"

"Kind of a downer to close out the year, and a possible warning for the future... a family member works in Detroit on auto designs for future years, and the audio systems that go in them. During a recent holiday chat, he informed me that he was just about to wrap up the work for Ford 2009 models. 'So they have HD tuners, right?' I asked.
Well, no they don't he responded. They are loaded and ready for Sirius radio, THX sound as an option, many other lovely audio treats, but unless requested custom by the buyer, HD will not be included in the 2009 audio systems. I find this bit of news to be very very troubling.
It also adds to my growing fears that while it 'seemed like a good idea at the time' spending $250,000 to upgrade our signal to HD was a HUGE waste of time and money. Sure, we did some much needed upgrading of our transmitter site, beefed up the infrastructure and wiring, but I think we could have done it for less than a 1/4 mil. It would be less than kind to suggest that we're being taken for a ride on this, but with virtually no interest from consumers and no support from industry leaders, it sure feels that way."

No offense, but Glenn Fleishman is generally an IBOC-shill. I've had run-ins with that asshole, too. If one were to believe 330,000, then one is a fool - can't count "trade" purchases, returns, and promotional giveaways to broadcasters and used car dealerships:

"HD Radio spinners claim a breakthrough year: Pulling a fast one"

"According to a press release from the Alliance 330,000 HD receivers were sold last year. This is a 725 per cent increase from the 40,000 sets purchased a year earlier and therefore 2007 was a 'breakthrough year' for the technology. In 2008 they will sell a million of the things."

http://www.theinquirer.net/gb/inquirer/news/2008/02/08/hd-radio-spinners-attempt-fast

"DEAD AIR: Radio's great leap forward stalling in the Valley"

"Retailers say no one is buying HD radios in South Texas despite scattered attempts by broadcasters to promote the digital signal technology..."

http://www.themonitor.com/news/radio_7098___article.html/digital_new.html

"HD Radio Has Yet To Take Off"

"But the technology hasn't taken off as expected. NBC 5 could not find one person who owns a hi-def radio and neither could KISS FM's program director. I don't know anybody that has one yet, Davis said."

http://www.nbc5i.com/technology/14878368/detail.html

"High-def radio is here, but is anyone listening?"

"But 19 Utah stations are broadcasting 31 high-definition radio channels with six more coming soon... It seems the stations are investing in technology the public isn't quite ready to embrace.... Some have heard it referred to but never had cause to get one. Unless you are a gadget person, few of these radios have sold."

http://www.sltrib.com/technology/ci_7852904

"HD's here. Who's listening?"

"But consumers haven't exactly been stampeding to electronics stores for the new HD Radio sets that are required to tune in the digital signals."

http://www.twincities.com/business/ci_7991990?nclick_check=1#recent_comm

- VU meter
- http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/VU_meter

Called it a "VU" Meter so long that I had forgotten that "VU" stood for 'Volume Units'.

But then 'why' isn't the "Signal Strength" Meter called the "SS" Meter {Oops :-} -or- the "S2" Meter ?

Not everything needs to be boiled down to an acronym; aside from the connotation that "SS" meter might have had in the post WWII world there's a lot to be said for plain language. If you monitor police/fire/emergency services you will also note much more plain language with less 'codes' and buzzwords: it allows greater efficiency in communication.

Handy Shortwave Chart
Bill McFadden
billmc@agora.rdrop.com

Band allocations and time zone conversions for the USA. Includes broadcast bands used outside the USA. For multi-use bands, primary usage is shown.
Some stations operate outside official bands. Information is from Oct 2005 FCC rules and Jan 2006 NTIA manual, see Chapter 4 of:
http://www.ntia.doc.gov/osmhome/redbook/redbook.html

Frequencies are in kHz. Usual spacing in shortwave broadcast bands is 5 kHz. Frequencies above 10000 kHz tend to propagate better during the day; frequencies below 10000 kHz tend to propagate better at night.

Please e-mail suggestions and corrections to billmc@agora.rdrop.com.

Phone line as SW antenna

WARNINGS AND DISCLAIMERS

Connecting unapproved devices to phone lines may be illegal in your area.
Telephone lines present a potential shock hazard. Do not use this antenna for transmitting. Use at your own risk.

INTRODUCTION

This article describes how to use a phone line as a shortwave receiving antenna. Performance will vary depending on the kind of phone line you have. Overhead lines usually make okay antennas, while underground lines | usually don't. Phone lines carrying DSL service may be unsuitable because | DSL operates over a wide spectrum. A phone line antenna will generally pick up more power line noise than a dedicated antenna, so don't expect to | use it for DX work. Nevertheless, I found that it outperformed the | telescopic whip antennas built into many portables.

A reader sent in this suggestion: If you're concerned about connecting the phone line directly to the receiver, try wrapping the phone cord several times around the receiver's telescopic whip antenna instead.
Performance may not be as good as a direct connection, but it will probably be better than the whip antenna by itself.

Someone else wrote asking about lightning protection. I haven't thought much about it because thunderstorms are rare in my area. Most phone lines have lightning arrestors on them where they enter the house, but the lightning arrestors may pass enough energy during a lightning strike damage a receiver. My suggestion is to disconnect the antenna when not in use if you experience frequent thunderstorms.

HOW TO DO IT

The simplest connection is a single capacitor between the phone line and receiver. The capacitor eliminates all phone line voltages, including | ringing, so that they will not harm the receiver. The capacitor should | be rated 250 volts or higher.

Phone line RF connector
red .01 uF center cond. / \ or o--------||-----------------------------|-o | To receiver
green \ /
50 ohm coax |
ground |
or o-----------------------------------------+ N.C. shield

N.C. = no connect. I originally connected the phone line ground (yellow wire) to this terminal, but reception was better without it (if you do this, play it safe and put a .01 uF capacitor in series). If another ground is available, you can connect it to this terminal.

If you are picking up local AM or FM radio stations on the shortwave bands, it is likely that your receiver is overloaded. Inexpensive and portable receivers usually lack the filtering needed to eliminate this interference, but you can make your own filters. Filters can also be | purchased from shortwave dealers (see below for recommendations).

A high-pass filter can be used to remove signals below the shortwave bands. It rejects interference from local AM stations and presents a high impedance to the phone line at audio frequencies so that the phone line remains balanced.

A low-pass filter can be used to remove signals above the shortwave bands. It rejects interference from FM and TV stations, as well as VHF 2-way radio transmitters. If you use both filters, connect the output of the first filter to the input of the second (don't forget to connect their ground terminals together). It doesn't matter which filter is connected first.

These filters also work well with random wire antennas. Just connect the antenna in place of the phone line.

The filter(s) should be connected to the phone line in this manner:

Phone line RF connector
red -------- center cond. / \
or o----| |-------------------------|-o | To receiver
green | | \ /
| FILTER | 50 ohm coax |
ground | | |
or o----| |----------------------------+

| RECOMMENDED FILTERS
| If you don't want to make your own filters, the following have good | performance, are well-built and affordable:
| Model 400 BCB interference filter (3.5 MHz highpass)

| Model 420 HF lowpass filter (30 MHz lowpass)
| http://www.iceradioproducts.com/filtersrf.html#3
| (scroll down a bit to see the model 420)
| If you have a random-wire antenna, the following unit will provide | impedance matching and lightning protection (connect antenna to 450-ohm | terminal):
| Model 182A beverage matching unit

FILTER PLANS

The original credit for the high-pass and low-pass filters goes to Paul Blumstein and John Shalamskas, respectively. Edited versions of their articles are included here:

Date: 09 Jan 91 00:54:08 GMT
From: paulb@harley.TTI.COM (Paul Blumstein)
Subject: BC Band Hi-Pass Filter

The following ascii-schematic diagram is a high pass filter that will filter out Broadcast Band (MW) stations. I found it a great boon to my shortwave listening since local MW stations overload my ATS-803A front end & appear in SW, especially with a long antenna.

If you remember my antenna saga, I went from 50 feet to 150 feet & had overload problems causing me to cut back to 50 feet. (Even at 50 feet, I still have some MW interference). I took the advice of Gary Coffman and looked up filters in the ARRL Handbook. With the filter in place, I intend to try to increase my antenna length again.

Anywho, here is the filter, for interested parties.

--------||---+----||-----+----||-----------
} }
{ {
} }
-------------+-----------+-----------------

The outer capacitors are 1500 pf ceramic disks.
The inner capacitor is 820 pf ceramic disk.
The squiggly things are coils (two total). Each one is 2.7 uh.
(a close value will do).

Subject: Re: BC Band Hi-Pass Filter

I built the filter that Paul Blumstein posted recently and measured it on a gain-phase analyzer. Here are its characteristics:

100 kHz -120dB
500 kHz -68dB

1000 kHz -38dB
1600 kHz -15dB
2100 kHz -3dB

The source and load impedances were 50 ohms. Because the filter has five elements, the attenuation is 30dB per octave. The measurements confirmed this.

This filter seems to be a good compromise between interference attenuation and passband response. There is very little attenuation in the 120m band and above. It could use a little more attenuation at the upper end of MW, which could be done with more stages or a higher cutoff frequency. Alternatively, you could build two of these filters and put them in series. (Since two 1500pF capacitors in series are really 750pF, you could eliminate one cap.)

Just for fun, I put 470 ohms in series with the input to see how the filter performed with an antenna mismatch. The response was:

100 kHz -105dB
500 kHz -60dB
1000 kHz -35dB
1600 kHz -15dB
2300 kHz -3dB

These figures are normalized to the passband response of -15dB, which is due to the impedance mismatch between the source and load and would have been there without the filter. Hence, the filter works almost as well in spite of the mismatch, which is good news to those who use long-wire antennas.

Subject: Construction of filters for SW reception

Several people have asked for construction details of the filters I built for my DX-440.

The high-pass filter helped some, but in my location the VHF/UHF broadcasters are also causing problems. So, I dug out the ARRL handbook and chose a 7-element Chebyshev low-pass design that is -3 dB at 35 MHz, -20 dB at 43 MHz, and -50 dB at 64 MHz (all calculated; it works well in practice!)

LOW-PASS FILTER (Rejects FM, TV, etc.)

chassis ground

I had to do a little more improvising at this point. I used .33 uH instead of .36, and .66 uH instead of .42, but it works fine.

The 5-lug terminal strips were perfect for these circuits, since there are 4 lugs plus a grounded lug. All "ground" connections go to the lug that is mounted to the chassis, and the other 4 lugs are used for each of the connections on the signal line. One terminal strip is used per filter. Since both filters were necessary to clean up the hash, I am going to put them both into one box when I get the time.

The proper way to connect them is in series, i.e.

signal in ------- filter 1 -------- filter 2 -------- signal out

There is no difference between ends. They are "bilateral" which means you can't possibly hook them up backwards. (In the above schematics,

COIL WINDING

You can make the coils yourself using this formula:

L = 0.2 * B^2 * N^2 / (3B + 9A + 10C)

L is the inductance, in uH
A is the length of the coil, in inches
B is the mean diameter of the coil, in inches
C is the diameter of the wire, in inches
N is the number of turns

For small wire, you can assume C = 0.

I love it. Major stores like Best Buy and Radio Shack can't sell them. No-name companies like Radiosophy can't sell them. QVC and Ford couldn't give them away. Now they've moved on to this Myer-Emco that neither I or anybody else has heard of. I swear I remember them years ago selling gimmicky products like radio-toaster combinations and other junk that no one wanted.

Ibiquity HD radio investors must be pulling their hair out at this nonsense. All the while, goofballs like this Bernie Sapienza spin their BS about "this important time, when the growth in HD Radio products at retail is increasing." This J. R. Stocks can't have much on the ball either if he connects himself up with iBiquity.

I have a question. Why is this same subject by the same person posted Isn't it easier to just throw ten feet on line? Just curious is

Back For A Second Stint As CBS Radio's Leader, Dan Mason Has A Mission For His Company -- And His Industry

"RI: The HD Digital Radio Alliance for the second year in a row was radio's top advertiser, but there remains a lot of question about whether those spots are driving consumers to buy the receivers. After two years and over $400 million in ad time, why isn't there more impact?
DM: I used to work for Ibiquity -- they were my clients in the consulting world -- and I went all over the country doing HD seminars and talking about HD Radio. In 2003, I went to Los Angeles to do a seminar to the radio industry about HD, and only one person came -- and that was an Infinity engineer who dropped by to say hello! How could there be a full seminar in Los Angeles that no one attended? But, fast forward to 2007 and look at the progress we've made: From 2003 when no one came, the industry has made a lot of progress. Especially the announcement Ford made about installing HD radios in their cars. If you take a snap shot today, this has come from ground zero the past two years. Don't look back, because that's an unfair comparison."

Dan Mason is being sent out to patch holes in the sinking iBiquity ship. And the spin goes on and on.

69. Coax Switching Boxes Opinions ?

Hello,

I would like to purchase an "inexpensive" simple, coax antenna switch for occasionally switching two antennas into my scanner.

Freq. range up to about the scanners limit of 1.3 GHz Receive only.

Looked at the Daiwa, and for the $ seems like the way to go, but I thought I'd ask here first.
Any opinions on the Daiwa ?

Any others to consider also that aren't too expensive ?

Ace hardware has a coax switching box, I guess for TV's mainly, with pushbuttons.
Think this would do the job for my scanner stuff, or probably just junk ?
It's really cheap at about $8

Thanks,
Bob

70. Drake R7 repair

I have one of these units in for repair. The person that I am repairing it for is either too cheap to pay somebody for the schematic or too lazy to follow up.....anyway, what I need is a scan of the schematic of the power supply board. This is the later iteration that uses the TDA2002 audio amp chip as the oscillator vs the multivibrator circuit that is used in the older iteration of the power supply. This fellow keeps sending me scans of small sections of the power supply. He is getting these small scans from somebody on the Drake mailing list. The person on the list is telling him that the schematic is too large to scan. I will be glad to pay somebody if they would be able to copy/reduct the size of the schematic so that it can be scanned on a flatbed scanner.
If anybody can help me, I will be glad to pay you for a scan, and I will then charge the owner of the receiver in turn. The problem is that the +24V rail for the VCO tuning voltage is missing.
Thanks!

Pete

After it's all fixed, I'd recommend that the individual run it off of a separate 12 volt supply. Might save some headaches down the road.

I think you are right. The only receiver that I ever had that runs hotter than the R7 is my old HF-2050. Now, that was hot!
I do have an R7 myself that I upgraded with better performance mixer, replaced the displays, etc.
I keep it as a museum piece, along with my other Drake equipment.

Use a Cable TV A/B switch. It'll work fine. Scanners are way too sensitive and the slight mismatch will help cure that a little.

If you care about quality, I would get the Daiwa CS-201, for about $28.
Look at this link for user comments:

http://www.eham.net/reviews/detail/2521

You could also consider Alpha Delta, but they are quite expensive:

For your purpose, I would choose the Daiwa for sure.

good luck !!

Ace is doing ok! At this point in time what I have here has done a superb job. If I were in need of a bit of RF help, I'd merely go out somewhere and lay out a thousand feet of wire.

Problem solved for that 'tough' SWBC target, at a fraction of the cost.

The Daiwa is good and guess what - for what you are doing the $8 will be suitable also. If you alread have the antennas up and are feeding with 50 ohm coax that has PL-259 fittings it will be easier to use the Daiwa as you won't need to get 'F' to 'PL-259' adapters. If you are just now installing the whole system I'd go with 75 ohm RG-6 quad shield and 'F' fittings all the way and then use an 'F' to BNC or SMA whichever your scanner uses.

Lets see now - 400 Million spent on HD Radio ads and 300,000 radios sold so far - and that's probably inflated.

Ok, that amounts to..... $1333.33 spent for each listener - roughly speaking of course. Did I get the math right? Is that a valid way of looking at it?.

Now its possible that there are two people listening to the same radio. OK.....That amounts to.....$666.66 per listener.

Help me out here. Doesn't seem too successful to me.

J.R. Stocks. Could you help me on this?

JR and Stocks are two loser peas-in-a-pod. It is interesting that iNiquity just hired Stocks for retail and another clown to stir up international interest in HD, which there is zero in Europe. Digital radio is failing everywhere, including on SW, but someone/something is continuing to feed the HD monster. If INiquity backed-out, IBOC would die a sudden death. I'm in the DC area, and I believe that MyerEmco has ten stores in DC - they were bought out, and the new company decided to keep the MyerEmco nameplate. Funny, how many hits, or lack thereof, MyerEmco gets on their website. In the long run, there is no way the MyerEmco shell can compete with the likes of Best Buy and Circuit City. They are a loser company, right JR? Yes, I wonder why iNiquity's investors haven't stepped in and force Struble out - Struble keeps losing money by beating this dead horse. Yea, how long has this nonsense been going on - two to three years, with sales figures that are pathetic. Hipporadio on Radio-Info's board, who is connected to the broadcast industry and electonic sales, reports that only 130,000 HD radios have been sold, which probably doesn't account for returns, giveaways, and "trade" purchases. This has to be the farce of the century, but look who/what is running the show. I guess that a Harvard MBA buys a lot of spinmisting. This all will eventually implode, and I hope that those responsible are prosecuted for fraud.

OK. Radiosophy is extending their sale of HD radios through March.
You can buy this fine plastic radio for $89.00 This might help.

The only test for whether it is good or not test is to plug it in and listen. Where did you read that some Super Radio III's are built differently than others?

According to Hipporadio on Radio-Info, who is in the broadcast industry annd electonic sales, only 130,000 HD radios sold, minus returns, "trade" purchases, and giveaways - maybe, the true number is around 50,000 in the hands of radio-geeks and consumers.

Having to be put on "sale" means no sale. Here is a review from Wired on that piece-of-crap:

"Remember those crappy $15 AM/FM/cassette radios from the 80s? The HD100 looks just like one and has the sound to match. Basically a glorified clock radio, it has a chintzy, careless interface with speakers that spew a tinny unrefined sound. Frankly we'd be happier keeping our money and sitting in silence."

If you look at my blog down the right hand side, you will quickly

I'll be generous and give iBiquity 100,000 HD radios. So, there are about 270,000,000 people, and dropping, that listen to radio. So, wouldn't that leave $2,700 spent on each listener per HD radio?

I expect lots of "forward looking" announcements and new names to pop-up with iBiquity but most insiders see the writing-on-the-wall and will move on to other more lucrative things and HD radio is not successful by any measure. They have eight people on their technical staff and they don't get paid much. They are not supporting the AM side, it's a technical quagmire with no solution and HD FM has stalled with no signs of life beyond its current point. About the only thing they can do now is go in circles till the money eventually dries up.

But, it's typical to put a positive spin when you fill a position like VP of Sales, etc. Looks like things are happening when reality shows otherwise.

iBiquity can spin all they want, but maybe there are 100,000 HD radios in circulation. You can bet, that 80% are owned by "trade" people and radio-geeks. Unfortunately, Ford is stuck with HD Radio, as they have an agreement with iNiquity. Meanwhile, Chrysler will be installing WiMax in a couple of years - you can bet, that other car manufacturers will follow. No HD chipsets necessary!

Got these responses yesterday from a newpaper reporter in Florida, for an article they just ran on HD Radio:

Glad to peruse your blog. Thanks for the technical lesson. I appreciate it. HD Radio smelled of smoke and mirrors when I first began researching the article, and I didn't change my mind when I finished writing it. I have XM satellite and it is more than I need, AND I enjoy the choices. Perhaps HD stands for Humpty-Dumpty; who knows? In the long run, market always has a way of "rewarding" such chicanery.

It seems as though the FCC is turning a deaf ear to the interference problem. Of course, that's not so rare for Cabinet-level agencies. Be well, and keep up the valuable service you've been doing, and thank you for the feedback. My editor was very happy with the article for helping her sort out the bullshit from the bourbon.

I can imagine the water cooler talk over at iBuquity. I'll bet they're quietly sharing job search tips with each other. Not much of a future there.

The discussion here is amplification, not reception. The type of detector in whatever receiver you want to use has no bearing on the types of amplifiers that can be used to amplify an FM source.

I do not understand why you feel compared to depart from conventional types of amplifiers required for various modes. Class C is used for FM because of it's greater efficiency, typically in excess of 70%. Linearity is not required as the amplitude of the signal is not changed. Certainly, you could use AB1 or AB2, but efficiency will not be as great, will require more transistors or tubes, and a larger physical footprint.

Class C is defined as an anode conduction angle of less than 180 degrees. In Class C, the amplifying device is deliberately not operated linearly. Instead, it is operated as a switch in order to reduce resistance loss. The anode conduction angle in Class C operation is usually made as short as is possible. In effect, the tank circuit makes the RF output sine wave--like a bell that is struck at a constant rate by a hammer. This is similar to the principal behind the spark transmitter.

The efficiency of a typical Class C amplifier is high. When compared to a Class AB1 or Class AB2 amplifier operating at the same power input, a Class C amplifier will deliver a received signal increase of about 1db--in other words, 1/6 of 1 S-unit. However, significant trade-offs are required to achieve that 1/6 of 1 S-unit. As is the case with Class B operation, the distortion from Class C operation is so high that SSB operation is precluded. Only CW, FM or FSK operation is practical. The harmonic output level from a Class C amplifier is substantial. Extra filtering is usually needed to control harmonic radiation.

Most engineers and other technical people don't hang around were things look so grim. They just don't get paid enough to stay at places like iBiquity Digital Corporation because there's not enough money in it to wait around for success to happen. They're too pragmatic. They start looking as soon as they detect a dead end.
IBiquity is a dead end.

Usually when one copies the above they would reference the source instead of giving the impression that it was of their own authoring.

Original thinking doesn't come easily to you, does it?

I've been meaning to correct one of your racist invectives. You said:

"Go blow some IBO Cock, and leave the real radio hobbyists alone, OK?"

You should be aware that, despite your own experiences, the IBO are not known for homosexual activity. Did you force them at gunpoint?

I really don't want to say this, my many shortwave friends, but I find that I am giving up far to much of my increasingly valuable time here on RRS trying to educate the faux, the debutantes, and those who tote..

Therefore, I've simply decided to give up RRS.

Goodbye, I sincerely hope that you all find your niche in the world of SW.

Our circle keeps wonder who is feeding iBiquity. Radio stocks are down 90%, Clear Channel is a bust (the HD Alliance took over the loser MSN Direct from CC), CC is no longer investing in the future, the 10db power increase for FM-HD, if approved, will require the replacement of all hardware, which isn't going to happen. iBiquity must have eaten up all of the initial investment money long ago, so what the hell is going on? Where the hell are iNiquity's investors - has Struble been able to spinmister his way so far, telling investors one lie after another? Struble doen't seemed concerned that iNiquity hasn't been profitable:

"IBiquity sees digital radio signaling changes to come"

"The company has yet to turn a profit and does not expect to do so in 2007 or 2008, Struble said... Mass marketing and consumer adoption is the last hurdle, Struble said... Representatives of investment firms that have spots on iBiquity's board of directors could not be reached for comment, but Struble said they are excited about the progress the company is making. The focus is not on exit strategies yet, he said."

http://tinyurl.com/3don5y

Interesting, that investment firms could not be reached for comment. If the investors are excited about iNiquity's progress, then Struble is definately lying his ass off. WTF?

RF Burns,

Good Post as long as you put IBOC or HD Radio at the Start of the Subject-Line of these IBOC / HD Radio Posts : You will not see me posting to them; except to actually make a Comment.

-wrt- Did I Get The Math Right? : Fuzzy Logic =equals= Fuzzy Math

IBOC : "HD" Radio Sales - Getting The Math Right !
http://groups.google.com/group/hd-radio/msg/a5be3984e6b529e1

The $400M was spent to Try-and-Influence the 300M present day Analog "Only" AM/FM Radio Listeners in the USA.

Doing-the-Math - For These Listeners would come out to be about $1.33 for every 'potential' Radio Listener; that could be "Sold-on-the-Idea" of "HD" Radio -as- Being Something They Both "Want" {It's New ! :o} and Have-to-Have. {It's Digital ! :o}

$NOTE$ - A $1.33 per Radio Listener per Year with Hourly and Daily Radio ADZs {PSAs} is : cheap, Cheap. CHEAP !
-note- As soon as Congress / The FCC Mandates All Digital Mode AM/FM/DS Radios : All the former "HD" Radios ADZs will be Income-Off-Setting "PSAs" for the Radio Stations.
This is a $-}} = I See Money Big Smile Happy Face $-}}

RF Burns - You are Focused on short-term 'results'.

While the "HD" Radio 'Alliance' is Interested in Long-Term [Bottom-Line] "Results" over the next Decade for AM/FM Radio.
http://www.mediaweek.com/mw/news/recent_display.jsp?vnu_content_id=1001614953

The "HD" Radio 'Alliance' has the Money and Commitment for a 5~10 Year Program to Transition the USA to "HD" AM/FM Radio; plus the Political Resources to Make-It-Happen by an Act-of-Congress and/or Rulling by the FCC; which I suspect is coming in the next 3 Years to require that all 'new' Radios being Built or Imported in to the USA will be All Digital-Mode AM/FM/DS "HD" Radios with Dual Mode IBOC and a Built-in Direct-Satellite Interface.

NOTE - The Price Point of these All Digital-Mode AM/FM/DS
"HD" Radios will Drop Annually over a Period of several Years :
[Using a 1/3 (-33%) Price Reduction per Year]
$500 for Year # 1 > $335 for Year # 2 > $225 for Year # 3 >
$150 for Year # 4 > $100 for Year # 5

SO - At the End of Five (5) Years the Price of the 'new' All Digital-Mode AM/FM/DS "HD" Radios will be back at the present day Price to US Consumers for the old Analog "Only' AM/FM Radio that has been around for 40 Years.

You need to look at more than the number of sets sold. You will notice that the HD sets that are available are:

1. Still first generation. They take a lot power using general purpose DSP components.

2. These first generation sets are being discounted.

3. Big semiconductor players that have the resources are not developing optimized chip sets that would reduce the power requirement and improve performance.

4. As a consequence of #3 you don't see any second generation sets available.

5. Since the big semiconductor makers have dropped out it is left up to smaller virtual companies without fabrication facilities to pitch a business plan to investors to get the money needed for a production run of parts they designed. These parts may or may not work. If they do we might see samples this summer. Power draw will still be much larger than analog sets though and I expect that portable devices will need lithium batteries.

6. HD needs these second generation sets to grow interest in this mode of broadcasting. Generally, the only interest I see at all in HD is in the FM band where public service stations actually fill the secondary channels with different content.

HD is dying and is likely to be around just a few more years at best unless something changes the playing field.

Hey whack job, you don't even know how to reference a thread. RRS is not a google group. You are a clueless moron telling other people they don't have something right. Fail to see the irony in this? That would not be a

I'm just fed up with a moron that posts from google that thinks this is a google group. A moron that adds nothing to the knowledge base of people that post here and runs some of the worthwhile posters off the news group.

I tried the nice approach, the ignore tactic, and neither was satisfactory. Got any constructive suggestions?

Cuhulin,

Good Idea - I did that when I was a Kid in Oakland, CA and had a 148 Foot Dipole Antenna at the Backyard Fence extending out along the Neighbors fences too.
Had to Mow their Lawns once a Week for Eight Weeks to get them to agree to it. Over the Years those old Neighbors moved or died and the Masts for the Antenna came down along with the Antenna. I was actually an Inverted "V" {Dipole} Antenna with a Center-Point of 38 Feet and the two Ends were 20 Feet. Used a Direct Connection to 450 Ohm Ladder-Line {No Matching Transformer / Balun}

i could point at it and say : hey - i built that myself !

Doesn't look third generation to me. It's first generation going on 2nd when it happens. It has not happened yet. Now get a clue as there are no radios with new optimized chip sets because there are no optimized chip sets to put in them yet. What could your next argument be? That they are keeping the new radios a secret?

I don't expect marketers to keep details straight. I expect them to promote ignoring details that do not fit in their outlook.

See you can generate a post like a normal person but this is like 0.1% of your posts. For some reason 99.9% of your posts are made by some asshole that claims to be you. Here you related a relevant on topic story about your experiences in the hobby instead of the usual google, copy, and paste post and you did not change the subject line either. I noticed that you did not need any of the weird punctuation either.

So this pretty much proves that you are not retarded and 99.9% of your posts to the news group is deliberate Trolling behavior by an SOB.

The chips are shipping. Production samples were given manufacturers at CES per the Radio World article and per iBiquity updates.

You are just upset that the chips are not going to you for approval.

RHF, David Eduardo just showed up in this thread. So, you know what to do:

1. Stand a foot or so in front of Eduardo
2. Drop to your knees
3. Open your mouth (it'll only need to be open a tiny bit)
4. Suck whatever Eduardo happens to stick in there.

Sure... Well then, perhaps I can meet your sister in Omena?

Bob Savage on AM-HD

"So a Salt Lake AM-FM has flipped the order in which it does its legal TOH breaks from AM-FM to FM-AM and that's supposed to make the case, that the only thing which will save AM is IBOC? Pardon me, but B-F-D. Neither this anecdote nor all the pedantic Arbitron and BIA number-spinning anyone can concoct will obscure the obvious truth: that if anything is on life support with no prospects but certain death the instant the ventilator is switched off, it's IBOC, not AM radio."

"Hello? The entire AM IBOC universe consists of 241 US AM stations, all of which are owned by iBiquity investors with the exception of about two dozen, and only a third of which are operating HD at night - that's less than TWO PERCENT of AM stations on the air. The implementation trend is gradually downward. There is NO growth in HD-AM on the broadcasting side. Accounts of unacceptable adjacent channel skywave interference continue to accumulate. iBiquity has thrown up its hands about the Citadel, Cox and CCU problems, saying there will be no further development of HD-AM beyond the current state of the art. When it comes to HD-AM, it is what it is, and that's the unsatisfying end of the story. NOBODY is buying HD radios which continue to dwindle in availability. Receiver sales are an embarassing fraction of the most guarded projections and reportedly most of those units have been returned as defective. iBiquity had to bribe most receiver manufacturers to display ANY HD products at the most recent CES. To this day I have never had a single listener or advertiser comment or question about HD Radio. I do not know anyone who owns or listens to an HD Radio, nor does anyone in my wide circle of friends, relatives, associates or clients own an HD Radio - even the CE of a local major group with several HD-operating outlets doesn't own an HD Radio! In fact, I have met nobody outside the industry who even knows (or cares) what HD Radio is. And this is the business I've been in for almost 41 years!"

"If indeed, AM's only hope is to lure people to buy $200 cheesy HD boxes and camp out on the ground screens of 50kw stations to listen to the same progamming as the analog channel, in sparklingly artifact-cobbled fake AM stereo, the future of the band appears bleak. It would be depressing if I didn't know better, as do many others."

"My station is having another record year - and in analog, go figure. Two good friends of mine, former Entercom executives, have bought and resuscitated two small market AMs and are having a ball and making money, doing what all of us have done throughout happier days in our careers - serving an audience and advertisers with local radio service."

"I am struck by the contemptuous gloom with which IBOC supporters view not only AM radio, but radio in general. They continually preach Kahoutek-style imminent demise and strain mightily to force the defective IBOC-AM concept on a marketplace which couldn't care less. All the stubborn pro-IBOC blogging in the world will not get the HD-AM cadaver to respond to just one more application of the AED paddles."

"Given the choices for music consumers and the incredible failure of corporate radio to respond meaningfully to current trends, I think that - far from being the near-term casualty - AM radio may well be the last man standing in broadcasting as music distribution choices continue their proliferation."

"We"? Don't include me because I long ago opted out of the system.
Opting instead for simple living as opposed to the destructive crass consumerism the corporate oligarchy jams down the masses throats 24/7.

But your larger point is well taken and on the mark.
Lenin said "Capitalists will sell us the rope with which we will hang them." One can't even use that line anymore because the communists are now selling the rope.

They want to create chaos then offer strict measures as a cure. We are

Are there any citizens of China reading and participating in this group? If so, my question to you is; when is your nation going to begin acting like a responsible member of the civilized world? All countries have a need to improve but really, China is a nation and government that:

Has killed 1.2 million Tibetans, including 266,000 tortured to death. See http://www.buyhard.fsnet.co.uk...rtibet.htm http://www.faluninfo.net/

Regularly "harvests" organs from people -- killing them in the process, just like in The Island. The difference is that in China, the killed spare parts people aren't clones, they're political and religious prisoners, including members of the peaceful Falun Gong sect that China persecutes with fascist ferocity. See http://calsun.canoe.ca/News/Co...58307.html

Has no problem exporting poison foods (pet and human), toys, unsafe and dangerous products to other countries. See http://www.who-sucks.com/busin...r-timeline

Has no laws against animal cruelty. See http://www.buyhard.fsnet.co.uk...ruelty.htm

Sponsors the barbaric Animal Olympic Games. See http://www.dailymail.co.uk/pag...ge_id=1770

Has millions of dogs and cats bludgeoned, hanged, bled to death and strangled with wire nooses so that their fur can be turned into trim and trinkets. China now exports more fur than any other nation in the world and Chinese fur is often deliberately mislabeled as fur from other species. See http://www.huffingtonpost.com/...27799.html

http://news.bbc.co.uk/nolavcon...472336.stm (very disturbing secret video)

Leads the world in dog eating and believes the more the animal suffers the better it tastes (no kidding). See http://one.revver.com/watch/134541

Continues to obliterate the environment by routinely poisoning the air and rivers. See http://www.nytimes.com/2007/08...china.html http://vn.vladnews.ru/Arch/200...pd26_1.HTM

Has a thriving market for bear paws, frogs and animal penises which they believe are aphrodisiacs (yeah just what the world needs - more Chinese, 1.2 billion "miracles" aren't enough). Bear farming in which bears are kept in cages and their gall bladder bile removed thrives. An extremely cruel practice. See http://www.animalsasia.org/

Sir Paul McCartney says he will never perform in China after watching a secretly taped film by the Swiss Animal Protection of animals being abused and killed for their fur. See http://www.care2.com/c2c/share/detail/142552

The list of Chinese atrocities against humanity, animals and the environment is much longer but this will suffice for now.

I tried to email your Ambassador to the United States Zhou Wenzhong and voice my disgust but the email was disabled (gosh I wonder why?).

I don't work for them and I'm not buying them so naturally they are not looking for my approval so why would i be upset.

I want to borrow some money from you to fabricate a new chip design. I

I have a subscription now but it is the March issue. I also can't save it as it is a flash document that is saved in the browser cashe that I dump every time I shut it down. You can't save it as a separate document like a pdf. Big mistake on their part to force people that want to go back and read it again to have to keep their browser cashe.

Mohawk,

I did a Search of the Message Text* and it showed that it did not include the words : SWL, Present, Radio and Shortwave.
* China and Chinese YES -but- Those Words No.

So why not at least be Honest to the Readers and use a Subject-Line that reflects what you are acutally Posting about : (OT) for Off-Topic -and- "Anti-China Rant" which is what you are in-fact writing {Ranting} about.

fwiw - i am in 'basic' agreement with the body of the post
-but- not the subject-line ~ RHF
-ps- TIP - Try writing your "See" Link/URL Lines :
See - http://www.faluninfo.net/
[With a Space Dash Space " - "]
So that Google does not compress them to :

OK - Let me 'clue' you into the "Terces Nalp" by the US Federal Government {Translation - Secret Plan} :

1 - Expand the new FM "HD" Radio Band down to 76 MHz.
http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/FM_broadcasting

2 - Sell-Off the old Analog AM/MW Radio Band.
http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/AM_broadcasting

The-Bottom-Line : Within 10 Years after the Sell-Off of the old Analog AM/MW Radio Band there will be 5,000 to 25,000 Pirate AM/MW Radio Stations broadcasting LIVE on the old Analog AM/MW Radio Band.

Speaking of Art Bell... AFN today is running Art Bell: Somewhere in Time

"Digital Audio Broadcasting Systems and Their Impact on the Terrestrial Radio Broadcast Service"

15. We will not establish a deadline for radio stations to convert to digital broadcasting. Stations may decide if, and when, they will provide digital service to the public. Several reasons support this decision. First, unlike television licensees, radio stations are under no statutory mandate to convert to a digital format. Second, a hard deadline is unnecessary given that DAB uses an in-band technology that does not require the allocation of additional spectrum. Thus, the spectrum reclamation needs that exist for DTV do not exist here.
Moreover, there is no evidence in the record that marketplace forces cannot propel the DAB conversion forward, and effective markets tend to provide better solutions than regulatory schemes.

16. iBiquity argues that in the early stages of the transition, the Commission should favor and protect existing analog signals. It states that this could be accomplished by limiting the power level and bandwidth occupancy of the digital carriers in the hybrid mode. At some point in the future, when the Commission determines there is sufficient market penetration of digital receivers, iBiquity asserts that the public interest will be best served by reversing this presumption to favor digital operations. At that time, broadcasters will no longer need to protect analog operations by limiting the digital signal and stations should have the option to implement all-digital broadcasts. We decline to adopt iBiquity's presumption policy because it is too early in the DAB conversion process for us to consider such a mechanism. We find that such a policy, if adopted now, may have unknown and unintended consequences for a new technology that has yet to be accepted by the public or widely adopted by the broadcast industry.

Thank You - For putting the "HD Radio" at the start of the Subject-Line. :o)

-ps- IBOC : HD Radio On eBay, Starting Price: 99 Cents! would have been better -but- at least the Readers know that this Post is about "HD Radio" ;-} and "IBOC" cause after all your are "IBOCcrock" and that in and of itself says a lot to the discerning Reader.

eBAY Starting Prices :

One of the Marketing Strategies on eBay is the Starting Price of the Item being Listed; and that also determines the Cost of the Listing to the eBay Seller. So the Starting Price says less about the Value of the Item and More about the Knowledge of the eBay Seller about the eBay
"Opening Bid" {Starting} Pricing scheme.

Presently on eBay there are 171 Items listed for :
"HD" + "Radio" with a few starting at 1¢ and 99¢
http://cgi.ebay.com/_W0QQitemZ120228606725

One of the 99¢ Starting Price Items on eBay is the Visteon HDZ300 HD Radio Component Car Tuner Kit which 'on-average' Bids-Out at around $28 + $12 S&H for an In-Dash AM/FM "HD" Radio. {Must-be-Junk}

On the High-End there is an "HD" Radio listed with a Buy-It-Now Price of $925.00.

IBOCcrock,

What Ever Congress and the FCC Giveth : Congress and the FCC can Taketh Away [.]

15. Translation - If the Public rapidly accepts "HD" Radio :
Then No Dead-Line is Required -however- If the Public
Does Not : A Dead-Line Will Be Established.

16. Translation - There will be both an Orderly :
* Phase-In {Powering-Up} of Digital Mode of AM/FM Radio Broadcasting
- - - and - - -
* Phase-Out {Powering-Down} of the Analog Mode of AM/FM Radio Broadcasting

The newer SRIII's seem to be badged 'RCA' rather than 'GE'. If one doesn't mind not having the 1600-1700 segment then I'd advise looking for a nice SRII.

Listen up iBiquity. I know how to get HD Radio sales up. Combo-units! You know - HD Radio-toaster combos, HD Radio-microwave combos, HD Radio-piggybank combos. The list is endless. Trust me on this. This is gonna work.

This way you'd have REAL sales numbers and can justify the $400 million already spent!

Struble, notify the investors and get your technical staff on this right away cause it's gonna work.

JR and Bernie. Start with the new packaging design and notify Myer-Emco....

I don't know about ghosts, but there maybe other factors to consider. Sailors aren't nearly as superstitious as they were years ago, because they are more educated today. However when things maybe going badly, their psyche could be negatively influenced. If you are the unfortunate sailor at sea in an extremely challenging situation, knowing that your ship is made of steel from a building that was repeatedly attacked by and finally destroyed by terrorists, your mind may subconsciously be telling you that this is history repeating itself and you are doomed.

If this steel would have be used for a large span bridge and was advertised as such to the public, I would also predict that any catastrophes or accidents incurred on that bridge would be eventually be associated with the steel's origin. It could add to drivers' anxiety and perhaps even cause more accidents.

It would have been better just to distribute the steel throughout the country, or better yet, sell it to the Arabs for one of their own skyscrapers. Perhaps then, if their building collapsed due to an earth quake or other natural disaster, it would be a fitting end to this horrible chapter in history.

My 2 cents.

Does the AFN have any shortwave frequencies that can be heard in USA/CDA?
I did a quick Google search and only found AM and FM stations in foreign countries where US soldiers are serving.

Yes, there is some excellent information out there. Isn't there a Yahoo group too?

The point I was making was that "The only test for whether it is good or not test is to plug it in and listen." You can't tell in advance what the problems might be by simply looking at the radio.

Tried that already and got an error. I'm in Canada. I tried a CIP-C IP proxy to disguise my location -- that works when I listen to some US radio stations online that are restricted to US IP addresses. But that didn't work for this link. I could try again later on. Thanks

Hi,
I have a Kenwood R-5000 and I have a long wire antenna. There are two screw terminals in the back of the receiver for a wire antenna.
One screw is labeled: "50 (ohms)" the other screw is labeled "500 ohms" which is the proper lead for a wire antenna?
Thank you,
Mike McM.

"Finally some hard numbers on HD radio sales."

I hope that was a cynical comment, KB! I'm sorry to disrupt Mr. Struble's joyride in the sky - not that a mere 330,000 new HD radios are worthy of celebration or even a Junior Achievement sales award - but iBiquity is back to its all-to-typical truth-stretching. The amusing little secret from WITHIN the consumer electronics business is: The HD receiver population grew by well-under HALF what he claimed [about 130,000]. So how does one construe that REALITY to juxtapose Mr. Struble's "lap-dance" at a broadcast event? Well... We all know, there are 200,000 folks out thar' in Raydeeo-Land who purchased an HD radio and didn't even know it - now I'M being cynical, KB

Oh, I can hear it now... Cries of "foul", the lunatic fringe, and fond memories of Manasota Key! Before The Three Stooges grab the other half-dozen orange-clad pom-pom guys who promote HD at any cost here and scream "prove it", I'll sensibly turn the tables and remind you that it is more incumbent upon Mr. Struble to provide credible references in regards to sales claims--and HE HASN'T! I gain nothing by violating my employer's TOS in regards to public discussion by presenting data destined for dismissal by those here who remain in denial regardless!

Let's just consider the HD Radio resume for 2007...

--By year-end, there were about a HALF-DOZEN HD-capable receivers with ANY notoriety and loosely-committed marketing efforts in broad-based retail orbit [one model from Sony; TWO (whoopee) from Sangean; a mobile unit from JVC; a boom-box wannabe (that really ISN'T since it holds no batteries) from Radiosophy; The $600 Polk (last mass-market sighting reported on that notorious shopping channel that managed to move a mere 200 HD radios); and least I forget--the "impressive" Insignia all-in-one credenza music system available at only ONE retail chain. No doubt, the cadre of HD enthusiasts here will quickly reply with a long and head-turning list of additional offerings - least they recall my qualification of a viable marketing effort and general retail availability... Most others remain virtual vapor-ware or are clad in such marketing obscurity that anyone residing outside radio industry geekdom has no idea of their presence.

--The original "HD Alpha"--the BA Receptor passed into "HD Heaven [or...]", and the "Beta" model is naught. Boston Acoustics maintains HD Radio on "permanent suspension" [that's a characterization from WITHIN the BA building]... The same scenario awaited the first "common man's HD" at RadioShack... Despite a web reference, the HD Accurian is history [no new orders have been placed for it], and remaining stock has made its way to the knee-level close-out shelf a few feet from a store's rear "private" door where it sets UNCONNECTED alongside other "stray" items.

--Several CEMs once-devoted to HD-by-2007 have declared their semi-permanent disinterest. Tivoli Audio's Tom DeVesto is on the record: "Terrestrial radio stations have to offer different content; and costs have to come down, before the technology will fly in the market. HD Radio adds cost with minimal return. Today's FM has higher fidelity than HD Radio, [citing HD Radio's MP3 quality] HD Radio won't sound better than a high-quality analog FM radio." Yamaha, once "onboard", has quarantined HD Radio to ONLY its all-technology esoteric $5800 surround-sound AV receiver.

--Lastly, let us not forget HD Radio's opportunity to swing at "the golden pitch" on the QVC Network last Fall... ALL of us remember the hoopla... ALL of us remember the paltry 200 radios that sold [over half RETURNED]... So does QVC! It was THE WORST performing half-hour in that operation's history. Needless-to-say, HD hasn't been invited back.

To the "sensible" here at R-I--ones not living a delusion or suffering a case of corporate radio denial... IF sale of HD-capable units had increased by 700-percent, do you really believe we would have witnessed what I described in the previous three scenerios?

P.S. Sorry George... I tried to maintain my "strength" and adhere to the "30-day moratorium"... I just couldn't let this one pass. Now, I'll go back to my corner and try to be a good boy

http://www.radio-info.com/smf/index.php/topic,91615.msg701325.html#msg701325

Do we subtract "trade" sales, returns, and giveaways to used car dealerships and radio stations - perhaps so. Wow, a whopping 130,000. Struble claimed 330,000 - fucking lier.

Well, we now know ka2evc is Struble's Ebay name. He was high bidder and bought his radio back. I'll bet JR listed it and Struble bought it. This must be iBiquity's new sales strategy. Cool. I wonder how many times this radio has been returned?

Those POS buildings were a collapse waiting to happen. No traditional framework; Mohammad Atta studied architecture.

Theoretically the 500 Ohm is for wire antennas. Some radios have better static protection on one or the other RF input, so that may be a factor as well.

Here's the real question? Can old analog radio survive in a world where a numerous of digital platforms provide niche programming? Will an 18 year old person tolerate the same 300 songs over and over, when they can discover exactly what they want via the Internet, ipods, cell phones and wimax. The answer is no! Radio's future HD provides better sound quality but is based on an old outdated model of analog radio. Will boomers who grew up with radio still listen? Yes! Will people who grew up with technology (radio's future) listen radio as we know it today? no! Do you still drive a model t, listen to 45's or videos on your watch beta max player.. no.. Things change and so will radio..and the current radio models (am's fm's) are unable to adapt to the future. And advertisers will want more accountability.. that radio today cannot provide.. Radio's last hope people who listen in the car.. is now being invaded by the internet.. yes folks wireless internet in your car.

Mike McM,

On the Kenwood R-5000 Receiver that is the Antenna # 2 Terminal Connections :
http://www.universal-radio.com/catalog/commrxvr/r5000io.jpg
Red 500 Ohms Antenna on the Left
Black [GRN] in the Center for Ground
Red 50 Ohms Antenna on the Right

TIP - Make sure that you Select the [ANT 2] Button on the Front of the Radio to use ANT 2 {Antenna # 2} on the Rear.
http://www.universal-radio.com/catalog/commrxvr/r5000cs.html

First I would recommend that you 'connect' a Ground Wire to the Kenwood R-5000 Receiver's Black [GRN] Ground Terminal before you connect any Wire Antenna to the Radio.

The try connecting the 'Long Wire' Antenna first to the Red 500 Ohms Antenna Terminal -and- Then to the Red 500
Ohms Antenna Terminal.

Ensure that you Try this 'Long Wire' Antenna across the AM /
Medium Wave and Shortwave Bands from 500 kHz to 30 MHz Recording your Reception and Signal Levels for each Band.

* Most of the Time you will find that a 'Long Wire' Antenna gives the best performance when connected to the Red 500 Ohms Antenna Terminal with a Ground connected to the GRN Terminal.
* -But- You may find that for your Radio and 'Long Wire' Antenna you get the best performance when connected to the Red 50 Ohms Antenna Terminal with a Ground connected to the GRN Terminal.
-note- You will not know until you try both Red Terminals.
* * Or that on some Shortwave Radio Bands the 500 Ohm

Terminal -or- the 50 Ohm Terminal works better - who knows.

BACK OF THE RADIO MATCHING TRANSFROMER : Build a simple Back-of-the-Radio Matching Transformer using an old 3~6 Inch Ferrite Rod from an AM/FM Radio.
* Ferrite Rod that is 3 to 6 Inches long.
* 30 Turns of Red #24 Stranded Hook-Up Wire wrapped tightly and evenly and centered on the Ferrite Rod.
* 10 Turns of Black #24 Stranded Hook-Up Wire wrapped tightly and evenly and centered over the Red Wire.

Back-of-the-Radio 9:1 Matching Transformer
3~6 Inch Ferrite Rod from an old Pocket AM/FM Radio
----------////////////////////////////---------- Red Wire
----------/--/--/--/--/--/--/--/--/----------- Black Wire

Connect the Black Wires : One to the Red 50 Ohm Terminal and the 'other' to Black [GRN] Terminal.
Connect the Red Wires : One to the 'Long Wire' Antenna and the 'other' to Ground Wire.

The Plus - Using a Back-of-the-Radio Matching Transformer with a 'Long Wire' Antenna and Ground usually results in more consistant Signal Levels across the Shortwave Bands and reduced Noise Levels too.

The same can be said of Technological Change : Technology

True Generational Change usually occurs over a Period

237. 1000 foot longwire antenna's

Newsgroup: rec.radio.shortwave

From: plimmer@telkomsa.net
Message-ID: <ffe2e672-9551-47dd-94f0-159cd44e9abd@y77g2000hsy.googlegroups.com>
Source record: 138649

dxAce raised the point that he would prefer to upgrade to a 1000 foot antenna rather than upgrade to a better radio. This is a bit like which came first? the chicken or the egg? I have had extensive experience of using 1000ft longwires or beverage antenna's on my DXpeditions over the years and indeed they do pull in the signals something awesome. But they also pull in more interfering stations that want to blot out your faint DX target, and also whatever QRM/RFI noise is floating around, they pull more of that in too.

So at the end of the day it still means it is better to DX with a top end radio that suppresses and minimises the offending signals and QRM that are interfering with your faint DX target.

Over the years I gradually upgraded my radio's to what I thought was the ultimate, a Drake R8B. I was quite satisfied with that until I was loaned a Rohde & Schwarz. Although the R & S did not have any more bells and whistles than my Drake, it was so clearly superior to my R8B that from then on I hankered after a better radio. The R&S just pulled in faint stations that did not even register on the R8B and then was also better able to resolve to audibility stations that were interfered with much better than the R8B.

So I watched developments and then my good friend Guy pointed me towards the Icom IC-756PROIII, which I later acquired. This radio was indeed better than my R8B, see:
http://www.dxing.info/equipment/icom_ic756_plimmer.dx
So the 756Pro3 has really proved itself in the field, culminating in the catch of a lifetime: 1410 Khz, CFUN, Vancouver BC, Canada, some 14,000

away from the Seefontein DX site. Whether or not I would have got this catch on my old R8B is a moot point - I don't think so as it was extremely faint and on the border of audibility, and my DX mates didn't get it either.
So I am happy that the 756Pro3 paid for itself and that is why I am now upgrading to the new Icom IC-7700 which should be here in April. If I get only one more rare catch I will be satisfied that the 7700 has been a worthwhile investment.

But to keep things in perspective, I think the things that are important to good DX reception are, in order of importance:
1st.] A decent antenna, the best you can afford or rig up.
2nd.] Location. Most of us live in the city or suburbs and are either in condo's or on limited size plots, so our options are limited. That is why serious DXer's go to a lot of trouble and expense to find the "ideal" location. When you find a decent place, the results are VERY rewarding.
DX
3rd.] The radio. again, get the best you can afford. The results just get better and better.

I would liken our hobby to any sport. If you take golf and Tiger Woods for example. He has only the latest and most expensive cutting edge equipment.
If he gets the latest $3000 putter and it allows him that extra inch nearer the hole, he is satisfied. So it is with radio gear and antenna's.

Have fun and good DX

No, Myer-Emco was not bought out- I ought to know- dont you think?

240. Matching Coax Impedance: To Receiver or To Antenna ?

Hello,

Have a Scantenna antenna (receive only) in attic.
It came with 75 ohm RG 6 coax, so presumably the output has a 75 ohm impedance.
How this varies with freq. I have no idea.

Have a new scanner that says to use 50 ohm coax.

From old posts, the consensus seems to be that it doesn't matter if you use 50 or 75 ohm coax for a run that I have of about 50 feet.

Do you folks agree with this ?

From a somewhat more rigorous and theoretical view, should the coax, even it hardly matters, be matched to the antenna output impedance, or the input impedance of the scanner ? Why ? (again, receive only)

Any thoughts on this would be most appreciated.

Thanks,
Bob

That would be longpath then, pretty good.

Oops! Sorry = error!!!
That should read 10,000 miles/16,000 km's, so it is shortpath on a darkness run. The path lies over the Atlantic and enters Canada near St. John's and passes near Quebec then over the Prairies, past Calgary, over the Rockies to Vancouver.

The mismatch is insignificant. About 1.3 dB of loss or something.

It's been my experience with the Wellbrook ALA100 that more is more. I have found increasing the length of a long wire to have diminishing returns.

This would be a question for Andy Ikin at Wellbrook, but I believe the ALA100 is gaining aperture based on the area of the loop. Making a long wire longer should be a linear improvement, not a square power. In the case of the ALA100, you would be increasing the length up to the point where the loop is not longer considered small. For a long wire, is their any improvement after reaching half a wavelength?

I find it hard to believe I could improve over my AR7030 reception, outside of some fancy external synch scheme.

Regarding R&S, generally "pro" receivers assume you have a preamp by the antenna. I find it hard to believe out of the box it is more sensitive than commercial gear that doesn't presume a preamp will be used.

All G.E.Superadios are not created equally.I own a G.E.Superadio and the radio does not say Superadio anywhere on the radio, Model No 7-2880B
I bought the radio at a store, brand spanking new.
From some thingys I have read before, the G.E.Superadios after the first models are not as good as the radios that preceded them.

I own a little old el cheapo (I think it was manufactured in the 1970s) made in the Phillipines shirt pocket AM radio (it runs on a nine volt battery.I bought the radio for one dollar at a Goodwill store a few years ago) which is really amazing at DXing.Although because of the tuning situation, it is hard to fine tune between AM stations.

It would help if you asked the question in a more intelligent manner.
For instance, kidding about what in particular?

If it is the use of preamps with high end gear, this is obvious. Just look at the high end icom gear. It is no where near as sensitive as a say a HT. But you design a HT to have a small antenna, while your R8600 will have larger iron attached. Also historically, preamps have become quieter as technology improves. So with pro gear, you upgrade the preamp and still keep the radio. The AR7030 is designed so that you can turn the internal preamp off. This is not for dynamic range consideration since the radio already has a wide dynamic range.
Rather, it is to allow for low noise preamps, multicouplers, etc.

You are welcome. Glad to be of service.

I have the highly rated Edek "Torus-Tuner" 16" Portable Shortwave Loop Antenna, with an MFJ Model 1020-A Active Antenna Amplifier and Power Supply for sale.

Designed and built by K3FDY for shortwave listening from approximately 3 to 30 Megahertz, (the HF shortwave bands), the "Torus-Tuner" Portable Shortwave Loop Antenna received excellent reviews on eHam.net

Features of this tunable direct connection HF loop antenna include:

Portable/Indoor 16" diameter Loop (Small physical size)
Tunable, 3 - 30 Mhz (Covers all popular shortwave bands)
Very Solidly Constructed Solid Wood Base
Includes the Connecting Cable with Plugs Significant Gain over other loop antennas
Excellent ability to null and reject noise
Ideal for those who can't put up an outdoor antenna

I'm selling this "Torus-Tuner" loop antenna with an MFJ Model 1020-A Active Antenna Amplifier. This combination makes an excellent indoor or portable shortwave receiving antenna.

Will sell this complete portable loop receiving antenna setup, with a 110 Volt A/C to 12 VDC Power Supply ("wall-wart"), for a USPS
Postal Money Order for $ 65.00 plus the actual shipping charges (Cont'l U.S. only)

If you're interested, I can send you the URL's for further information about the Edek "Torus-Tuner" loop antenna, and further information about using Loop Antennas for Shortwave Radio Reception.

Tnx & 73,

Last of VOA's Wartime Transmitting Stations Goes Dark

How International Broadcasting Found Its Way to Delano

by James E. O'Neal, 3.01.2008

(James E. O'Neal is the Technology Editor for TV Technology magazine and a Radio World contributor.)

(This is the full-length version of an article that appeared in briefer form in the print edition of Radio World).

The Voice of America's Delano shortwave transmitting station is difficult to ignore. Even though it's set back nearly two miles from California's Route 99, the massive metal antenna structures rising from the almond groves and citrus orchards can't help but command the attention of motorists. The sheer size of the installation makes it appear intriguingly close to the highway, yet few motorists ever stop to investigate. After the sun sets, the station begs attention with the bluish-white pulsing of strobe lights and red beacons, too numerous to even begin counting from a moving car.

If locals in the nearby town of Delano are asked about the steel appurtenances and the lights, most answer that it's some sort of government facility. Perhaps there's a little secrecy involved ï¿½ some kind of a big radio station maybe, or something to do with radar, or a cold war left-over.

Should an extra-curious motorist decide to exit the main highway and meander along the series of right-angled section-line byways leading to 11015 Melcher Road, he or she can't help but be impressed by the bulk of the buff-colored building and the acres of antennas spreading out around it. Most would-be visitors get no closer than the station's mail box. The operation is fenced and gated, with special permission needed to enter.

Few of those living in Delano have ever been past that gate, and as with most government facilities, thereï¿½s something of a mystery about what goes on inside the compound, which occupies almost a square mile of the San Joaquin Valley.

The main structure was large at its inception and has grown over the years, standing now at some 26,000 square feet. Close by are a cluster of smaller outbuildings interspersed with large satellite dishes. Stretching far behind these masonry structures are the acres and acres of large antennas ï¿½ immense Sterba curtain arrays and the more conventional rhombics, all connected to the building by a switching bay and open wire feeders.

No one in Delano takes much notice of the station. It's been there, just west of the downtown area, longer than most people can remember. The buildings and antennas are like the highways and railroad tracks that punctuate and define Delano ï¿½ they're just there and they've always been there.

In the fall of 2007, the ebb and flow of daily patterns around the station changed rather abruptly.

For the first time in nearly 63 years, the station is now strangely quiet. Save for an occasional lizard or cotton tail, the parking lot is vacant. There's no roar from massive cooling blowers, no amplified voices in the control room booming in from Washington, no "dawn patrol" antenna and feeder inspections, no morning runs into town for coffee, rolls or breakfast burritos by station employees. There will be no more invisible thunderbolts generated by the station to slam into the ionosphere and rain down on the other side of the world. Instead of the megawatts they were designed for, the heavy feeders connecting the facility to the Southern California Edison grid now only carry a small trickle of electricity ï¿½ just enough to keep the lights on.

After 23,000 days of continuous transmissions, the station is empty and silent. This past July, its management authority, the Broadcasting Board of Governors, made the decision to shut it down permanently at the end of October.

Among the VOA's international broadcasting assets, Delano is unique. It's the last of three such stations hastily constructed under extreme wartime restrictions and shortages for the express purpose of providing permanent shortwave broadcasting capability for the Office of War Information, the VOA's precursor organization.

Before the gigantic transmitters are removed for service elsewhere, or the tons and tons of steel antennas are hauled away as just so much scrap metal, it seems appropriate to pay tribute to the station's architects and the generations of those worked there by offering up a little history and a few facts about the facility.

For starters the Delano Transmitting Station wasn't even supposed to be located there. It was built under the watchful eye of an engineer who had earlier been occupied by building bigger and bigger radio transmitters for a quack medical doctor. Even though it was constructed for government purposes, a private entity, CBS (the Columbia Broadcasting System at the time) was solely responsible for building the station and keeping it running, even down to obtaining call signs that were representative of that network.

During its first year of operation, the Delano station unknowingly found its way into the midst of the super-secret project to build the world's first atomic bomb.

The stated purpose of Delano was for transmitting wartime news from America to the Pacific Ocean nations during World War II. Afterwards, it lived on, performing a similar mission for the duration of the Cold War and beyond.

HOW IT ALL BEGAN

The original wartime building was expanded in the mid-1960s to accommodate three Collins 250 kW transmitters.

To get a better grasp on Delano's unique history, we have to go back to the first days after America's entry into the Second World War.

At the time of the attack on Pearl Harbor, the United States government had no international broadcasting facilities, or any real interest in reaching out to the world by radio. t had been reasoned that this was something best left to the commercial broadcasting entities. In sharp contrast were the scores of HF transmitters that Hitler and Hirohito had been keeping busy, spreading their version of the facts to anyone within reach of a shortwave set.

Pearl Harbor changed the U.S. perspective on many fronts, and in early 1942 the international broadcasting imbalance began to change with the establishment of the Office of War Information (OWI) and construction of the first radio studios expressly for government use.

To get the message out, these studios were linked by AT&T Long Lines to shortwave transmitters owned by the likes of General Electric, Westinghouse, RCA, Crosley and virtually anyone else with an HF transmitter and a commercial shortwave broadcasting license.

However, the founding fathers of this first generation of U.S. international broadcasting knew that this was not good enough. Permanent transmitting facilities would have to be constructed solely for the government's purpose, and there would have to be more powerful transmitters than those that could be rented or leased.

R.J. Rockwell, director of broadcasting engineering for the Crosley Corporation, recalled the meeting that spearheaded that effort.

"In a drastic effort to remedy the situation, the Board of War Communications called a council of war in Washington. All interested parties were invited ï¿½ international licensees, equipment manufacturers, representatives of the Federal Communications Commission, Office of War Information, Office of Inter-American Affairs (CIAA), the Department of State, and others ï¿½ to determine how soon existing facilities could be augmented and new facilities added, and what powers could be attained. As a result of this and subsequent meetings, it was decided that, within one year, a total of 32 transmitters could be in operation and at the disposal of OWI and CIAA."

ENGINEERING FOR THE GOAT GLAND MAN

The organization searched for an engineering presence to head up this massive and very demanding effort ï¿½ someone who understood high power transmitters and radio broadcasting. That quest ended with the eventual appointment of one James Oliver Weldon to the position of the OWI's Chief of Communication Facilities Bureau.

Weldon's credentials were unique, as at that time there were only a handful of engineers with experience in high power transmitters and antennas, and most of these were fully occupied with critical wartime jobs and defense-related research.

Weldon's knowledge of high power operations, however, had not come from such conventional and orthodox directions as say, the 500 kW WLW station in Cincinnati or RCA's vast Long Island international communications facility.

Weldon was 33 years old then and had been plucked from his work at the Federal Telephone and Radio Corporation in designing several 50 kW New York City stations. Just a few years before, Weldon's small consulting firm located in Del Rio, Texas had been kept busy catering to the demands of the notorious Doctor John Romulus Brinkley ï¿½ aka "The Goat Gland Man," (or more simply "Doctor") ï¿½ for a progressively louder and more potent radio station.

In a world before Viagra, Brinkley catered to the victims of impotence, offering male rejuvenation through the surgical implantation of testicular tissue taken from a particular breed of goat.

At a time when many in this country were facing starvation due to the Great Depression, this unique type of quackery made Brinkley a multimillionaire. His success in locating new patients was greatly enhanced by the power of radio.

Weldon first consulted for Brinkley in connection with the Doctor's first radio enterprise, a 1 kW station located in Milford, Kan. However Brinkley's rather questionable medical practices and battles with authorities eventually resulted in the loss of this station license and prompted a relocation of the Doctor's clinic southward to Del Rio. While exhausting his appeals, Brinkley had been busy cutting a deal with high Mexican officials, and secured permission to construct a new radio transmitter just across the Rio Grande, and out of the reach of the U.S. government. Weldon made the move to Texas too and was tasked with putting the new station on the air, and eventually expanding its power to more than 500,000 watts. Brinkley's XER/XERA became known as "The Sunshine Station Between The Nations" and Weldon made radio engineering history by constructing the first-ever high-power Doherty amplifier and installing an early "flattop" directional antenna to focus the Doctor's RF away from Mexico and into the heartland of America.

What the Doctor did with his station did not really concern Weldon. He loved radio engineering and was a workaholic of the first order, choosing to build stations over listening to them. The experience gained in constructing the giant transmitter in northern Mexico was to prove invaluable in Weldon's new position with the OWI.

Once he made the move to Washington, Weldon's first priority was in creating the needed permanent transmission facilities for the United States government. CBS, NBC and the Crosley Corporation all agreed to take part in this mission, with their respective engineering departments constructing and operating stations to OWI specifications. The government would run interference as necessary to ensure that any roadblocks to the project were removed and that the necessary equipment would be made available during this period of wartime shortages. As part of the arrangement, Crosley would continue to operate that company's existing shortwave station which was co-located with WLW transmitter plant in Mason, Ohio until a new free-standing facility could be built in nearby Bethany. NBC/RCA would assume the task of building a shortwave plant in northern California, and CBS would construct a sister station near Los Angeles.

AN EASY PROJECT?

For the CBS engineering unit in Los Angles, on first appearance, the construction of an OWI shortwave station seemed to be an easy project ï¿½ possibly no more than the purchasing some additional real estate near their existing

KNX transmitter, putting up a few rhombic antennas per Weldon's specifications, along with a building to house some government-provided transmitters, and then staffing the operation with some members of IBEW Local 40. That would be it. After some preliminary east coast meetings in early October of 1943, the project went into high gear.

Lester Bowman, who was based at the CBS Columbia Square operation in Hollywood, drew the card to spearhead the effort to locate property and build the southern California shortwave station. He had been with the CBS for some time, and in 1943 wore the title of Western Division Engineer. Bowman was remembered by his associates as a hard driving and successful manager. He would eventually head up all of CBS's west coast radio and television engineering operations.

During the east coast kickoff meetings, it was established that CBS would work in liaison with the Defense Plant Corporation (DPC), which had been charted by Congress in 1938 in anticipation of the America's entry into war, and served as front end organization for expansion of military-related production. When the war began, it became the DPC's job to facilitate the construction of facilities that were deemed to be in "the public interest."

Bowman and representatives from DPC got the ball rolling on by contacting an L.A. real estate firm specializing in commercial property.

It was not long, however, before the CBS engineering personnel found out that their part of the OWI transmitting station project might not be quite so easy as first imagined.

For starters, Weldon had laid down some very specific criteria for the stations:

* they were to be sited at least three miles from the coast
* there must be no mountain peaks exceeding three degrees above the horizon within line-of-site from the transmitter location
* the real estate parcel for each had to be one mile long in the east-to-west direction and one-half mile in the north-south dimension
* the site would have to accommodate 150-foot high antenna masts (later changed to 170 feet)
* cost for land acquisition could not exceed $400 per acre

50 CYCLE POWER

Not mentioned in Weldon's criteria was additional factor in the location of the station ï¿½ availability of electrical power, and as the southern California OWI team soon realized, not all power is created equal. In anticipation of the construction of the California station, a priority order had been placed for three RCA 50 kW transmitters and a behemoth Federal Telephone and Radio Corporation 200 kW machine (it required one of the RCAs as a dedicated driver stage), and a not inconsequential amount of electricity would be needed for their operation. A concern that was not so obvious was the frequency of the available power source.

It may come as a surprise, but for a time the entire Los Angeles area was supplied with 50 cycle (Hz) power.

Although a move to put the region on 60 Hz power started in the 1930s, pockets of 50 Hz distribution existed for many years thereafter. (Itï¿½s reported that as late as 1949, the power being supplied to Mt. Wilson was 50 cycle and early television transmitter installations there depended on rotary converters for 60 cycle power.)

As the original plans were to locate the southern California OWI shortwave station within the confines of Los Angeles, transmitters had been ordered with 60 cycle power supplies. While 50 cycle power supply components could be retrofitted, wartime shortages would likely have slowed things considerably.

THE OIL BOOM

Another factor put several other prospective sites off limits. This was a direct result of the wartime demand for petroleum products. To supply the needed fuel supplies for the military, drilling rigs and oil wells were springing up all over southern California. By late 1943, property that had at one time been considered worthless in terms of development was now selling and leasing at a premium.

MOVING OUT OF L.A.

As a station site within the environs of Los Angeles seemed more and more of impossibility, Bowman and his team extended their search to include neighboring Orange County. This area was basically farm country then, with little commercial development and a population of less than 150,000. Some potential sites were identified, but before they could be claimed, objections to the planned 170-foot antenna masts were voiced. Even in a region as wide open and sparsely populated as Orange County, military aviation training fields were popping up like weeds.

By the time 1943 drew to a close, Bowman's group had investigated more than 40 sites, with each being rejected for one reason or another.

A LETTER FROM THE UNION

The coming of the new year brought little joy and encouragement for the CBS group. Their project was really no further along than it had been in October. Compounding Bowman's worries was an early January letter from the business manager of the IBEW local representing CBS Columbia Square technicians. As the OWI project shortwave project was not swathed in a lot of wartime secrecy, the union was aware of it and of the ever widening search for a transmitter site. The letter to Bowman warned of some rather dire consequences if the station were to be built outside of greater Los Angeles.

"From its inception, such a project would be cursed by the shortage of skilled labor. Not long ago contractors who had undertaken jobs in these areas (remote from Los Angeles) were offering $2.20 per hour for building and construction tradesman, with a guarantee of all the overtime that they could work. They had much difficulty in manning the jobs.

Once the construction had been completed you would be faced with an even more difficult problem when you attempted to secure engineering personnel. As you know, almost the entire Pacific Coast area is classified by the WNC as a Number One Shortage Area, with broadcast technicians considered a craft in which a critical shortage exists."

The letter went on to warn Bowman that radio stations in the more remote parts of California were experiencing extreme difficulties in attracting and keeping qualified personnel and:

"ï¿½that no man, trained in radio, will desert the metropolitan areas where work can always be had in one of the many war industries, to bury himself in some such out-of-the-way place."

As ground for the CBS OWI transmitter plant was scheduled to have been broken no later than the fall of 1943, concern arose in the networkï¿½s New York headquarters that someone might be called to task over the amount of time that was passing without tangible results. This prompted a letter from CBS's director of radio engineering, William Lodge, instructing Bowman to create a document for the record, should there ever be any questions about the efforts to get the facility constructed.

Bowman complied, producing a five-page single spaced typewritten letter to Lodge. It described all of trials and tribulations befalling Bowman in his search for a suitable piece of real estate. This document, 60-odd years later, makes it much easier to follow the initial twists and turns on the road to getting the Delano station built.

THE SEARCH EXPANDS AGAIN

With any hope of locating the station within commuting distance of Los Angeles gone, Bowman's search moved out further and further. He even investigated ï¿½ without success ï¿½ Mojave Desert acreage near Barstow for a site that met Weldon's criteria. However this didn't pan out either.

After the Mojave trip, proximity to the greater Los Angeles area didn't seem to matter anymore, so the exploration team decided to travel north. Land some distance from Bakersfield was examined, but rejected as too mountainous. Areas closer to that city had already been staked out for oil prospecting.

By now Bowman's team was more than 100 miles from downtown L.A., so what difference could another 25 or 30 miles make?

They continued north past the small towns of Cawelo and McFarland, finally stopping with a surveyor in the small town of Delano on January 27.

The next day, C. R. Jacobs, a CBS staffer working with Bowman, fired off a terse telegram to CBS management in New York.

"SPENT THURSDAY JANUARY 27 IN BAKERSFIELD AREA FOUND PROPERTY APPROXIMATELY FIVE MILES WEST OF DELANO IN VICINITY OF SECTION 13 TOWNSHIP 25 SOUTH RANGE 24 EAST KERN COUNTY WHICH CAN BE HAD AT $50 PER ACRE OR LESS STOP APPROXIMATELY 145 MILES FROM HOLLYWOOD OFFICE STOP DELANO POPULATION 5000 STOP NO OBSTRUCTIONS 360 DEGREES STOP WIRE REACTIONS TODAY SURE INCLUDING WELDONS APPROVAL. AM STARTING ACQUISITION AND WILL ADVISE WITHIN A FEW DAYS IF ANY COMPLICATIONS SHOULD ARISE STOP NBC STARTED CONSTRUCTION JANUARY 27 STOP BEST REGARDS."

C R JACOBS

(The NBC reference is to the parallel project being staged by that network ï¿½ the construction of the OWIï¿½s Northern California shortwave at Dixon.)

Initially, the presence of an emergency landing field some five miles away from the proposed Delano site created strong opposition from the Army and the CAA (Civil Aeronautics Administration). However, Bowman's mind was made up that Delano was going to be the home to the CBS shortwave station.

A special meeting to resolve differences was set up on Feb. 15. Weldon had been briefed on the Army and CAA opposition, and he prepared a telegram to be read at the meeting. It described the necessity for constructing the overdue station and also played on patriotic sympathies.

"THE OFFICE OF WAR INFORMATION AND THE COORDINATOR OF INTERAMERICAN AFFAIRS AND THE ARMED FORCED RADIO SERVICE OF THE ARMY ARE CRITICALLY IN NEED OF ADDITIONAL HIGH POWERED BROADCAST TRANSMITTERS ON THE PACIFIC COAST FOR CONDUCTION (sic) PSYCHOLOGICAL WARFARE IN CONJUNCTION WITH THE MILITARY EFFORT IN THE PACIFIC AND IN THE CASE OF THE ARMED FORCES RADIO SERVICE FOR BROADCASTING PROGRAMS TO THE AMERICAN TROOPS SCATTERED OVER THAT AREA.ï¿½ THE WAR EFFORT IS DEFINITELY CRIPPLED BY THE FACT THAT SUCH FACILITIES ARE NOT IN OPERATION AT THE PRESENT TIMEï¿½.I HOPE THAT THE COMMITTEE WILL CONSIDER THIS PROJECT AS AN IMPORTANT PART OF THE WAR EFFORT AND GIVE DUE CONSIDERATION TO THE NECESSITY OF PROMPT APPROVAL"

J O WELDON CHIEF COMMUNICATION FACILITIIES BUREAU OFFICE OF WAR INFORMATION

After the reading of the telegram, all opposition was dropped and Delano was given a green light.

RECORD CONSTRUCTION

In what seems nothing less than miraculous today, ground was first broken on the station project in May of 1944, and by that November, the first transmitter was delivering current to a 170-foot-high rhombic.

Not long after Delano went on the air, Jack Quinn, a CBS engineer who had previously worked at General Electricï¿½s KGEI shortwave station near San Francisco, was assigned to Delano in the capacity of engineering supervisor.
He remembered the area then as more or less the end of the earth.

"There were no farms, no nothing, just arid desert ï¿½ miles and miles of white alkali soil," he recalled. "It was really worthless real estate. Maybe $60 an acre."

Of course that was before the irrigation canals were built, bringing water from Northern California.

Badlands or not Delano became the first of the three OWI stations to go on the air, beating NBC's efforts at Dixon and those of Crosley at Bethany, Ohio.

Anticipating the day when the station would start operations, CBS, some months before had requested FCC call signs that reflected the network's operating presence. These were KCBA, KCBF and KCBR.

DELANO AND THE BOMB

For reasons unknown today, the use of harmonic filtering in large transmitter output stages 60 or 70 years ago was not commonplace. Quinn, who would remain with the Delano station until 1952, recalled that the early transmitters there were not so equipped.

"The Federal and the RCA transmitters didn't have filters; they just weren't used then."

In less than a year, this absence of harmonic energy trapping was to create problems in the most secret project of the war ï¿½ the Manhattan Project's testing of the world's first atomic bomb at a secret New Mexico desert site, nearly 1,000 miles east of Delano.

That test, conducted in the predawn hours of July 16, 1945, relied on HF radio for communications between various observation posts. This radio communication system had been checked out and was functioning well as the minutes and seconds leading up to mankind's first nuclear blast ticked off. However, at a most inappropriate time (and completely unknown to the station's operators) Delano butted in.

As recorded in one account of the atomic test:

"The final countdown began at 5:10 a.m. with a crashing rendition of the 'Star Spangled Banner.' Just as (Kenneth) Bainbridge (a Manhattan Project scientist) gave the signal to Sam Allison (another Manhattan Project scientist and the countdown announcer) in the control center, radio station KCBA in Delano, California, crossed wave lengths with the Trinity frequency. The station, operated by the Office of War Information, was opening its morning Voice of America broadcast to Latin America. The National Anthem provided stirring accompaniment for Allison as intoned the announcement: 'It is now zero minus twenty minutes.'"

Following the sign-on at Delano, the OWI had scheduled musical programming.

"The Voice of America program now punctuated Allison's countdown with rapturous background music. Ken Greisen, lying next to I.I. Rabi (both bomb scientists) listened dreamily to the waltz from Tchaikovsky's "Serenade for Strings." The violins seemed to rise in crescendo with Allison's excited blurts."

NO VSWR WORRIES

The Federal transmitter at Delano also lacked other niceties taken for granted today. One of these was VSWR indication and a circuit for shutdown should there be a problem in this area.

Large stations with multiple antennas and transmission lines rely on frequent inspections to catch little problems before they can mushroom. Delano was no exception. At Delano, early in the day, before the valley sun beat down too fiercely, an operator would venture outside to make a routine examination of the various antenna elements and feeders.

On one such occasion, the technician spotted a downed transmission line that had apparently failed during the nighttime operating schedule. There had been no alarms in the control room and it was business as usual. However instead of launching words and music from Washington to the world, the Federal 200 kilowatter spent the hours dumping its RF energy directly into the ground. When the downed feeder was being lifted back to its normal position, a large mass of glass was found, the result of the intense heat generated in the transmitter load that the desert sand provided.

Quinn remembers another heating effect provided by the Federal.

"The transmitter was just plain brute force, with unshielded open wire balanced 600 ohm lines," Quinn recollected.

"The tank circuit consisted of two huge parallel three- or four-inch diameter water-cooled tuned lines approximately 15-feet long, with one having a variable shorting bar for tuning. There was a copper hairpin output loop which coupled directly to the transmission line and it went out the window to the switching bay. As a demonstration of how open this arrangement was, when there was arcing, I would go in alongside this output lines ï¿½ maybe six-feet away ï¿½ and have the operators close the interlocked glass door and turn the transmitter on. Almost immediately you could feel both feet heating up. Then the heat would slowly creep up your legs. When it almost reached the groin area you'd flag the operator to shut it down. After power was removed your legs were still hot to the touch for some minutes, before they cooled down to normal!"

(Later transmitters installed at Delano did concern themselves with VSWR and included measuring devices. For those of us who have spent our careers with slightly more modest transmitters and operating powers, it's instructive to run the numbers for reflected power on a good day from one of Delano's 250,000 Watt transmitters.

Assuming a reasonable VSWR of 1:5, or 4 percent reflected power, this is about a 0.18 dB loss, or only some 10,000 Watts arriving back at the transmitter!)

A 'SLIGHTLY ILLEGAL' HAM RIG

Historically, many radio engineers and technicians were licensed as radio amateurs before beginning their professional careers. Such was the case with many of the operators at Delano.

Most of the ham fraternity is content with loading their rigs, generally limited to a few hundred watts, into dipoles, beams or sloppers. However, when there was time for idle talk among hams at Delano it often turned speculative. Just what kind of signal might they deliver to their brethren on the other side of the planet, if only they had a transmitter the likes of the Federal and an antenna with 20 dB or so of gain like the station's giant co-linear curtain array?

One day, the temptation for experimentation proved too strong.

Quinn remembers that occasion well.

"I'll never forget connecting one of those curtains to the 200 KW transmitter, and connecting the station RCA AR88 receiver to another and calling CQ just once," said Quinn. "This was at noon and there was absolutely no propagation to Japan at my home station until 5 p.m. There must have been a thousand JA's calling back with S-9+ signals. Amazing what a good antenna and lots of power will do."

Eventually more modern and better behaved transmitters replaced the start-up Federal and RCAs. The first upgrade, saw two massive "walk-in" General Electric 100 kW machines were installed in wings located to the north and south of the control room.

During the 1960s, three much more modern 250 kW transmitters manufactured by Collins were added to the HF arsenal. This expansion necessitated "blowing out" the front of the building and creating another wing to accommodate this additional 750 kW of HF capacity.

The GEs, along with the Federal and the RCAs were eventually displaced by four much more compact and efficient Brown Boveri 250 kilowatt units.

A PLACE CALLED PIXLEY

During the same decade in which the building was modified for the Collins "autotune" transmitters, Delano received funding and a mandate to expand operations to another campus. This was located some 20 miles away, near the tiny town of Pixley.

The 1962 Cuban Missile Crisis prompted the government to take another look at emergency preparedness and one of the areas examined was connectivity between Washington and Delano. Since its inception, Delano had been linked to VOA studios by AT&T Long Lines copper. Even though the communications giant had its own emergency preparedness plans, it was thought that U.S. VOA stations should have a work-around if, for some reason, AT&T couldn't deliver. Communications satellites were in their infancy then, so the only logical backup linkage was by HF radio. For Delano, the funding provided for the purchase of an isolated tract of land near Pixley. There, a large HF receiving station was constructed. It included numerous rhombic antennas and racks full of Racal "digitally-tuned" shortwave receivers. The Pixley facility was linked to Delano with a single-hop microwave system. Fortunately, the operation never had to be used during the remaining years of The Cold War.

HF BROADCASTING BEGINS TO FADE

In moving with the times, the VOA linked its relay stations via satellite and Delano, in addition to serving as an HF transmitting facility, became a gateway to the Pacific Ocean Region satellites.

This was expanded in the early 1990s by the addition of video capacity in order to push television programming from the Worldnet side of the VOA's parent organization, the United States Information Agency. This involved not only the installation of additional high power amplifiers and video exciters, but also standards conversion equipment needed to turn the 525-line NTSC programming produced in Washington into 625-line PAL required by most of the Pacific Rim countries.

For a time too, the Delano facility was also used to increase the reach of the BBC's worldwide shortwave broadcasting. In a sort of "trade-out" arrangement, BBC programming targeted to the Pacific was transmitted by Delano and, in turn, the BBC transmitted VOA programming to Europe from its HF broadcasting facility in Woofferton, England.

However, times change.

Both the "Beeb" and the VOA have deemphasized program placement via HF radio, relying more and more on retransmission by existing AM and FM broadcasters in countries they wish to reach. The Internet has also come into its own as a conduit for international "broadcasting."

In 1979, the Dixon facility was the first of these pioneer OWI/VOA stations to be silenced. It was initially placed in mothball status, coming back to life for a five year stint in 1983. It was completely decommissioned some years later.

The Bethany, Ohio station was next to go, transmitting its last VOA programming in late 1994.

The clock finally ran out for Delano on the evening of Saturday, October 27 at 8:30 local time. (Measured from the UTC reference, that was 3:30 a.m. the following day ï¿½ October 28).

There was no special observance or program to honor the station's nearly 63 years of continuous broadcasting to the world.

The final transmission, done on 5,890 kHz, was nothing out of the ordinary ï¿½ just a scheduled program in the Thai language.

15. Translation - If the Public rapidly accepts "HD" Radio :
Then No Dead-Line is Required -however- If the Public
Does Not : A Dead-Line Will Be Established.

There is no proof of that - it was tried in the UK, and digital radio still flopped:

"Report: Future Of U.K. Digital Radio May Be Bleak"

"LONDON -- January 30, 2008: A report from Enders Analysis found that digital audio broadcasting, or DAB, is in trouble due to the high cost of transmission and slow revenue growth, U.K. newspaper the Guardian reports."

http://www.radioink.com/HeadlineEntry.asp?hid=140877&pt=todaysnews

If they do, it will be the end of terrestrial radio, if it doesn't go broke first:

"Clear Channel's murky future"

"Sad because eliminating new hires (including sellers), failing to replace those who leave, stopping all investment in the future, and halting all advertising and research is the equivalent of saying that necessity requires us to strangle the goose that lays the golden eggs, even as the goose is up for sale."

http://www.hear2.com/2008/01/clear-channels.html

All major radio stocks are down 90%. Consumers wil lnever buy HD radios, even if mandated. No one buys radios anymore, except for us radio=geeks. AM-HD does not work, so a mandate would make no difference.

16. "We find that such a policy, if adopted now, may have unknown and unintended consequences for a new technology that has yet to be accepted by the public or widely adopted by the broadcast industry."

HD radios will never approach critical mass - the FCC has stated that HD has not been accepted by the public and broadcasters FIRST.

Use coax for connection to the 50 ohm terminal and GND. For coax the outer shield is connected to GND and the coax center wire would be connected to the 50 ohm terminal. Most coax is 50 or 75 ohms.

Single wire antennas are in the hundreds of ohms. You can connect the signal wire antenna directly to the 500 ohm terminal. If you do this though you should connect a ground to the GND terminal. The ground should be a ground for the antenna only. You can connect a wire to this ground terminal to a ground rod out in the yard. This will work well if you are in a low noise area. If you have many RF noise makers in your house then you might want a different connect scheme. Let us know how this works for you and if you have noise problems people in the news group can make more suggestions.

You bring up a good argument but tangled in it are a number of factors that all affect reception.

The chicken and egg question is easy. The antenna is the egg and it comes first. All antennas are not created equal and are designed to achieve certian objectives in reception just like radios. In the extreme the antenna can be highly directional where the desired signal can be specifically enlarged relative to other signals and noise. In the radio it is mainly blocking and bandpass filtering. Both antenna directionality and gain or radio gain, blocking, and selectivity can get you where you want to go to get that DX.

I'm familiar with Rohde & Schwarz signal generators but not their receivers. You don't mention the model number of the receiver but I can speculate on a few things. One would be cost. Chances are the R&S receiver costs 10 to 30 times the Drake. Two would be that the R&S would not have such niceties as sync detection or tone controls.

I don't think going to ham transceivers is the way to go unless you are a ham or are working toward being one. I'm not interested in being a ham and I don't want to buy a transceiver.

DSP can be a good thing but it depends on how it is engineered. I have both kinds of radios and the DSP type appears to have no advantage in AM mode. The DSP radio does appear to work better for SSB. I would expect that for digital modes the DSP would clearly be superior. Here the crucial parameter at play I believe is bandwidth. Designed properly DSP IF and AF filtering is generally much better than analog and so in application where this is more important the DSP radios can perform better. Anyone who has operated a radio with several filters has most likely noticed that as you decrease the bandwidth the receiver noise floor drops improving signal to noise. Since DSP filters can have very steep walls and depth over analog filtering you would expect improved signal to noise and better reception where narrow bandwidths are in play.

There are always performance tradeoffs and you only address what a DX'er might want and certainly not what I would want in a receiver. What I want is good performance and good sound. Many DSP implementations have lousy sound quality with a lot of distortion. Here I noticed that with DSP you can have a signal in the clear without the pops and hiss and yet not be able to understand what is being said. I have listened to tapes of DSP radio reception and noticed that besides not being able to understand many of the words in speech that it was very difficult to listen to the recordings after a while. Even when I had a transcript of what was said and replayed the DSP recordings over again I still could not make out some of the words. I also found it very tiring to listen to DSP sound. I'll take the pops, whistles, and hiss over the DSP distortion anytime.

Here is an observation I have made on DSP sound. Have you ever listed to a coast to coast show with one of those reverse speech guys on? I don't know about other people but sometimes listening to DSP SW recordings was not unlike listening to those reverse speech recordings.

Yes, other signals and noise come from all directions. The antenna would have to be more directional along with increased gain to be more effective.

Yes.

A feed line connected to the end of a half-wave antenna would receive very little at the half-wave frequency. Optimum would be 1/4 wave.

That's a very good radio.

R&S make test equipment and not SW receivers as far as I know. Chances are John used a receiver that is designed to test received signals and is very expensive.

Specifically, a long wire high in the air would not be very directional where a long wire near the ground would have beverage characteristics.

The beverage would have better signal to noise if pointed at the desired signal where the very high wire would not.

Chances are I will be the only person to answer you that it matters.
Everyone else is of the opinion that it doesn't. You will lose received signal power with the mismatch and the argument always revolves around how much the loss is important to your reception.

Since you have the coax use it and if the performance is satisfactory then I would not worry about it. If the performance is not good enough then go buy the right impedance coax and for scanners at higher frequencies the most important factor is loss per foot. You want the lowest loss per foot in the frequency range you want to receive on.

For short wave the loss per foot is not as significant being in the 3 to 30MHz range. Coax loss goes up per foot at higher frequencies.

I think you have the right idea just the wrong combinations.

How about an HD garbage compactor, HD in sink garbage disposal, HD vacuum cleaner makes much more sense.

Bill.

I'm very interested in this antenna; I am new to world band listening and have both a Sony 7600GR and Kaito KA2100. Would this antenna be compatible/work well with either or both of these? If so, I'm pretty sure I'll take it. Is it possible to send me a photo (to: rainguy@comcast.net)? As I said, I'm new to this and would like to see what it looks like.

Thanks.

Doug,

The "Torus-Tuner" is a 16" diameter antenna shaped in a "loop" shape;
it looks like a large "donut", and stands vertically in it's (wooden) base.

To answer your question, yes, it would work well with your shortwave receivers. The output of the MFJ active antenna amplifier is a coaxial output, but it would work just fine if you were to simply connect it right to the whip antenna of either of your receivers.

I'll e-mail you with a few URL's which will give you additional info on this loop antenna specifically, and some general info on loop antennas for receiving applications in general. Then if you should have any other questions, just e-mail me directly.

Thanks & 73,

-Bill

Telemon, I didn't deal in detail about the 1000 ft beverage antenna, because the subject of antenna's is vast and the number of huge technical tomes written on the subject will keep you going for the rest of your life.

I see you have a poor opinion of DSP receivers, so I can only presume you experienced the faults of the early models that only had 16 bit engines. My 756Pro3 has a 24 bit engine with 32 bit processor and I assure you suffers from none of the problems you mention that applied to the earlier offerings like the JRC NRD545D.
I wrote a detailed description of my experiences of the 756Pro3's audio and filter at:
http://www.dxing.info/community/viewtopic.php?t=2404&sid=e7711d6607b7f67e8ff1aab600e79c4f
I assure you the audio on the 756Pro3 is top notch, only thing it lacks is a synch detector.

Rohde & Schwarz did indeed make receivers for HF, the last of them being the EK895, which unfortunately was so expensive that it could only be affordable to professional and government operations. They don't make stand alone receivers anymore, only modular HF units that fit into a more comprehensive monitoring PC run station. The R&S EK receiver I had use of for several months was the analogue model just before the EK895 - it's performance was just awesome. It's outstanding performance was not due to any fancy pre-amps, but rather superb circuitry, high quality components and build, and top notch filters. In performance the only hobby radio that ever came near it in performance was my pals Drake R7A. Both these receivers could resolve DX signals that my R8B couldn't.

Of course it's different tricks for different dicks. What I am looking for in a top end receiver is a complete overkill for the fella that just want's to potter around and get good sound out of AM HF broadcasts.

OHIM (Oh hell it's Monday) enjoy your radio and good listening

Noise is measured in volts per root Hz. To get the noise over a bandwidth, you multiply by the square root of the bandwidth. So using a 10% narrower filter reduces the noise by 4.8%. So narrowing the bandwidth helps, but it is not a cure.

The ALA100 has the advantage of receiving the magnetic portion of the wave, so there is less electrical noise. On MW, you get a figure 8 pattern, and subjectively a rather fat figure 8. The null is plenty sharp, but very narrow.

In antenna analysis, you need to be aware of both gain and aperture. Think of the photographic analogy. Antenna gain is like the focal length of the lens. Aperture is well "doh!" the aperture. The RF field is generally volts per meter. So obviously, more is more if the antenna is receiving more signal and not more noise. To be really accurate here, the noise figure of the amp is also part of the equation. But once you have enough wire in tne air that the noise of the amp is swamped by the signal from the antenna, I'm not sure there is much to gain.

The notion of aperture is more easily seen in VHF on up. That is, two meters seems to go further than 440. Well, if the antenna is the same design, the 440Mhz antenna has less aperture than the 2 meter antenna, even though the gain is the same. For 440Mhz to compete with 2 meters, you would need to go to a colinear with 3 elements.

My guess would be going with multiple loop antennas would be superior to longer longwires. Now here is where you would have to check my math, but the two loops in parallel (summed after the ALA100 amp of course) would have 3db less noise. The signal would be stronger as well, but I think that would be counting the improvement twice. The stronger signal would only be significant if the noise floor of the radio was an issue.

COULD NOT HAVE SAID IT BETTER MYSELF! RELEASE YOU TAX RETURN WHATCHA HIDIN BITCH? MORE $1000 CATTLE FUTURES TURNED INTO $100,000 IN LESS THAN A WEEK? OR IS IT SLICK WILLIES MILLIONS IN PAYOLA FROM THE ARAB SHEIK OF DUBAI?

Hillary Unmasked

By Dick Morris & Eileen McGann

The real Hillary Clinton stood up at the Democratic presidential debate this week: angry, sarcastic, stubborn, secretive, arrogant, mired in the past, victim of the media, and still firmly convinced that she is uniquely entitled to the Democratic Party nomination and the presidency.

That Hillary hasn't really been on display much since the debacle of her disastrous health care plan and the end of Bill Clinton's impeachment trial, when she haughtily flaunted her combative personality.

But make no mistake about it -- that's the Hillary Clinton that we'll see if she somehow manages to steal the Democratic nomination.

She's found her voice. The one that so alienated everyone she came into contact with over her health care plan that her own party destroyed it. The one that publicly and loudly defended Bill and arranged for attacks on Monica Lewinsky when she knew the complete and sordid truth.

She's always had a chip on her shoulder and a strange paranoia, but it's definitely gotten worse. Now it's not just the vast right wing conspiracy that is out to get her. Now it's the mainstream media. How are they doing that? By asking her the first questions at the debates!

Hillary's snide comment about whether Barack needed a pillow to be made more comfortable was downright embarrassing. The anticipated applause line on her script never happened. The audience was silent. The press was amazed. And Barack seemed genuinely startled by her nuttiness -- he looked over at her as if he was viewing a dotty old aunt at a family dinner, the one that everyone politely humors.

Her lifelong pattern of secrecy was once again evident. While publicly promoting transparency in government, she steadfastly refuses to release her personal income tax returns. That's a clear tip-off that there's something to hide. Recall that the Clintons selectively released tax returns in Arkansas, but refused to go back to 1980, when Hillary had her windfall in cattle futures.

During the debate, Hillary suggested that she'd release the returns "soon," but her staff quickly backtracked. She implied that she's been too busy to deal with releasing the returns. Does she really think anyone believes that it will take more than simply making a copy of the return? She's stalling and there's a reason for that.

Most likely, the return will show how much Bill has been making from his partnership with the Sheik of Dubai and his other business ventures. Should the spouse of a presidential candidate be in business with a foreign leader who needs favors from the U.S. government? Definitely not. That's why we'll never see those returns.

And then there are the Clinton Library records that document her schedule as first lady. She doesn't want them released either because they will definitively show that she was never the co-president. The Library has been stalling on the release of those documents for years. During the debate, she said that she wanted them released as quickly as possible and seemed to blame the Bush administration for the delay. But today, the White House indicated that she had made no requests for any expedited release.

The old Hillary, the real Hillary, is back.

And there's apparently been no one to stop her from acting on her own worse instincts.

Underneath the veneer of the practiced smile and the strategically used giggle, there is a rage that is always close to the surface. It was on display in the debate.

Hillary Clinton is furious that America has not agreed to her coronation. She doesn't understand why voters are rejecting her and embracing Barack Obama. She just doesn't get it.

Never one to engage in self reflection, she can't blame herself or even her incompetent strategists and advisers. They're too close to her. She can't accept the sorry fact that her campaign has been a disaster because it was based on the past and not the future, because it was premised on her phony experience and maintaining the status quo, and because her negative outlook is completely out of step with the mood of America. And finally, because in the positive message of Barack Obama, Americans see a stark contrast with her doom and gloom view of the world.

So, she'll blame the media. It's their fault.

And she'll keep screaming about what a fighter she is.

More like a bully.

Less local electrical noise. Far field is 50 - 50 magnetic and electric fields.

Translation it is pretty much non-directional.

This is more than an analogy. This is the same type of energy. Light and far field radio waves are EM waves. The energy is carried by photons.

Antennas can show gain in one direction like a Yagi antenna for example that can be pointed in the direction of a signal. Here the antenna will show a gain of that signal relative to signals and noise in all other directions so not only do you get a boost of the desired signal at the expense of other signals you get a reduction of the far field noise over what a nondirectional antenna would provide.

Another phrase for aperture used in antennas is capture area. As you have found out this is really important on received signal strengh.

Using a phase control unit between the two loop antennas would create a high gain receive lob antenna pattern that you could steer like the Yagi antenna example with the same benefits described above.

Yeah, this should be an exciting week.

I didn't mean to convey the impression that DSP receivers are just no good. My RX340 sounds just fine but I prefer the sound of the R8B for AM signals. The RX340 works really well on SSB but this is different program material than what is on AM mode the broadcasters use.

No question that DSP is the way to go on digital signals as the software filters are much faster, sharper, and deeper than the analog and so you can get much better error rate ratio.

I think DSP is clearly better for SSB voice also but when it comes to listening to AM mode broadcast that's where it has some drawbacks and these can be minimized but they are not going to be biased that way in a ham transceiver where the emphasis is on SSB.

I think that a really good sounding DSP receiver for AM broadcast can be made if it is designed with that mode in mind.

Although you will theoretically see losses, the front-end gain of your receiver is so high that it will compensate for this mismatch. The end result will be unnoticeable unless the desired signal is at the noise level (i.e. where the additional 1.3 dB would have an impact). As noted, the losses will be more negligible on MF/HF versus VHF/UHF.

RG6 does offer some advantages over say RG58/U or RG8/8x cable in RX on MF/HF frequencies: Good RG6 has a much better shield which will be more efficient at blocking-off the pickup of unwanted interference.
Equivalent "50 Ohm" cables would be similar to the LMR-400, etc.

With Drake SPR-4, R8, and R8B receivers, I have observed where adjacent channel spatter can seemingly obliterate weaker stations. I think this is a function of the AGC recovery time. Even though there are selectable AGC rates on the Drake receivers, I think a longer than usual decay time could cause this problem. Another thing that can cause the effect is having early stages in a receiver generate the AGC voltage. This is not good.....you need to have all AGC voltages generated by stages that follow the high selectivity portions of the receiver. I found this out the hard way, in my early receiver design days.
I don't notice this effect with the Drake R7 receiver or the TR7 transceiver. These receivers don't have the smooth, swirly audio / AGC characteristic of the R8 either. This characteristic is what gives the R8 its pleasant audio recovery.
As a final example, the Icom R75 is very good when it comes to demodulating a weak signal next to a very strong adjacent channel signal.....the problem here is that its hard AGC characteristic gives me what I would refer to as earstrain. Just not very pleasant to listen to over long periods of time. A decay characteristic of 150 to 200 milliseconds seems to be a good compromise.
I've never played with R&S receivers, but I have played with Racal, Harris, Collins, Cubic, etc. All of these receivers are designed for life and death situations, and they all seem to handle that adjacent channel issue very well.

Telemon, I didn't deal in detail about the 1000 ft beverage antenna, because the subject of antenna's is vast and the number of huge technical tomes written on the subject will keep you going for the rest of your life.

I see you have a poor opinion of DSP receivers, so I can only presume you experienced the faults of the early models that only had 16 bit engines. My 756Pro3 has a 24 bit engine with 32 bit processor and I assure you suffers from none of the problems you mention that applied to the earlier offerings like the JRC NRD545D.
I wrote a detailed description of my experiences of the 756Pro3's audio and filter at:
I assure you the audio on the 756Pro3 is top notch, only thing it lacks is a synch detector.

Rohde & Schwarz did indeed make receivers for HF, the last of them being the EK895, which unfortunately was so expensive that it could only be affordable to professional and government operations. They don't make stand alone receivers anymore, only modular HF units that fit into a more comprehensive monitoring PC run station. The R&S EK receiver I had use of for several months was the analogue model just before the EK895 - it's performance was just awesome. It's outstanding performance was not due to any fancy pre-amps, but rather superb circuitry, high quality components and build, and top notch filters. In performance the only hobby radio that ever came near it in performance was my pals Drake R7A. Both these receivers could resolve DX signals that my R8B couldn't.

Of course it's different tricks for different dicks. What I am looking for in a top end receiver is a complete overkill for the fella that just want's to potter around and get good sound out of AM HF broadcasts.

SIZING : The Loop Antenna -versus- the Long-Wire Antenna OK - My Ground Rules : No Scientific Claims or Justification plus very little everyday Math : Cause I Ain't a Scientific Type of People

LOOP ANTENNA :
With Single Turn Loop Antennas it is Aperture {Area Size}
as an Order-of-Magnitude that matters.
http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Order_of_magnitude
10 Inch Square Loop = 100 Square Inches [1X=BaseLine]
18 Inch Square Loop = 333 Square Inches [3X]
32 Inch Square Loop = 1000 Square Inches [10X]
6 Foot {58- Inch} Square Loop = 3333 Square Inches [33X]
8 Feet 4 Inches Square Loop = 10,000 Square Inches [100X]
15 Foot 3 Inches Square Loop = 33,333 Square Inches [333X]
26 Feet 4 Inches Square Loop = 100,000 Square Inches [1000X]

Loop Antenna Observations and Comments :
a. The 10~12 Inch, to 18~22 Inch, to 32 Inch~One Metre Square numbers show why many home made Box Loop Antennas are made in these Size Increments to Capture a significant amount of more Signal over the next smaller Size.
aa. Most of the small commercial AM/MW Loop Antennas are in the 10~12 Inch Size range. {Portability & Ease-of-Use}
b. Also the 10 Inch to 18 Inch to 32 Inch {One Metre} Square Loop Antenna Elements can still be used Indoors.
c. Taking the next step-up in the Sizing Order-of-Magnitude requires going to Six and Eight Foot Loop Antenna Elements; and then the Size would require that they be located Outside the Building/House.
d. A 15 Foot Square Wire Loop Antenna Element is still Do-Able -but- the 26 Foot Size best lends itself to the Triangle Shaped Loop Antenna Element with a single Tall support for the Apex of the Loop and the base parallel to the surface of the ground.

VIEWING - The Loop Antenna's Wire Antenna Element in the Local Space :
The Loop Antenna has a Center that remains the same as the Size of the Loop Antenna's Wire Element gets bigger and gets smaller. The Loop is a Balance Antenna with respect to the Local Noise RFI/EMF Environment : Often Noise Artifacts at one point* in a Loop Antenna are cancelled-out by the same Noise Artifact at an equal-and-opposite point* in a Loop Antenna.
* The Location and Proximity of the Noise Source relative to all parts of the Loop Antenna Element is another Factor to consider here.

A General Statement can be made that a Loop Antenna can be "Scaled-Up" an Order-of-Magnitude or Two {10X~100X} to increase it's RF Signal Levels -with-out- The same relative increase in the Order-of-Magnitude of the Noise that it also picks-up.
-AS- The Loop Antenna gets bigger the number of points-of-balance increase to continually Balance-Out the Loop Antenna Element
-BUT- With the bigger Loop the 'differential' between parts of the Loop and specific local, nearby and very-nearby Noise Sources increases : Thus increasing the potential Noise
Pick-Up of a bigger Loop.
Revised/Adjusted View : The bigger Loop Antenna can in-fact provide greater Signal Levels with only smaller increases in the relatively Signal-to-Noise Ratio : Based-on the Increase in it's Physical Size; coupled with the increase in the Physical Differential between all parts of the Loop Antenna Element and each of their physical proximity to nearby sources of Noise.

LONG-WIRE ANTENNA :
With Single {Linear} Long Wire Antennas it is Total Length
as an Order-of-Magnitude that matters.
3 Foot {36 Inch} Whip Antenna = 3 Linear Feet [1X=BaseLine]
10 Foot Wire Antenna = 10 Linear Feet [3X]
30 Foot Wire Antenna = 30 Linear Feet [10X]
100 Foot Wire Antenna = 100 Linear Feet [33X]
300 Foot Wire Antenna = 300 Linear Feet [100X]
1000 Foot Wire Antenna = 1000 Linear Feet [333X]
3000 Foot Wire Antenna = 300 Linear Feet [1000X]

Long-Wire Antenna Observations and Comments :
a. Starting with the common built-in Whip Antenna which is roughly about 3 Foot long as the Baseline Reference.
b. At just 10 Feet of Wire we see a small noticeable relative increase in the Signal Level can be achieved within the Room {Indoors}.

c. In the range of 30 Feet a full Order-of-Magnitude can be realized in a relatively small Outside Space. {Backyard}
d. However the next Step-Up to around 100 Feet does actually require a large Outside Space for the Long-Wire Antenna Element. {Large Backyard}
e. To achieve significant results beyond 100 Feet sizing up to the next Orders-of-Magnitude requires 300 Feet and 1000 Feet of Open Space for the Long-Wire Antenna Element which eliminates these "Next-Steps" for most Shortwave Radio Listeners (SWLs). {Being Much Bigger Than the Average Size Backyard}
f. 300, 1000, and 3000 Foot Wire Antennas will show directional characteristics; particularly at Frequencies where their Lengths are in the order of 1.5 to 3 Wave Lengths or more.

VIEWING - The Long-Wire Antenna's Wire Antenna Element in the Local Space :
The Long-Wire Antenna has a Center that moves as the Size of the Long-Wire Antenna's Wire Element gets longer and gets shorter. The Long-Wire is an Un-balance Antenna with respect to the Local Noise RFI/EMF Environment : Local Noise Artifacts at one point* in a Long-Wire Antenna are NOT cancelled-out by the same Noise Artifact at an equal-and-opposite point* in a Long-Wire Antenna -because- That Point Does Not Exist.
* The Location and Proximity of the Noise Sources relative to all parts of the Long-Wire Antenna Element is a Key Factor to consider here.

A General Statement can be made that a Long-Wire Antenna can be "Scaled-Up" an Order-of-Magnitude or Two {10X~100X} to increase it's RF Signal Levels =WITH= The same relative increase in the Order-of-Magnitude of the Noise that it also picks-up. Along it entire Length Long-Wire Antenna the can Equally "Pick-Up" both RF Signal and RFI/EMF Noise.
-BUT- As the Size of the Long-Wire Antenna gets longer; the Center {Average Distance} of the Long-Wire Antenna's Wire Antenna Element also moves.
-IF- The shorter Long-Wire Antenna's Center {Average Distance} is closer to the Building/House and therefore closer to the RFI/EMF Noise Environment : Then the Wire Antenna Element is Fully Enveloped {Saturated} in the Noise.
-NOW IF- The longer Long-Wire Antenna's Center {Average Distance} is farther-away from the Building/House and therefore farther-away from the RFI/EMF Noise Environment : Then the Wire Antenna Element is No-Longer Fully Enveloped {Less Saturated} in the Noise.
Revised/Adjusted View : The longer Long-Wire Antenna can in-fact provide greater Signal Levels and a relatively improved Signal-to-Noise Ratio : Based-on the Increase in it's physical

Size and the Shifting {Moving} of it's Center away from Sources of Noise.

COMMON-SENSE-SAYS :
Clearly a 1000X Order-of-Magnitude Loop Antenna would be :
Easier-to-Build and Use-Up-Less Land than a 1000X Order-of-Magnitude Long-Wire Antenna.

Note # 1 - At Resonance and the Resonance Node Points :
1/4 WL, 1/2 WL, 1 WL, 1.5 WL, 3 WL . . . the Size of the Antennas Measured in Feet does not matter as much as the 'relative' Size of the Antennas in these Wave-Lengths.
http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Resonance http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Wavelength

Note # 2 - The Relative Changes in Size with respect to the Earth; the Solar System; and the Universe are not a significant factor for this discussion.
http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Planetary-size_comparison

Note # 3 - Noise Artifact : RF Signal present when RFI/EMF impacts a Wire Antenna Element anywhere along it Length.

Loop Antenna Conclusion : For most AM/MW Radio Band Listeners (BCLs) DXers the One Metre Loop Antenna is adequate to meet their needs.

Long-Wire Antenna Conclusing : For most Shortwave Radio Listeners (SWLs) an Antenna Length between 30 and 100 Feet that fits in their Space available will be adequate to meet their needs.

I Do. {See the Longer Answer Below}

- - From a somewhat more rigorous and theoretical view,
- - should the coax, even it hardly matters, be matched to
- - the antenna output impedance, or the input impedance
- - of the scanner ? Why ? (again, receive only)

It would be 'nice' to have a Signal Path where all the Parts were the same Impedance : Antenna, Coax Cable and Radio.
-But- Practically Speaking Not Necessary when you are simply talking 75 Ohm to 50 Ohm Components used for Receive "Only" Scanner-Radio Listening.

Dave -wrote-
- The mismatch is insignificant.
- About 1.3 dB of loss or something.

Robert 11,

What Dave says is the Practical Applied Truth : When it comes to these 75 Ohm to 50 Ohm Mismatches between Antennas, Coax Cables, Radios, etc for the Average Scanner Radio Listener.

To correct this Mismatch although insignificant; would require the Insertion of some 'Device' either between the 75 Ohm Antenna and the 50 Ohm Coax Cable feed-in-line.

This Device would have to be 'connected' between the 75
Ohm Antenna and the 50 Ohm Coax Cable feed-in-line.

Each of the Connections would have a Insertion 'Loss";
plus the Device itself may have some "Loss".

DEVICE = Matching Transformer / Matching Network / etc.

The Total of these "Losses" may be nearly equal to the original Loss from the 75 Ohm to 50 Ohm 'direct connection' Mismatch; or could even exceed it.

So the Practical Answer is to accept the small 1.3 dB Loss due to the Mismatch and have fewer Connection in the Signal Path from your Antenna to the Radio.

Why Fewer Connections ?
Over time the biggest problem with most Antenna installations is the Connections in the Signal Path from the Antenna to the Radio. Two more Connections may cause more problems then living with the small Signal Loss due to the Mismatch between the 75 Ohm Antenna and 75 Ohm Coax Cable and the 50 Ohm Input of the Radio.

Worry less about these small Mismatches and Losses;
and Learn more about making good Secure Antenna and Coax Cable 'connections' that are Weather Proof and will hold-up over years of service.

sorry for the miss-match-of-words :o)
hope this helps - iane ~ RHF {pomkia}

- How about an HD garbage compactor,
- HD in sink garbage disposal,
- HD vacuum cleaner makes much more sense.

I don't know about scanner frequencies, but at shortwave frequencies it makes a huge difference to match the long wire to the coax. RF Systems has a magnetic longwire balun (MLB) that works very well.

I wouldn't worry about the 75/50 mismatch between the coax and the receiver.
It's the mismatch between the antenna and the coax that you have to address.

I can imagine the water cooler talk over at iBiquity. I'll bet they're quietly sharing job search tips with each other right now.
Not much of a future there.

Most engineers and other technical people don't hang around were things look so grim. They just don't get paid enough to stay at places like iBiquity Digital Corporation because there's not enough money in it to wait around for success to happen. They're too pragmatic. They start looking as soon as they detect a dead end.
IBiquity is a dead end.

Get an adhesive label, write "50 Ohms" on it, and affix it to the coax where the scanner can see it.

Seriously, RG-6 is good low loss cable. It will outperform a lossy cable such as RG-58 (or even RG-8) which happen to be 50 ohms.

The impedance of your antenna will vary considerably with frequency. But even if it had a constant 50-ohm impedance across its range, the use of 75-ohm cable will only result in a 1.5:1 VSWR. For a 50 foot run of RG-6 cable, the loss due to that VSWR will be a fraction of a dB. Don't worry about it. You're way ahead of the game due to the inherent low loss of RG-6.

You don't use a rotary coverter to go from 50 Hz to 60 Hz (that usually doesn't require anything except derating a componet's VA capacity spec. A rotary converter is for getting polyphase out of a one phase feed.

As far as using a half million Watts to serve a hundred Thai SWLs, give me a break. They have computers; if they want Yankee propaganda it is readily available.

So does a home made one for $10.

http://users.belgacom.net/hamradio/schemas/Magnetic%20Longwire%20Balun_MLB.htm

The RFS is way overpriced. If you're going to spend that kind of money get something not made by communists, e.g. a Palomar MLB-1.

Thanks for posting that well written and informative article. Sorry to read about the demise of that venerable station, but the world of broadcasting has changed. A lot has changed in the central valley since that station first opened. It sounds like the station opening was as ceremonious the closing.

Delano is about half-way between Bakersfield and Visalia. Last time I drove past Delano was 1979 and that was going from Fresno to Bakersfield. Wasn't much in places like Delano and Pixley although I'm sure they are bigger now.

I got a real kick out of this remembrance: "I'll never forget connecting one of those curtains to the 200 KW transmitter, and connecting the station RCA AR88 receiver to another and calling CQ just once," said Quinn.
"This was at noon and there was absolutely no propagation to Japan at my home station until 5 p.m. There must have been a thousand JA's calling back with S-9+ signals. Amazing what a good antenna and lots of power will do."

If you would consider participating, I would be most appreciative.

Samuel D. Bradley, Ph.D.
Assistant Professor
Texas Tech University

Greetings.

Your opinion is important to us. You are invited participate in an academic Texas Tech University research study about attitudes, memory, and lifestyle.

If you choose to participate in the study, you will be entered into a raffle to win one of 8 cash prizes. The top prize is $250, and second prize is $100. There will be six $25 cash prizes.

To participate in the study, all you have to do is click on (or copy and paste) the link below and answer some questions. If you choose to participate, you will answer questions about your attitudes, memory, and lifestyle. This entire study should take less than 30 minutes.

All of your responses will be completely anonymous. Your data will in no way be connected to your name. You will have to provide contact information for the raffle, but it will be used only to enter you in the prize drawing and to let you know if you've won.

Click on the link below to get started. We encourage you to pass the link or this message along to anyone you know who might be interested in participating. Simply forward this message, or the link, on to them. The study will be open to responses until March 12, 2008, at midnight.

If you have any questions, please contact Dr. Samuel D. Bradley at sbradley3@hotmail.com.

Thank you for your time and helping us out!

msushi wrote in another thread:
"Noise is measured in volts per root Hz. To get the noise over a bandwidth, you multiply by the square root of the bandwidth. So using a 10% narrower filter reduces the noise by 4.8%. So narrowing the bandwidth helps, but it is not a cure".

Indeed, it is not a cure. Narrowing the bandwidth of a filter also narrows the audio response, so the narrower the filter is the poorer will be the audio response and the more difficult it becomes to render a rare faint DX signal readable. It is vital to my MW DXing of AM stations that I get as fuller sound as possible. These signals are very faint and often severely garbled by atmospherics. At best it is a great challenge to read and identify these signals with enough information to request and get a QSL. The fullest possible sound is necessary to clearly hear all the speech harmonics and sibilants, so as a result I usually DX in ECSS USB mode, but use a comparatively wide 3.0 Khz filter setting on my Icom IC-756PROIII.

Then there are filters and there are filters, from the cheap ones fitted to most portables right up to the Collins mechanical filters that can be fitted to an AOR7030. Filter characteristics are very important to the end result of rendering audible those faint DX signals. The filters in most portables have very wide skirts that let in all sorts of interference, from plain noise to monkey chatter from adjacent stations. Even more expensive filters on some of the lower end tabletops have very shallow skirts in addition to poor skirt characteristics.

I once owned a new Kenwood R5000 to which I added the top of the line Kenwood expensive crystal filters. What a disappointment they were. The adjacent channel monkey chatter still came in as the filters had poor skirts and were too shallow. A good filter has to have a depth of at least 80 dB, and those Kenwood filters were only 60 dB, they turned out to be a total waste of money.

Filters have various characteristics: their shape factor and their depth. Most analogue crystal and mechanical filters have a bell shaped characteristic, allowing the possibility of letting in powerful adjacent channel break through. Then there is the depth of a filter, most are bell shaped and not more than 60 dB in depth, again allowing in adjacent channel stations to interfere with your target station. An ideal filter has near vertical skirts and reaches to a depth of 80 dB or better, hence my love affair with my 756Pro3 which has superb DSP filters.

Lastly just a note to say that adding an expensive high quality Collins mechanical filter to a poor radio like a Yaesu FRG-7 just will not work. Everything has to come together for it to work: good circuitry with a top class roofing filter, high dynamic range etc. Generally you get what you pay for = the more expensive the radio the better the filters and overall performance are going to be. And when you are in very tough DX situations, that is what is going to yield the results.

Enjoy your listening and good DX.

It is very unfortunate that all this got into public domain and counter-published on other websites.

DRM has a potentially interesting future and, along with other emerging technologies, should be given scope to develop.

At the end of the day it will depend on content, take-up and business foresight - driven, rightly so, by the consumer.

My favourite filter in the R7 is the 3 kHz.

I just wonder why you'd limit yourself to DX'ing in USB mode. Wouldn't you want to shift sidebands depending upon the interference?

actually, its an opinion (and an uncited one that that) rather than an observation.

in fact, most of what I have read in here of late is, in fact, unsupported opinion and supposition.

I am not qualified to speak of the goings on in political circles and neither, for that matter, is anyone else on here. all that happens as a result, is that we all end up in needless arguments.

perhaps its time for more thinking and less vocalizing.

Whew! another error = thanks for pointing that out Ace.
Of course I meant SSB where I toggle between USB and LSB to obtain the best result.

The Drake R7A is a really fine radio, costing $1500 in 1981 when it came out. A lot of money in those days!

To reply to clifto on the Frog. It can achieve amazing results in the right hands and the recovered audio is as good as the old valve radio's. But it has an open front end 1000 Khz wide that lets in all sorts of spurious images that can be quite annoying when DXing the HF bands.

Stay Out the :His-Se-Inssss"

(OT) : 2008 Election Politics - Sounds Crazy
But It Is True - "Insane" Is OK !
http://groups.google.com/group/rec.radio.shortwave/msg/285a7dfb5bad5d6b

Now You Can NOT Used 'Hussein' in Private and/or Say 'Hussein' in Public : Yes the Middle Name of US Presidential Candidate Barack 'Hussein' Obama is now Defined as Racist and Anti-Islamic. [DIRTY POLITICS]

YES - That is Right : Actually using Barack 'Hussein' Obama's Birth Name; which is a matter of Public Record is DIRTY POLITICS and is both Racist and Anti-Islamic.

We could try to Insult Him by Calling Him and Saying :
Barack "Insane" Obama and that would be OK
-cause- Insanity Ain't Racist and/or Anti-Islamic -cause- All Races* can be "Insane"
* The is Racial Equality in Insanity

It depends on whether you have coax lead-in from you long wire or a straight wire. For instance, my random wire has a balun transformer (really an un-un) feeding a 50 ohm coax lead-in wire. So I plug into the 50 ohm connector on the back of my R-5000. If I didn't use the balun, I would plug into the high impedance (500 ohm) connector.

I have the crystal filter for sideband from the time AOR sold one, as well as a 250Hz Kenwood for CW. Everything else is stock. As you probably know, for the AR7030 on AM MW, you can passband shift the crystal filter to the sideband of your choice.

Talk about fat!!

I know where the bucks are going now. If I were an investor I'd have big-time questions about the extremely top-heavy management team. Between money spent promoting that defective technology and paying salaries at the top it's no wonder they've stopped supporting AM HD.

Who does the work there anyway? Very amazing considering the number of radios sold to date. Could this be a scam?.

Hello,

Is R/S RG6 of "decent" quality for a receive only application (to a scanner)

Or, should it be avoided like the plague, and go to one of the on-line radio supplier sources ?

Thanks,

Check Struble's bio. It reads like he's got a monumental ego. I'll bet working around him is a real treat.

The whole website is so inflated you'd think 10 billion radios have been sold instead of a few hundred thousand. Who would invest in that nonsense? Their International section is humorous. All this and the company doesn't even have an 800 number. Think about it.

Been thinking about HD radio again and decided why the comparison of iBiquity's hybrid digital system to FM makes me feel a little uneasy. Kind-a like when you eat too many sugary donuts at one time and then feel the need to go to the bathroom real fast.

At the time, Edwin Armstrong's FM was a new and very usable technology that didn't displace or replace any current system. Nobody lost anything. You could buy it or not, it was your choice. The comparison by iBiquity and other HD apologists is misleading and nothing more than a sales pitch.

Armstrong must be turning over in his grave. He was a real engineer. To place Struble or iBiquity with Armstrong's achievement is self-serving Struble you should be ashamed of yourself - Armstrong your not. There, I went to the bathroom.

The best thing about using the HD acronym is that "HD" is so overused. It doesn't mean anything anymore. Goofy stuff like headphones and patchcords, etc. being considered digital ready by marketing people rendered the term meaningless.

Ibiquity blew it with their little play-on-words when they used the term "hybrid digital" knowing that people would connect it with "HD". They shot themselves in the foot. For all Strubles big ego he missed the obvious.

It's amusing that HD cheerleaders compare HD to the advent of FM - except that there are a zillion other technologies that didn't exist as competitors to FM 35 years ago.

It is said DRM (Digital Radio Mondiale) will be extended up to 120MHz to cover FM and will be broadcasted on FM subcarriers as bonus digital content (in an empty space just above RDS). It is more comfortable for broadcasters because is license free and already well tested on shortwave. For us listeners is also good because we already have free dream decoding software. Now we do IF465kHz to 12kHz coverter to decode shortwave. Then will will do IF10,7MHz to 12kHz coverter to decode it on FM.

I hope EU will choose DRM instead of HD-Radio. Everyone will save money.

I'm pretty happy with my E1... except for one detail, which is going to have to be addressed. It will not lock onto an FM stereo signal. Sometimes it will flip into stereo mode, but not often, even on extremely strong signals. And when it does, there's virtually no separation (yes, I'm using stereo headphones). Where do I send this thing to get this issue rectified?

The problem with shortwave in general is the good hardware is very expensive when compared to cost of home satellite receiver. Any cheap and simple STB box receives all digital world TV and radio in top quality.
Also for broadcasters satellite transmissions are cheaper (less cost of license and less transmission power wasted, more audience).
Good hardware for SWL also need big space to setup good aerial.
Satellite dish is smaller.
That is why BBC turned off SW transmitter for Eastern Europe.
But I understand them. I have bought very cheap digital satellite equipment and the quality of radio is even better than local FM stations. And I have not only radio but also TV. Another option is the Internet which gives global access to any station like SW but with much better quality.

Sangean said there will be no new SW radios from them. Recently there was 50% decline in SW radios sale and this decline continues since a long time.
Also most home radios nowadays (hifi/tabletop/portable) lacks SW not to mention that LW and MW are also less visible in new radios.
Broadcasters also do not like AM due to big energy bills for AM trasmitters and higher noise which is increasing especially on LW every year.

I have the XM model- serial- 02315. early run. all the info you need should be found on the yahoo group. i'm one of the lucky ones, after almost 2 years, mine still works. but, my stereo some times won't lock either. if i had to do it again, i would run, not walk past this receiver.

Over the July 4th holiday, I decided to take the splurge and buy an E1XM off a private seller on eBay. The radio arrived three days later. Looked awesome. But, shortwave didn't work. No sensitivity. Virtually dead on both internal and external antennas. Local 50 kW MW broadcaster was about all that came in. FM was fine. Didn't try XM. The seller was a nice, non-radio person and gave me a full refund. Bought one at full price from a radio store one week later. I was in radio bliss for 48 hours, until the display failed. Started to get angry. Anger dissipated as I got another full refund and another Sony 2010 off of eBay.

Took a risk and bought another E1 off of eBay for a very good price in early September. Since then, it's been good. It's a very impressive radio, handling external antennas with nary a trace of overloading. I operate it mainly off batteries. I don't use it for FM or XM. Serial number in the 8000's. It's a pretty impressive portable, though I think I still prefer my R75 for weak signal intelligibility. The 2010 may be more sensitive, but doesn't handle external antennas as well.

Eton deserves kudos for finally marketing an innovative radio design that seemed to spend a long time materializing. They deserve curses for not doing more to overcome dismal quality control. (I also give them a "thumbs up" on the E5.)

It's fine. And I notice you keep saying "receive only." Loss is loss whether transmitting or receiving. I've used RG-6 for Transmitting at VHF with about 25 watts of power. RG-6 can easily handle that power, and the fact that its characteristic impedance is 75 ohm matters little.

Without a doubt radio is slowly dying and over the next 10 years will morph into another creature.

Music Fm's are nothing more than jukeboxes. And new better jukeboxes arrived with more new technology on it's way that do a much better job than radio. So you say ya but radio is local. Yes in 1950 radio was local. but today most stations sound alike and don't give a shit about your community. Radio is about MONEY! and nothing more.
HD is the future of radio but it's not ready for prime time yet. You say ya but I like radio for weather and traffic updates. Again technology has arrived and new hi tech answers are on their way. You say ya but listeners like the morning buzz or what ever your djs are called.. Again... they all sound alike but only the names change. And free music will be available everyplace.. why because the internet changed everything and labels can't sell cd's any more so the music model will change too. Experts are predicting the end of the music business as we know it today.

I think our stupid congress and fcc will make all analogs switch to HD and eventually all analogs will be turned off.
it sounds crazy because it's probably true.. and more than we know..

It's tough to argue with someone who does not know any of the facts. In 1950, most stations were members of the 4 national networks, or regional ones like Don Lee, Yankee, Rocky Mountain Network, etc. The most important programs and stations were mostly networked all day.

When you understand the facts, try again.

I've been quite pleased with my early production E1, which I purchased in November 2005. I hadn't had any real issues with this radio, aside from some minor annoyance with the +/- 70 Hz drift in SSB (which is within manufacturer specs, incidentally...). It was only when the Yahoo E1 Group got whipped up into a furor over the FM stereo lock issue that I became aware that my unit had this same problem. Oh, well... I don't really use it for FM, and the FM performance on the E1 beats the living daylights out of that of my Sony ICF-SW77, which provided woefully defective FM performance right out of the box (and which Sony service/repair proved incapable of fixing).

Recently, I procured a non-XM variant of the E1, and I'm pleased to say that Eton has addressed the SSB drift issue; the new one is pretty stable. Pretty solid performance for a portable set. I had purchased my second unit shortly after the bizarre rumor began spreading of a E1 discontinuation. IThere are plenty of folks at this point who seem scared to go near the E1, due to the QC issues. But for those who have been using the E1, there are a large number of folks who've gotten additional units, as they've been so impressed with the radio.

It would be nice if the QC issues would be taken care of once and for all. It's a pity that we're seeing what is essentially a repeat of the Satellit 800 saga. R.L. Drake seems to be doing a top notch job on the servicing of E1s, although I don't know how keen you'd be in sending your E1 off to Ohio for the FM stereo problem (as I recall, you're in RoK, right?). The display issue seems to be the main problem that Eton needs to rectify, and thankfully, it is a problem that seems to manifest itself during the warrantee period (i.e. it tends to surface early, if the radio is going to have it). If I were Mr. Trolley, I'd have the merchant exchange the defective unit for another. But then, I can understand if someone gets turned off to the radio after an initial bad experience. I'm speaking from the point of view of someone who has been using an E1 for a few years, and I've been quite impressed with its performance.

When the E1 is eventually discontinued, it will be the same as with the Sat 800: you'll have folks looking for the set on the used market...folks who will want the radio for its many virtues; and, of course, there'll be a lot of questioning out there with regard to serial number batches...which are good, which are prone to defect. Because ultimately, this radio has set a new expectation level with regard to performance one can expect from a portable. Unfortunately, while repair and servicing are good, Eton still seems not to have gotten it quite right with regard to initial quality control. And they're losing a lot of potential sales as result. Quite a pity, really.

<"News/Talk/Sports:Radio's Last Bastion"

Now that is a crock. News is one format. Talk is another and sports talk is a third format.

Talk has over half its listeners over 55, where no advertiser wants to be.
News is so expensive there are only a dozen or so news stations in the US.
And sports is totally different from the other two.

You do not understand radio any better than Scooter. You just foam at the mouth more.

I think 'Scooter's' contention deserves some real research. Certainly in terms of numbers of stations, the conventional wisdom would suggest that low power local stations were in the predominance. They were indeed local, even if they had certain network affiliations or aired network programming in syndication. In small town Minnesota where I grew up there were dozens of small market stations on the dial, many airing Mutual programming at certain times, but mostly doing entirely local programming. In the 1950's, and early 1960's, America had not yet suburbanized the countryside to the degree we now take for granted, and local radio was exciting. David, in your bio, you recall with fondness radio in your youth, but you were on the East Coast and your experiences reflect a reality different from much of the rest of the country. I had the good fortune to be welcomed at two different studio/transmitter sites whenever I walked in during my youth, and at one was even allowed to run consoles and create spots. I was even allowed to monitor transmitter frequency and power and inspect feedlines and tower conditions (at eight to ten years old I can only thank the owners, engineers and talent at those plants for their affection now).

I stopped buying any type of coax from Radio Shack in 1979 when I saw how loosely woven their braid was. I have no idea about their current products. You might check the price on RG6 at The Wireman's web site.
I especially like his RG8X -- thin coax with heavy braid and center conductor. They'll put on the proper connectors if you don't want to do it yourself.

i do not know where you lived in 1950 and before, and even into the 1970s, but radio where i grew up was unique to it, and if you wanted to hear something else, you switched around the dial to find it. there were many stations with different programming, even after fm came in. I remember fiddling around the dial until i could get 20 questions, and Steve. We could also get NY and Phila., and stations up and down the east coast, the south, and westward to WOW, Detroit at night, and we still can get those, as well as Boston which is very strong. In the 1940s, I could get the Yankees games from another station if I glued my ear to the set.
Yes, there were soap operas and such that were a national network, but the rest of the day there were other programming, and we had polkas and local high school games, but also national foot ball games as well as the Metropolitan opera on saturday afternoons. We had all those great network evening shows prior to tv and the cowboy dramas such as Tom Mix and Roy Rogers and Gene Autry, then there was Superman and all those type of heroes and mysteries and detectives.
Today, and for many years, all the stations in the area where i now live have all the same type of screaming, shouting loud unrecognizable lyrics so-called music, horrible. There are the news and traffic and talk shows, and cspan has done a great deal to bring us congress and public affairs. the npr networks bring us interesting programs and garrison keillor is still on. But if they take away the analog stations, then what do we do?
I am getting older, the body is getting sick, perhaps it is time for my generation and our memories to die as well. we are now old-timers and there is no going back, because people do not want to.

Nope. Look at how many stations there were in 1950. Most places in rural America had only one or two network stations, and only the larger markets had independent stations. The Petrillo - American Federation Of Musicians issue was not yet fully resolved, so playing all music was not a real option; Top 40 all music radio was "invented" in late 1952, in fact.

At the end of the 40's, there were 2662 licensed stations, of which 700 were AM and 50 were TV. Of the 1900 AM stations, 212 were ABC affiliates, 179 were with CBS, 519 were with Mutual, and 170 with ABC for a total of 1100 national network affiliates. A large additional number, around 400, were with Don Lee, Rocky Mountain, Yankee, etc. Still more were part of farm networks, etc. Very few were 100% independent, and these were mostly in the top metro areas or were among the few Black programmed or ethnic programmed stations like WDIA, KCOR, etc.

Source: Broadcasting Yearbook, 1948, 1949, 1950, 1951.

< They were indeed local, even if > they had certain network affiliations or aired network programming in

See the numbers above. The networks were allowed to own 7 stations each, so the bulk... over 1050 of the affiliates of the nets, were local stations that took 80% or more of their programming from the nets.

For a good amount of time, I was in northern Michigan where the only AM till 1960 was WPBN, a fulltime NBC affiliate and the flagship of the regional Paul Bunyan Network. Everything at that time in the northern Lower Peninsula from Traverse City and Cadillac to Petoskey was only served by the PBN in 1950. In fact, until the lift of the TV freeze, and the advent of Top 40 music formats without the conditions of the AFM, independent radio was very limited.

Run to a university library and refresh your memory. There were scant few independent stations, and with the AFM issue it was nearly impossible to play much music other than "library music" sold by transcription houses.

All coax is not created equal. How lossy the RG6 is that you have your hot hands on depends on who made it and for what purpose. Look for a part number and manufacturer on the cable jacket. Once you have those numbers you can look up the cable specifications and some of that will tell you the loss per foot over a range of frequencies. You look at the charts for the frequencies you plan to use it.

Besides loss shielding is an important factor to look at.

Almost all those shows were networked, not a single local origination.

And the reason you tuned for AM stations from different places was, first, most of the big shows were on at night, and, second, there were so few stations local markets had very few so plenty of places on the band were open to distant reception.

So listen to CDs or get satellite. Today's music is great, but you are stuck in the past.

You are introducing tv into a radio subject. Buy a converter.

Sounds like you have the coax shorted. When you plug the coax in the jack you are supposed to connect the outer shield to the connector outer shell and the coax center wire to the connector center contact. If you have a short at either end of the coax you will be cutting off the antenna signals to the radio. If the coax is shorted somewhere it can still work if touched to the whip because you are not making the a ground connection as you are at the jack.

I bought one of those Circuit City sales units. It has been working ok for the past 4 months, including locking on stereo.
R.L. Drake is the one who services these items, so they would be the ones to send the unit to.
I think the reason the stereo mode doesn't work very well on many units is because the free run frequency of the PLL in the stereo demodulator isn't operating close enough to 19kHz for the thing to lock.
Now, it this radio is using one of the new stereo demodulator chips, which it probably is, here is how it works. Newer chips, such as the Sanyo La3400, instead of using an RC circuit as the frequency determining element, a 456kHz ceramic resonator is divided down internally to 19kHz. A form of a VCXO is used to warp this resonator so that it will lock with the pilot tone from the FM stereo station.
Now,if this is the case, two things may have happened. First of all, a 455kHz resonator may have been used in its place, causing this problem.
Secondly, you may have received a unit that has a 75uS deemphasis curve. I think your part of the world uses a 50iS deemphasis curve, but I could be wrong. If this is the case, though, a 75uS curve will incorrectly roll off the high frequencies, causing the stereo demodulator to work incorrectly because of too low of a 19kHz pilot tone level.
I hope this helps.

To add to Telemon's' reply:-
there are two issues:
1.] I'm not sure is you are using the right antenna jack. The one for SW is marked SW FM and needs a PAL jack to connect. The other input is for bare wires to be connected for MW only and cannot be disconnected (it won't work on shortwave).

2.] As Telemon said, you may also have shorted your RG58 coax and that might be the reason you are getting the poor result. It's easy to checkout with an Ohmeter, otherwise just check the connections carefully. Also, you can't just connect a longwire to a coax without a matching transformer/balun. A longwire has an impedance of from 500 to 1000 Ohm's, whilst the RG58 is 50 Ohm's, hence the necessity to match the two, otherwise you are going to get signal loss.

Good luck!

Garth,

1 - Question - Are you using the correct External Antenna Input for the Shortwave Radio Bands ?

The Round Metal "PAL" Jack with a Metal Pin in it's Center is the Shortwave Radio External Antenna Input for the Redsun RP2100 Radio.

Input of many Chinese made Radios.
http://cgi.ebay.com/_W0QQitemZ140138458561
http://cgi.ebay.com/_W0QQitemZ140138461136

NOTE - The Two Push Terminals [Black and Red] on the back of the Redsun RP2100 Radio are for the AM/MW Radio Band.

2 - The "ANTENNA" Switch for "INT" for Internal {Top-Up} Position and "EXT" for External {Bottom-Down} position.
The "ANTENNA" Switch is the Lower {Bottom} Switch on the Right Side of the Redsun RP2100 Radio. The Switch should be in the "Down" position for the External Antenna.

Take a Look at the 3rd Photo for the Antenna Switch.

3 - Question - Are you using a Ground Wire connected to the Redsun RP2100 Radio's "PAL" External Antenna Input along with the Wire from the External Long-Wire Antenna ?

CAUTION -Safety Note- You Should Be Using A Ground
With Any Long-Wire Antenna.

4 - Connecting the PL-259 Plug on the end of your RG-58
Coax Cable to the Radio will usually require some sort of Adapter between the Coax and Radio.

Universal Radio .Com - Item : SO239-KOK - Order # 1052
http://www.universal-radio.com/catalog/portable/1052.jpg
Description : SO-239 to KOK Antenna Jack Adapter

TIP - On Making the Direct External Antenna Wire Connection : =IF= You do not have a "PAL" Plug - You can make the 'connection' to the Center Metal Pin of the "PAL" Jack by using an Alligator Clip that has an Insulated Boot over it.

NOTE - The Outer Metal Ring of the "PAL" Connector and the Black Push-Terminal are both 'connected' to the Redsun RP2100 Radio's Circuit Ground. So you can 'connect' a Ground Wire to the Radio using the Black Push-Terminal if you want to.

I never listen to the Korean stations (except for very rare occasions when I feel like hearing some classical). I listen to AFN and to my own FM transmitters, all of which are 75uS pre-emphasis. I'll look into what Drake will do for me. Shipping isn't a big deal, since I can use the military APO system, it's just like shipping from/to San Francisco.

If you get a chance, can you verify that stereo demod circuit? If it's got an RC decoder after all, perhaps I can look for the trim pot. If not, it will have to go to Drake. It's not like it's a big deal, as the radio performs extremely well otherwise, and I likely won't ever use it for stereo reception, it's just the principle of the thing.

Hi Brenda,

I have called Drake a couple of times, concerning circuit details. They just seem to "play dumb" when it comes to answering any questions. This doesn't make senst to me, since it was one of their engineers that designed the radio in the first place.
I will give them a call later this morning, just to see if they will give me that information.

RFS = RF-Systems [NL]

With respect to 'other' 9:1 Matching Transformers designed for "Receive Only" Shortwave Radio Listening (SWL) use : That would be a : YES.

- If you're going to spend that kind of money
- get something not made by communists,

Dave -fwiw- the RF-Systems Magnetic Longwire Balun (MLB) is made by RF-Systems [NL] "The Netherlands" a Member of the EU and a Memeber of NATO too.
http://www.rf-systems.nl/Contact.html
http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Netherlands
The Netherlands is a Parliamentary Democracy coupled to a Constitutional Monarchy which is far from being Communists : Socialist Yes -but- Communist NO.

- e.g. a Palomar MLB-1.

The Magnetic Longwire Balun (MLB-1) which is Priced at US$50 plus US$8 for S&H a US$17 Savings.

Robert 11,

There are Better Lower Cost Alternatives to the
RF Systems Magnetic Longwire Balun (MLB)

In general I would agree with Dave; that for it relative High Cost of around US$75 the RF Systems Magnetic Longwire Balun (MLB) is overpriced in the Market Place for a "Receive Only" Matching Transfromer for Shortwave Radio Listening (SWL).
http://www.universal-radio.com/catalog/sw_ant/1484.html

The Par Electronics End-Fed Short Wave Antenna (EF-SWL) sells for US$10 less and you get both the "Receive Only" Matching and the 45 Foot AWG # 14 Flex-Weave Antenna Wire made of 168 Strands of # 36 Gauge woven Copper Wire with a Black Polyethylene Coating @ US$65.
http://www.grove-ent.com/ANT8.html
http://www.universal-radio.com/catalog/sw_ant/2205.html

The WinRadio LWA-0130 Long Wire Antenna Adapter is also a "Receive Only" Matching Transfromer for Shortwave Radio Listening (SWL) and sells for US$40 {US$35 Savings :o}
http://www.grove-ent.com/WR0130.html
With that Savings you could buy your Coax Cable and Wire Antenna Element.

This eBay Seller "NW Antennas" in Canada makes a 40 Foot long Single Wire End-Fed Antenna coupled to a Dual-Core Matching Transformer for a Buy-it-Now Price of US$39 plus S&H of US$16 = Total US$55 and that is a US$20 Savings.
http://cgi.ebay.com/_W0QQitemZ260215175497
http://myworld.ebay.com/nwantennas/
With that Savings you could buy your Coax Cable.

Another eBay Seller "Low-Bander" in the USA makes an 80 Foot long "Super Longwire All Band Shortwave Antenna that comes with a 9:1 Balun {Matching Transformer} plus 50 Feet of Coax Cable with a PL-259 Plug to connect to your Radio for a Buy-it-Now Price of US$33 plus S&H of US$10 = Total US$43 and that is a US$32 Savings.
It is a 'complete' Shortwave Antenna System All-in-One !
http://cgi.ebay.com/_W0QQitemZ180218553370
http://myworld.ebay.com/lowbander/
All you have to do is Rig-It and just add a Ground Rod and Ground Wire.

CAUTION -Safety Note- All Outside Wire Shortwave Radio Listening (SWL) Antennas that are 'connected' to your Radios, Receivers and Radio Shack Equipment should be well {earthen} Grounded* either at the Antenna; somewhere along the Feed-in-Line; or in the Radio Shack.

"Myer-Emco Inc. bought out by competitor"

May 8, 2007 5:48 PM (301 days ago) by Melissa Frederick, The Examiner
WASHINGTON (Map, News) - New York-based Harvey Electronics Inc. has purchased local audio and video retailer and installer Myer-Emco Inc. of Gaithersburg.

Myer-Emco began as a ham radio repair shop in a home in Silver Spring in 1955, and grew to a chain of 10 stores in the D.C. area. Harvey has nine locations in New York and New Jersey and has been in business for 75 years. Both specialize in high-end products and customized installations, targeting wealthier markets.

"So many industry contacts have been coming up to me and saying, 'Gee, this makes perfect sense,'" Myer-Emco President and Chief Operating Officer Gary Yacoubain said Tuesday. "You couldn't find two more alike companies."

Financial terms of the purchase were not disclosed. Yacoubain will remain in his position at the combined company and Harvey will retain the rest of the company's management team as well.

After the purchase, the stores will continue to operate under their own names, and no branding will change, the executives said. Martin McClanan, Harvey's interim chief executive officer, said the agreement allows the company to continue to invest heavily in training their workforce to make sure they have an educated sales team.

"We're not really trying to become a big box retailer; we want to be the place you go if you are looking for a great quality product, or for someone to actually do your installation," Yacoubain said.

I do have experience with Collins mech filters. The response "curve" is not at all "bell" shaped in a good radio, like the 390A. I was able to very neatly slice off an AM signal's carrier and still demodulate a sideband with mine.

Way too much power required to haul to the beach...

"Radio: The U.K.'s Digital death notice"

HD Radio Alliance head Peter "Sgt. Bilk-o" Ferrera came out of hiding this week to fallaciously proclaim that HD radio-only stations - those that you can hear only on an HD Radio receiver are writing business and making money. He named two stations - Clear Channel's Z-100/New York and Emmis' KSHE/St. Louis as examples.

Let's cut to the chase.

Bilk-o, prove to me that money exchanged hands from client to Z-100 and KSHE - exclusively for buying time on their HD side channels.

You can't.

These are strictly value-added bonus spots.

Right? Right.

They're not even spots. They're similar to public radio underwriting announcements - except unlike public radio, which receives money from them, radio's not seeing one cent of additional revenue. The stations pitched their clients the opportunity to take part in a new experiment - at no cost or obligation.

Right? Right.

Shall we read between the lines?

KSHE admits that the "announcements" on its KSHE2-Klassic HD channel are from two clients that have "long-term relationships" with the terrestrial station: Doc's Harley Davidson and Cetero Medical Research. Each'll get one 20-second top-of-the-hour announcement - rotating twelve times a day for the next year.

Z-100, on the other hand, gave away the store - running four ten-second announcements per hour for Verizon. That adds up to 96 Verizon announcements per day.

One of the new lines being used to hype the alleged value of HD Radio is that it could bring in local advertisers that don't have the budget to buy traditional radio. At the prices I'm being quoted these days to advertise on terrestrial radio - HD Radio's rates must be targeting shoe-shine boys and lemonade stands.

You can't make this stuff up.

Go ahead. Show me what I made up.

Poor Bilk-o. He has a tough job trying to remember which lie he told and to whom.

It gets better.

The research company SNL Kagan claims that HD Radio revenues will reach $1 billion by 2011. That's a whole lotta shoe-shine boys and lemonade stands.

Researcher and RAIN editor Kurt Hanson did the math. His figures, which were based on a blue sky assumption - and the improbability of an installed base of 4 million HD Radios in the U.S. - had its best-case scenario revenues at $55 million - not the $1 billion Kagan claims.

Memo to Kagan: I'd check the chip on that calculator that Bilk-o gave you.

Either that or stop fitting your research results to what's in Bilk-o's brain.

Reality check: HD Radio isn't going to bill anything - period.

Bilk-o, you neglected to provide updates on what's the latest news from other countries where digital radio has been marketed.

What we call HD Radio in the states is known as DAB - Digital Audio Broadcast - overseas.

Ever hear of GCap, Bilk-o?

Of course you have. You just don't like to talk about them.

In 2005, GCap became the largest radio company in the United Kingdom - the outcome of a merger between GWR Group and Capital Radio.

GCap's pulling the plug on two more of its digital stations, Planet Rock and the Jazz. This adds to the three other digital channels they'd already silenced.

The only GCap digital-broadcast stations remaining are those simulcating their terrestrial stations, which include hit radio CapitalFM, classical Classic FM, alternative XFM, and Hip-Hop/R&B Choice FM.

GCap says that digital radio is not economically viable. They're also selling its piece of Digital One, a national broadcasting platform for digital stations. They just want o-u-t.

Digital radio listening accounts for nine percent of total radio listening in the U.K. - but digital-only stations make up less than four and a half percent of total listening.

Bilk-o, if you had one tenth of one percent with HD Radio in the states you'd call it an overwhelming success.

GCap's CEO Fru Hazlitt told the BBC that it sees better prospects in FM and Internet radio - and that digital radio was too expensive and wasn't embraced by consumers the way the company had anticipated.

Richard Wheatley, the CEO of Local Radio, which owns 28 stations in the UK, said digital radio did not have any killer application and that his listeners were moving to the Internet for their alternate radio use.

Anyone with a computer already has everything they need to listen to thousands of radio stations worldwide.

How do you compete with that, Sgt. Bilk-o?

Between 1999 and early 2001 when I was running the Internet radio and TV portal Radio Crow (and most Internet connections were 28.8 dial-up), we promoted DAB to our U.K. users - and carried streaming audio of the DAB-only stations.

Unlike HD Radio in this country, where most side-channels are on automatic pilot - the U.K. digital channels were, for the most part, well crafted and programmed. Even then, the feedback we were getting from our U.K. users was: why buy a DAB receiver when one could get the same channels on the Internet for free?

Free.

It's been said that giving up nicotine is harder than heroin. I think it's even harder for Bilk-o and his layabout friends at the HD Radio Alliance and the NAB to give up lying.

Leaders are those who jump in front of crowds that are already moving.

Bilk-o, you're not one of those.

I really don't want to say this, my many shortwave friends, but I find that I am giving up far to much of my increasingly valuable time here on RRS trying to educate the faux, the debutantes, and those who tote..

Therefore, I've simply decided to give up RRS.

Goodbye, I sincerely hope that you all find your niche in the

It goes unnoticed by virtually all radio listeners. The iBiquity website encourages stations to, as they put it, "PROMOTE, PROMOTE, PROMOTE" but you can' realistically promote something people don't want.

Their website is so hyped-up you'd think iBiquity was hugely successful, which is not the case.

A few years from now the radios will be on dollar store shelves. selling for a fraction of what they are now.

I just talked to Drake about the stereo problem. The E1 uses a Sanyo LA3335 stereo demodulator. This is an older type that uses an RC oscillator for the VCO. Evidently, a high stability 1000pF timing cap should have been used in this part of the circuit. Replace this cap with a 1000pF polystyrene cap and you will have your stereo function working again.
When the VCO free-run frequency was set at the factory at their ambient temperatore, everything was fine.....at your ambient temperature, everything is not fine!

Give it back to the British. Those bastards carved it out of the remnants of the old Ottoman Empire in 1921 and the place has been a basket-case of a country ever since. Oh the British did it mainly to grab the oil reserves around Mosul and Kirkuk in the last century just like we are trying to do now by setting up "Greater Kurdistan" and GET OUR HANDS on all that oil via the Kurdish minority and hopefully bribe-off the Turks to let us

I say sent in dubya and the whole bush crime family. add to that all the low life's in congress and the senate. while were at it, send in those low life's from the un-supreme court. and bring the boys home. and while were at it, why don't i see anyone bragging about- "I voted right, I voted etc."? the damage is done. it will take years to bring our country back. and, if you think we will see any change with the next election, take a close look who's running. we have a man with no time in fed gov. a women with no idea what's going on in the world, and a left over Nancy boy from the Viet Nam era. i want to call the last one a coward, but i won't call a fellow veteran that. you want to know what he really did in the war, use google.

I've never been convinced that what he posts here is actually a bone-deep belief. Lately, I've been more aware of the sense that he's as much trying to convince himself of the veracity of his positions as he is trying to convince us.

As much as I'd like to believe IBOCCrock's position that HD is DOA, it's guys like David, and the general level of executive/manglement I've worked with at Radio, who will continue to milk/morph/tweak/tune HD until it either dies a staggering and ignominious death, or it finally becomes viable, though in a form likely not yet realized. It's not going to simply vanish. Not only two years out with as much as has been invested. Spectacular failures usually take a decade to gestate.

Till then, the shills will continue to hawk, demean, and argue.

And contrary to their own assertions, they neither hear, nor will listen to anything that conflicts their chosen stance.

Yup, we've heard this before - iBiquity will continue to demand fees and percentages. The new 10db increase in FM-HD, if approved, will require the replacement of all hardware, and won't happen:

http://hdradiofarce.blogspot.com/2007/12/wsms-chief-engineer-on-hd-radio.html

Major broadcaster stocks are down 90%, and Clear Channel is down 2/3 and up for sale. CC is stopping all investments in the future and pulled the plug on 294 HD Format Lab channels:

"CLEAR CHANNEL PULLS THE PLUG ON SOME HD RADIO STATIONS"

"After conducting a survey of 340 HD2 stations to determine their programming needs, the folks at Clear Channel have dumped a number of their HD 'Format Lab' stations, due to a lack of demand."

http://talentfilter.blogspot.com/2008/02/clear-channel-pulls-plug-on-some-hd.html

"Clear Channel's murky future"

"Sad because eliminating new hires (including sellers), failing to replace those who leave, stopping all investment in the future, and halting all advertising and research is the equivalent of saying that necessity requires us to strangle the goose that lays the golden eggs, even as the goose is up for sale."

http://www.hear2.com/2008/01/clear-channels.html

Stations will get tired of paying fees and associated costs with running HD, with no chance of ever generating an ROI.

David has been to busy eating crow these days to do much of that. I just picked up the March Monitoring times and the word from Ken Reitz who was there at the CES show shares my opinion of the state HD semiconductor development. He things Samsung will have next generation HD chips next fall at the earliest so any new radio set developments are moved into 2009. In ant event the outlook for portable HD radios is poor due to power and antenna requirements.

Yeah, we all got that and your reason for posting yet another one liner is what?

Here is a clue for you bozo, snip a post to show the context of your

THANKS everybody. I talked with the powers that be today and they seemed to better understand what I was talking about. Unfortunately the tweaking will continue next week with company reps by conference call. So, I'll add these new things too. Thank you all for your Telamon The "Clue" Lies in Not Snipping . . .

Old Subject-Line : Owner of MyerEmco a lier!
http://groups.google.com/group/rec.radio.shortwave/msg/5f6fa52d2cbb0682
New Subject-Line : IBOC "HD" Radio : Owner of MyerEmco a Lier !

I have no problem with IBOCcrock or others doing their Anti-IBOC-HD-Radio-iBiquity THINGEE : A long as the Subject-Line refects the Message Content. Although much of what they write is actually Anti AM/FM Radio as 'old' Media and Promoting New Media.

Telamon - Who Authorized 'you' To Edit Other Peoples Posts ?

Teli -Are You Now This Newsgroups Editor-in-Chief ?

FWIW - I am only seeking Truth in the Subject-Line.

If the Post is 'about' : IBOC, HD Radio and iBiquity and it nothing more than a Rant or Cut-and-Paste Wall-Paper Message : Then Label it as such.

Then the Readers can decide for themselve from the Subject-Line : To Read -or- Not To Read and not have to Open-Up the Message to Figure what it is about.

Once Again You Attack -and- I React : It's Ping-Pong !
-hence- the addition of the "PONG" of the Subject-Line so the Readers will Know that this is a Reply in a Personal Game of Newsgroup Ping-Pong.

Telamon - That is "Mister Bozo" to You ~ RHF

2 - Pow Have At It : Bop-the-Bozo {Imagine It's Me}

Hello Everyone - Once Again It's RHF's :
Put an "IBOC" at the Start of the Subject-Line RANT :
As long as the Post has : IBOC -or- HD Radio -or- iBiquity in the Subject-Line : I do not have a problem with any Post about the iBiquity Digital Corporation's IBOC Broadcast Scheme for AM/FM "HD" {Digital} Radio in the USA.

BD,

Yes their are Very Good and come with a relative HIgh Price compaired to 'other' Stuff that is out there.

FWIW - I myself presently am using an
RF Systems Magnetic Longwire Balun (MLB)
http://www.universal-radio.com/catalog/antsup/1484.html http://www.rf-systems.nl/pdf/mlb.pdf connected to a 25 Feet long RG-6 Quad-Shield Coax Cable feed-in-line that is connected to a :

Multi-Element "Flat-Wire WSW <-> ENE
Shortwave Listening (SWL) Antenna :
Five 1/4 WL Element 5-Wire Flat TV Rotor Cable about 100 Foot Long Horizontal Wire Antenna Laid-Out : Feed-Point-End WSW to ENE Far-End
~39 Foot Feed-Point Apex and ~8 Feet Far-End Horizontal but runs into a Sloping Hill Side at the Far-End

But I have been told that the WinRadio LWA-0130 Long Wire Antenna Adapter does perform better than the RF Systems Magnetic Longwire Balun (MLB) as a "Receive Only" Matching Transfromer for Shortwave Radio Listening (SWL) and I have One that I want to

I'm not quite sure what you have there but chances are the S0239 connector is across a transformer winding and will look like a short with a multi-meter at DC but it should not be a short at RF frequencies.
Check the coax for shorts or opens. If the coax looks OK then the antenna UNUN might have a problem. Make sure you are connecting the antenna to the proper jack on the radio. I looks like two jacks on the back of the radio are are similar looking.

Well the NorthWest antenna seems to be a well built commercial unit.
The matching transformer/balun's don't usually give trouble when well made and tested in the factory. You cannot test a matching transformer with a multimeter as Telemon said.

What I meant for you to do was disconnect the RG58 coax from the balun and then test the coax carefully for continuity on the outside shield and the inner core seperately. If that is okay then I don't know what?
Maybe then the radio is faulty at the internal/external antenna switch, as you say it works fine on the whip.

As for grounding the radio or balun - i wouldn't worry about that. I use them all the time in the field without a ground, although a ground is desirable (but not essential).

Good luck

Hi all!

Ham operators will soon be landing on Clipperton Island and will be activating this much sought after entity. The plan is to operate on all of the ham bands, frequencies listed below, for about 10 days, March 7 to 17. If any of you heard the recent Ducie Island operation, this should be just as easy, if not easier.

J.

CW SSB RTTY

Garth - You want to Test the Coax Cable by itself.

TESTING YOUR COAX CABLE :

Remove the Coax Cable from the Matching Transformer and the Radio.

Bring the two ends of the Coax Cable close together and Examine the Coax Cable for Damage along it's Length and around each of the End-Plugs.

Test - Center Pin -to- Center Pin : You should have Continuity {Short 0~1 Ohms}

Test - Outer Shield -to- Outer Shield : You should have Continuity {Short 0~1 Ohms}

Next take each of the PL-259 Plugs and;
Test - Center Pin -to- Outer Shield : You should have No-Continuity {Open Infinity 10^10 Ohms} for both.

TESTING THE MATCHING TRANSFORMER :

First think about them : They are basically two Coils of Wire wrapped around a Ferrite Core. The Wire in each if the Coils is only maybe a Foot to a few Feet Long. If you were to Test each of these Wires by themselves they would read Zero Ohms
-because- After all they are Short pieces of Copper Wire.

The Pictures of your "World-Listener SWL End-Feed Antenna made by NW Antennas shows a Matching Tranformer in a PVC Pipe Housing with an SO-239 Plug on one-end and the Wire Antenna Element coming out of the other-end.
http://my.tbaytel.net/mccourts/homepage.html
* Two Transformer Windings with a Common Ground at the Outer-Ring of the SO-239 Jack.
* So you have three possible 'Connections' to Test for Continuity {Near Short} [Good] -or- NO Continuity {Open Circuit} [Bad]

Question - What is Electrical Continuity ?
http://www.wisegeek.com/what-is-electrical-continuity.htm

Testing the Primary (1) Winding of the Matching Transformer : Center Pin -to- Outer-Ring of the SO-239 Jack should be Continuity {Near Short}.

Testing the Secondary (4,9,X) Winding of the Matching Transformer :
Outer-Ring of the SO-239 Jack -to- Wire Antenna Element should be Continuity {Near Short}

Testing Both Windings of the Matching Transformer : Center Pin of the SO-239 Jack -to- Wire Antenna Element should be Continuity {Near Short}

=IF= You have NO Continuity for any of these three Tests then you have a "BAD" MatchingTransformer.

hope this helps - iane ~ RHF {pomkia}

- Thanks Telamon,

Yes - Thank You Telamon :o) ~ RHF

- One thing I enjoy about this hobby is that there

Life Long Learning is Good.

- I checked and it is connected to the correct jack.

Good.

- Is it possible that since I have not yet grounded the antenna

Yes.

You hit it right on the head about who we have running for President. Nothing but a bunch of corporate controlled lackeys that are against the average American. So much for the constitutional republic called the United States.

After you get any of the three, you can expect the SHTF. You've got a woman with no clue how to be a president and to lead other than socialist psycho babble talk. The other is talking about change but you rarely hear him express what changes will take place. The other clueless clown wants to keep us in Iraq for 100 years meanwhile our economy goes into the drain, our borders are broken, etc.

You can list the problems this country has at this point from falling home values, to a stagnant economy, to high oil prices, to skyrocketing food prices, credit crunch, foreclosures, etc.

Not to mention a skyrocketing national debt owed to Europeans, Japanese, and Chinese. That's your so called fiscal conservatism, isn't it boys?

Gee, that's funny while your boy McCain bailed out Keating and his cronies. Not to mention divorced his wife after she was paralyzed in a car accident. Or how about him being the snitch for Hanoi. Before blowing your mouth off, maybe it wouldn't hurt to find out what a lot of the other people at the Hanoi Hilton Hellhole really thought of McConvict.

"Radio's Losing Strategy"

5. iPods, Smartphones and the Internet are cooler than radio. Their solution: prop up the uncoolest consumer electronics device of all time - HD radio. Even Joan Rivers is cooler than HD. Make people actually think radio has a future in the digital world using a David Copperfield magic act that shows the consumer a digital radio and then presto, change-o - the compelling, unique programming disappears (or never appears in the first place). Predictable results: None. It's a stiff and everyone knows it including and especially consumers. Better alternative: pull the plug on your HD equipment and vow to never say the letters HD in a sentence again. HD radio is a meaningless, outdated radio concept that has never and will never attract an audience.

Radio has always been Radio's worst enemy. More often than not relying on gimmicks, giveaways, and format, rather than creative competition, talent, and imagination.

As David said, 'it works.'

Yes, and no. Gimmicks are what JD Spangler refers to as Narcotics of Arbitron. Steven Ennen referred to them as 'Arbitricks.' Overresearched playlists. Focus grouped format clocks, on-air language, and content produce upticks in the numbers. But at what cost?

Too many of my GM's have, when presented with the loss of a competitor have taken the opportunity to try less hard. Usually with the epigram: "Where they going to go?" Meaning, the audience has no choice...we've got the music.

In every case, this resulted in a demoralizing fall in the marketplace. And, in most cases, an exit of the format to a new and even more overresearched basket of fresh gimmicks.

While I'm fully aware that every day, every year, radio stations have to evolve to stay alive, fresh and listenable, what so damned few are doing is injecting creative talent into the airchain. So Radio becomes staid, boring, the same ol'-same ol'. At the same time, abandoning formats, histories and heritage at an alarming rate.

This is what happens when you treat your listeners like commodities.

So, Radio turns to techological solutions. In the face of the competition of customized and mass customized program offerings.

Stereo was a big deal when it was under development. And when it hit the air in a solid, stable, compatible form, it sold radios. But content was/is still what drives listening. Stereo, then as it is today, was widely misunderstood. And listener satisfaction came from just seeing the pilot lit. Even when the airchain was still mono. Why? Because content drove the listening. Today, while nearly every FM Station in the US (but not all) is broadcasting in stereo, with blend circuits, low signal, poorly aligned receivers and high mulitipath affecting signal quality, as much as 2/3's of listening is in mono at any given moment. Nobody complains. Because the content is still there. And quality is consistent.

Digital radio, until it begins to provide, present, and promote content that's in demand, offers only technology. And, at today's state of the art, either no signal, or dropouts and drop backs to analog...which offer an abrupt change in quality. None of which are desireable. All of which kill listening.

In this light, HD Radio is only a gimmick. And only a techological gimmick at that.

Radio, has, once again, turned to tricks, rather than compete with its most powerful tools.

The cost of this will be dear. As it has already shown to be.

Sadly, though, because buying equipment and flashing the gimmick light is less costly than actual competitive programming, this is where Radio's attention will remain, until either an FCC mandate levels the playing field, or HD radio goes away.

Either way, it's going to be a looooong ride down.

Meanwhile, shortwave, which, as world politics increases in volatility, has also turned to technological solutions because they're easier and cheaper, will discover the folly of this strategy the first time an international broadcaster is turned off due to content. Or the internet is suspended within a nation during crisis.

The point of shortwave radio was that it could be blasted into the ether and provide information and entertainment that crossed all lines without preference, without hindrance, and in a manner that's easy and inexpensive to receive.

In an increasingly volatile world, this single tool will once again reveal it's usefulness. Sadly, it will take an object lesson in the vulnerabilities of the alternative systems at a critical moment to make that point.

"HD Alliance: And I've Got A Bridge in Brooklyn to Sell You" Tuesday, February 05, 2008

I'll admit it.

The HD Alliance has got my number.

It is the most incredible or should I say incredulous group of intelligent people in the radio industry. The only problem is, they are not giving you any credit for being intelligent.

Thus the recent headlines that 2007 was a "breakthrough year" for HD radio sales.

It's getting to the point that whenever Peter Ferrara says anything, I don't believe it. This is nothing personal about Peter. It's about the tactics of the HD Alliance.

Supposedly iBiquity, the manufacturers of this gift from heaven called HD radio, claims to have sold 330,000 HD receivers last year -- a whopping 725% increase from the 40,000 sets purchased a year earlier. They cite cheaper prices and availability at Best Buy and Wal-Mart at the new low-low price of just $99.

First, Steve Jobs would take hemlock if he sold only 330,000 units last year.

Ferrara apparently told Inside Radio that he thinks a million of these needless, horrible sounding and redundant sets could be sold next year. Write that down somewhere -- one million HD radios next year.

Apparently he hasn't gotten through to his pals at the major groups yet.

You see, they are having tough times right now -- check their shareholder value, I mean stock prices. The group heads apparently don't want to spend squat on compelling new programming for HD subchannels when they sure as hell aren't spending it on their bread and butter terrestrial signals.

Ferrara thinks that when the cost of manufacturing HD sets gets low enough then the manufacturers won't make analog sets.

And that is probably the only way HD radio set sales will increase.

Then will the major radio groups lead the way by starting to program really cool stuff on HD channels? Notice I said "really cool stuff" because the next generation has no use for HD radio programming same old, same old at any price. Hell, if you could have either an iPod or an HD radio, guess the one they would choose?

Okay, a new laptop or an HD radio. Or, maybe a new mobile phone (which they need every two years anyway) or an HD radio -- well, you get the point.

Guys and gals -- see if Peter Ferrara can sell ice to the Eskimos, swamp land in Florida and all the rest.

He may get some people to believe his hype about HD radio, but the owners are too smart for that.

In fact, if he succeeds spinning for the HD Alliance, hire him away and offer him a sales job in radio once again -- that is, if the self-destructive owners haven't already outsourced their sales to Google by then.

Seriously, try to buy an HD radio in Wal-Mart. See what you get. I've had readers tell me that they've been "walked over" to satellite radios when they ask their young sales associate if they can see an HD radio.

I finally found an HD radio display Saturday. It was at Ultimate Electronics in Scottsdale. I barely found a station that could be received and it sure wasn't worth the price of the radio -- which was cheap looking. (No one else in this crowded store wasted their time at the display).

It would be hilarious if it weren't so serious.

The answer is...

Internet radio. Cell phone content. Podcasting. Pandora. AM/FM streaming. Social networking.

It's not HD radio in spite of what the HD Alliance professional spin-doctors keep saying.

"this is where Radio's attention will remain, until either an FCC mandate levels the playing field, or HD radio goes away."

There are no reclaimation requirements for HD Radio, so a mandate would never happen. In the UK, analog was threatened to be turned off, but DAB is failing anyway. A mandate would make no diffference, because consumers no longer buy radios, and this would put an end to terrestrial radio. As for compelling content, it was tried with DAB, but it made no difference - too late, consumers have switched to the Internet, cell phones, and iPods:

"Radio: The U.K.'s Digital death notice"

"Unlike HD Radio in this country, where most side-channels are on automatic pilot - the U.K. digital channels were, for the most part, well crafted and programmed. Even then, the feedback we were getting from our U.K. users was: why buy a DAB receiver when one could get the same channels on the Internet for free?"

http://gormanmediablog.blogspot.com/2008/03/radio-uks-digital-death-notice.html

"Digital Audio Broadcasting Systems and Their Impact on the Terrestrial Radio Broadcast Service"

15. We will not establish a deadline for radio stations to convert to digital broadcasting. Stations may decide if, and when, they will provide digital service to the public. Several reasons support this decision. First, unlike television licensees, radio stations are under no statutory mandate to convert to a digital format. Second, a hard deadline is unnecessary given that DAB uses an in-band technology that does not require the allocation of additional spectrum. Thus, the spectrum reclamation needs that exist for DTV do not exist here.
Moreover, there is no evidence in the record that marketplace forces cannot propel the DAB conversion forward, and effective markets tend to provide better solutions than regulatory schemes.

16. iBiquity argues that in the early stages of the transition, the Commission should favor and protect existing analog signals. It states that this could be accomplished by limiting the power level and bandwidth occupancy of the digital carriers in the hybrid mode. At some point in the future, when the Commission determines there is sufficient market penetration of digital receivers, iBiquity asserts that the public interest will be best served by reversing this presumption to favor digital operations. At that time, broadcasters will no longer need to protect analog operations by limiting the digital signal and stations should have the option to implement all-digital broadcasts. We decline to adopt iBiquity's presumption policy because it is too early in the DAB conversion process for us to consider such a mechanism. We find that such a policy, if adopted now, may have unknown and unintended consequences for a new technology that has yet to be accepted by the public or widely adopted by the broadcast industry.

http://www.epa.gov/fedrgstr/EPA-IMPACT/2007/August/Day-15/i15922.htm

As far as dropouts, it's too late:

"Is HD Radio Toast?"

"There are serious issues of coverage. Early adopters who bought HD radios report serious drop-outs, poor coverage, and interference. The engineers of Ibiquity may argue otherwise and defend the system, but the industry has a serious PR problem with the very people we need to get the word out on HD... In other words, everything you can find on the regular FM dial... The word has already gotten out about HD Radio. People who have already bought an HD Radio are telling others of their experience (mostly bad) and no amount of marketing will reverse this."

http://www.fmqb.com/article.asp?id=487772

Even if the 10db power increase is approved for FM-HD, stations can't afford the upgrade:

"Natterings of a naysayer"

"The 10db power increase that's being talked about for FM may help the digital but will have a negative impact on the analog, which is currently paying ALL the bills. As an example, even a well-integrated 92 and/or 67 kHz relatively narrow-band subcarriers can wreak multipath havoc with an FM signal in some markets. The sheer capital cost of the power increase (if approved) will be staggering considering most of the current hardware and ancillary equipment will have to be replaced."

"Where robust in reach, radio is an ailing medium that is undergoing yet another adjustment to bring expenses inline with revised revenue; so another big outlay in capital is not likely. Many station staff level people look on HD as something that was added to their task list with no operational funding and dwindling resources. Sales people are concerned that additional channels may compete for revenue they have running on other stations even in their own cluster. Again, I am talking about the real world conditions, as they exist down here at the street level not in some high-rise corporate office hundreds of miles away from where the action is."

Watt Hairston, Chief Engineer, WSM

Like it or not, it is over for HD Radio.

What you're not seeing is Radio's penchant for laying the stinking, rotting corpse out on the front lawn and spending enormous resources to try to revive it.

Nothing with HD radio is going to happen overnight.

And the last gasp WILL be an FCC mandate. There are too many in and out of the Congress and the FCC who are committed to digital broadcasting. And Powell's FCC mandated that all new modulation schemes be digital. That mandate flies in the face of FCC denials to the contrary today.

You don't believe anything else that comes out of Gettysburg. Why the hell would you believe this one thing?

Makes no sense.

Oh, and I forgot to mention Satellite Radio, mobile Pandora and Slacker, Last.fm, and that Chrysler will be installing WiMax in-dash withing the next two years - you can guess what in-dash WiMax will have on the other automakers. And, looks like the satrad merger is not going through, so iNiquity won't be able to force IBOC into nonexistent interoperable satrad receivers - meanwhile, Ford is targeting a 70% installation rate for satrad, has made it standard in Canada, and other auto manufacturers are upgrading their installation rates for satrad:

"Ford Gets More Sirius"

"Sirius Satellite Radio and Ford announced today that they are targeting a 70% installation rate for the Ford and Mercury brand of automobiles. Ford had previously announced that their Lincoln brand was effectively at standard equipment. This commitment with the Ford and Mercury brands is a substantial step for Sirius, as it brings Ford up to a similar installation pace as Chrysler."

http://siriusbuzz.com/ford-gets-more-sirius.php

"Ford to make Sirius Factory Standard in Canada"

"Here's some incredible news for Sirius Canada: Ford of Canada has announced that they will make Sirius Satellite Radio a factory-standard feature in virtually all Fords sold in Canada, by the end of 2007. That's a total of 20 vehicle lines. Absolutely great news, and hopefully a sign of things to come for the U.S."

"And the last gasp WILL be an FCC mandate"

That's just your useless opinion - prove it. As I said, a mandate would make no difference - it will not force consumers to buy HD radios.

Oh, and all of that money spent on HD conversion was just taxpayers money bilked out of Congress:

"DEAD AIR: Radio's great leap forward stalling in the Valley"

"KMBH, the National Public Radio affiliate based in Harlingen, switched to HD this year, but the change did not boost its inconsistent analog signal in the upper Valley. Monsignor Pedro Briseño, the manager of the station and its television affiliate, did not return multiple calls and an e-mail requesting comment on the station's shift. A fundraising campaign on the station asked local listeners to contribute to the upgrade earlier this year, touting the change as a service to listeners that would improve their experience. The station's business manager said she could not reveal the cost of the upgrade, saying all media requests have to be routed to Briseño. A public information request faxed to the station Monday evening has not yet received a response. Organizations that receive government funding are subject to state and federal open records laws, but have seven business days to respond to information requests."

http://www.themonitor.com/news/radio_7098___article.html/digital_new.html

"HD Radio: Will More Awareness Translate To Sales?"

"Unfortunately, Ibiquity does not: Yes, they have gotten many radio stations to make the $100,000 or so investment required to add HD Radio broadcasting, but what the leave out of their PR spin is that MANY of these stations were Public Radio/NPR stations that had their equipment paid for by special funding from Congress. So tell me, senior executives from, say, Sony, Mitsubishi, Best Buy, etc.: How do you feel about Ibiquity''s lobbyists getting US taxpayers to pick up the tab for many of their transmitter sales? Wouldn''t it be great if your lobbyists could get Congress to mandate that US taxpayers be required to buy your products, too? Do you even slightly care? Ibiquity will take their money and run, and HD Radio will join a long list of failed formats, like Dolby FM radio, Elcassete, mini disk (in the US), etc."

If they want radio, yes, they will. The inertia of 300 million radio users in the US alone will not abandon the medium overnight.

Each of which took a decade to die.

MiniDisk is still used in many radio stations. Even as late as the last days of WNIB, the commercials were still on MiniDisk.

And how long did the FMX experiment last?

Nobody's saying you're wrong about HD.

Only that it won't disappear overnight.

And it won't go away without a hellaceous fight. Too much has been invested in it. By broadcasters. By FCC.

The existing 800 million analog radios are keeping radio alive. No one except radio-geeks buys radios anymore, as proven by the pathetic HD Radio sales figures. Radio is a dying medium, and stations will not continue to upgrade to IBOC, as IBOC conversions have stalled.

Besides, the FCC can't mandate a technology that simply does not work:

"Bellwether BE Makes Some Changes?"

"It's probably no secret that the rate of HD Radio adoption has slowed in the United States. There are new opportunities that exist in other countries; Mexico and Brazil come to mind; sales there are few but promising. The whole industry is in a bit of a null in the HD transition but I don't think anyone's long-term plans have changed."

"HD Interference: Not Just For AM Anymore"

"Radio World Engineering Extra dropped a bomb this month with a very provocative cover story: 'What Are We Doing to Ourselves, Exactly?' Written by Doug Vernier, the man who authored the technical specifications for an ongoing Corporation for Public Broadcasting-sponsored HD Radio interference analysis, the report is the first of its kind to document interference between FM-HD stations around the country. Using anecdotal reportage, some sophisticated contour-mapping, and presumably 'early data' from the CPB study, Vernier's article conclusively proves how stations running in hybrid HD/analog mode can (and do) interfere somewhat significantly with not only themselves, but their neighbors on the FM dial."

"Citadel Halts AM Nighttime IBOC Operation Amid Complaints"

"An excerpt from his memo to staff reads: In response to the lackluster performance, the limited benefit and various reports of significant interference, Citadel is suspending nighttime AM HD operations at this time. Please reinstate your previous procedures for daytime-only HD operation as soon as possible."

http://www.radioworld.com/pages/s.0121/t.8847.html

"Editorial: AM IBOC in Distress?"

"Citadel Director of Corporate Engineering Martin Stabbert embodied questions about the efficacy of full-time AM HD when he ordered all his AMs that had already converted to cease transmitting HD at night, using language that must have given Ibiquity officials heartburn. Separately and for different immediate reasons, Cox, in a "let's wait and see" move, has tried HD on most of its AM stations but is taking it off the air day and night, once tested at each facility."

http://www.rwonline.com/pages/s.0044/t.9917.html

"AM Broadcasters Back Away from HD Deployment"

"This is a major setback for the adoption of HD Radio, especially on the AM dial, and Citadel is the first large broadcast conglomerate to back away from full deployment of the HD broadcast technology.

Although the company's gone out of its way not to characterize its move an indictment of iBiquity's proprietary digital broadcast standard, the problems with AM HD broadcast interference are well-known and -documented."

Hello,

Any of you folks use the Grove pushbutton coax switch, SW C01 ?

No idea who the actual mfg. is.

If so, opinions on would be appreciated ?
(receiving only application; to a scanner)

Thanks,
Bob

"Nobody's saying you're wrong about HD."

Yes you are - the same useless counter-arguments about FCC mandates.

No question.

That said, you fail to take into consideration the blindspot of US broadcasters to deal in reality, here.

They will not let digital radio go away without a fight.

A Reminder - Wishing and Hoping that IBOC and "HD"

Most likely an FFC Rule or Regulation will be Issued in One-to-Three Years for new "All Mode" AM/FM/DS Radios
-aka- All Digital IBOC "HD" AM/FM Radio with Direct Satellite
(DS) Plug-and-Play. Once that happens Digital Radio Broadcasting will be "The Standard" in the USA within Five Years.

Then pay attention. I"m NOT saying your wrong about HD. Only that you're wrong about the commitment to keep it alive.

It's a boondoggle. But it's not going to just go away. There are too many committed, too much money spent, and the FCC has already mandated that all new modulation schemes be digital.

HD may not work. But it's not going away without a fight. It will take years to wither and die.

Keep in mind that AM stereo installations stalled, too, fairly early on. And promotion was highly ineffective. But it took 20 years to go away. Even in light of the FCC mandate that all X-band AM's be C-QUAM AM stereo.

WLS is still AM stereo at night.

FCC mandates come and go. And FCC has already laid the groundwork for an HD mandate.

Why you'd believe nothing else that comes out of Gettysburg, but hang on this one statement is beyond me.

HD radio may fail. But it will take years to go away.

That is Wishful Dreaming.

Management -implies-and-infers- The Equal Ability to Mismanage things as well.

- Nothing with HD radio is going to happen overnight.

That is true : the conversion from Analog TV to Digital TV did not occur overnight and we a simply in Phase # 1 of the Analog AM/FM Radio conversion to Digital AM/FM Radio.

- And the last gasp WILL be an FCC mandate.

IMHO That will simply be Phase # 2 with an FCC Rule or Regulation will be Issued to 'mandate' new "All Mode" AM/FM/DS Radios -aka- All Digital IBOC "HD" AM/FM Radio with Direct Satellite (DS) Plug-and-Play.
Once that happens Digital Radio Broadcasting will be "The Standard" in the USA within Five Years.

- There are too many in and out of the Congress and TV and Radio are the Live Blood of Politics in the Age of

Hence the End-a-Round by the FCC for new "All Mode"

What is a good website that I can find HF ham radio frequencies? I do not know the spacing of frequencies on all of the bands. Any help would be thankfull. I noticed on the recent posting about Clipperton that the spacing is not 5 KHz.

For most purposes, the ham bandplans only limit which emissions and license clases may be used within a group of frequencies. Within those groups, there are no specific frequency spacings. One may use any frequency within a band pursuant to emission specifications, license type, and good amateur practice.

Check ARRL.org for more specific details.

See: www.arrl.org/FandES/field/regulations/Hambands_color.pdf

Except for the 60m allocations, there is no "channelization" of the amateur radio bands.

LMFAO at the pathological liar!

Lying 'tard boy, much like the other debutante, malcontent, faux boys who inhabit the lace we call RRS.

You, on the other hand are nothing more than a sorry little homosexual 'tard

Liar, liar, pantalunes on fire! (1)

New history will be made when we crush CanaDuh!

Kan you just imagining that, you little faggot Cannucky boy?

Anybody, even Bozo, is worth more than some dumbass, faggot, Canuck!

Get busy, boy!

But you can't prove it, retard boy!

I know you faggots have dreams

Blow it out your ass, you dumbass Canadian! You and the rest of your dumbass countrymen, and women too!

You'd not be very happy if I returned, little bitch boy!

Go get some IBOCock, 'tard boy, and bring home a taste for yer mama.

If you'd like to call me, I'm here to help you until 0330 GMT at:

Go give your boyfriend a blow job!

Talk about misery, you're in f00kin CanaDuh, boy!

Something for your faux Hispanic cock sucking brain to think about, eh?

Or better yet, go get yourself some IBO Cock!

Poor little cocksucker just had it handed to him

Eh? You sum dumass Canucuy bithyboy...

As long as it screws you Canucks, I'm a happy camper!

They are mere asswipes, suitable for flushing.

That's because you're a fucking liar!

Cry me a f00kin river.

Awwwww... the poor whiny dumbass Canuck is back at it again today.

Huh... you be just another stupid white boy outta Cleveland...
I suggest you get together with your "significant other" and bump butt with each other,

Because I hate White Boy Canucks who suck cock...

Best you shuffle down the alley! That's what your mama wanted!

Crazy Retarded Australian People?

"Even 2 cents is more than a totally worthless Canuck"

Funny how the US Govt. sent me over $50,000 last year

You can preDICK all you want, you fraudulent cock sucking, pathologically lying old bastard boy!

Hey, dumbfuck Canuck, I was not asked to leave!

I don't use Chink stuff

I went and bought ammo... I still gots it case them tard boys such as edweena gets stirred up.

And 10,000 rounds isn't a lot.

It was Russian ammo. I don't like the Chinese stuff.

Now where did I put that other case of ammo..

I don't use Chink ammo.

That's not Canuckian, boy!

Kiss my ass, pedant!

I'm LMFAO, Mr. Gay-Lick!

Obfuscate, you little prancer!

LMAO at the 'tard.

Thing is, you 'tards are pretty fixated upon one set of parameters.
That is after all why you are considered to be 'tards!

As always, your head is up your f00kin ass.

You fuckin' Liberal asswipes are always ready to give somebodys else's goodies away...

And, hopefully, my dumbass cousin in Mill Valley will leave me her Corvette.

Obviously, you leep your head up your f00kin ass all day long.

I don't 'fear' homos, oh faux one!

Liar, liar, pantalunes on fire! (2)

Apparently you are the 'bendover boy'....

Do you spit or swallow?

Oh, I certainly have, time after time.

At least I went farther than you!

Good lubricant for you and the boys?

It's what dxAce uses!

that's good enough for me!

One can never slide the BS by dxAce

Not as well as you, fudge pack.

Go for it, dumbass!

Oh come on... it's Fall forward and Spring back. Everyone knows that!

Hit the road, drug addled fool.

Hey, I love kickin' gay-lick ass!

Pretty much what I indicated to you a while back, you f00kin prancer.

The only thing you know about short wave is that that is what your mother gave you when she sent your f00kin ass packin' outta Cleveland.

Screw the drug addled retards.

Nah, I only attack the messenger when he/she/it is obviously drug addled.

So, beat the rush and get the hell off of RRS, you f00kin retard.

Well, in you, we have a drug addled retard in our midst.

Get over it, you fake Hispanic piece of excrement.

And when you do confront HD, you'll have Cocksucker Dave and
The Prancer Boys to thank for it.

Damn... I'm of mixed race ancestry myself, what ever should I do?

Next time we come over the pond once again to save your sorry ass's we'll have to dismantle that stuff.

Heck, I bought 1000 shares of FSEAX the other day.

Don't do business with the Huntington Investment Company, in particular a fellow named Joseph Klein.

Not at all, we are both Miami Indians. ya got a problem with that, boy?

Ya right, suck my dick...

Believe it, it's like a dream to be with you again...

Then hit the road, you drug addled retard.

Just like you wish that you worked for me, retard!

Proven time and time again, fudge pack.

Get it, retard?

Dey done unnerstannn that us nateev boyyys R real Mericans!

I sure he is.

Insert your Gay-Lick reply here, boy:

And yet another Liberal rant

Sorry, I'm not a racist like you, Edweenie...

Nah, he was fake little cock sucker like you!

Your pathological lying is an offense to me, and more than likely an offense to God as well.

No medications here, cock sucker boy..

Stuff a watermelon up it

But that stuff isn't what dxAce uses!

Come on now, you being a nice Liberal, Carbon Footprint, Al Gore, Cock Sucking kinda Canuck Bastard..

I won R plantation up nord, dat dem dum ass Canuckys be oween us, ya be 'standin me?

CanaDuh is stupidity!

Stupid little pussy faggot!

Liar, liar, pantalunes on fire! (3)

Mr. Edweenie, the forces of Good are gonna come visit your sorry fake Hispanic White Boy Ass if you keep it up!

Pay attention, cock sucker...

LMFAO as I sit and look at my royalty cheques...

You've done this before, cock sucker...

LMFAO at yet another dumb friggin Canuck..

I know it may be hard, but as you withdraw, it will shrink away..

Oh damn, I guess we pissed another wanker off, Cuz..

I get my ride be fixed, I be cruisin to be givin ya da shake, yu be knowin, eh?

Try again, shithead.....

Dem Canucky boyz are dumaz rasissts..

We gone be sen u to sumplac bad boy... u be so bad weben the reel Canuckys won wan u.

Fookin bustards! Like Edweenie!

Best you wake up soon... fookin retard leetle beetch..

Fookin 'retard.

Indeed, I'm now at WAR with Canuckistan..

May the Great Spirit help the hapless bastards.

Actually VA facilities are quite good, but if you Canucky niggahs poke around one might find a lot of things wrong.

At any rate, I'd bet it beats the Canucky Third World state of care...

CanaDuh sucks...

Wanna go to war, shit head?

Think you might win? Think you got a chance?

If you don't... I'd keep my fookin Canucky mouth shut, boy...

Meanwhile, I plan for the Spring campaign, looking forward to the Blind River Massacre.

I collect stamps!

The push button ones are generally junk - they have a very low channel separation that will leak signal between the various antennas.

Go for a conventional one with a high dB channel separation, better than 60 dB.
I think MFJ make a reasonable one, but there are other better and more expensive ones.

Robert 11,

Take a look at Model AB-90 - Cable TV Push Button Switch for Cable, Dish or Video Games
https://www.homenetworksupply.com/products_details.aspx?theme_id=&department_id=&sub_id=&product_id=5854125807
* High 90 dB Isolation which eliminates cross-talk between connected devices.
* All Connectors 75 Ohm and F Type connections.
* List Price : $6.99 +S&H

Sure does look a lot like the Grove DC-2 GHZ Antenna Switch http://www.grove-ent.com/SWC01.html
Grove Part # SWC01 - Price $19.95 + S&H ?
Hey their Coax Switch even has an AB-90 printed on it.

+IF+ You are using RG-6 Quad-Shield Coax Cable that has
"F" Connectors on the Ends either would not be a bad Switch to work with those Cables. -but-if- You are using Coax Cable that has PL-259 Plugs on the ends -then- You would need to use One or more extra Connector Adapters and that is not the best way of doing things -imho- Because each Adapter has it's own Insertion Loss and is a potential point of both Mechanical and Electrical Failure in your RF Signal Path.

Check-Out the "Workman" CB Coax / Antenna Switch Boxes with SO-239 Jacks : They will work as well as the TV Coax Switches with "F" Connectors and not require the use of Adapters to use them.

Workman Model CX-3 Coaxial Antenna Switch US$17
http://cgi.ebay.com/_W0QQitemZ380002151194
Four Switch Positions : Out 1, Out 2, Out 3 + OFF

Rated at 1000 Watts
Priced at US$17 with Free S&H

TIP # 1 - Ground the Coax Antenna Switch's Metal Body.

NOTE - The "OFF" Position may simply mean that the Radio-to-Antenna Switch is 'Open' with No Antenna Input Connected to the Radio.

TIP # 2 - If you are only using two Antennas and One Radio the you have a 'spare' OUT Switch Position that can be used.
Take an PL-259 Plug and Solder a Heavy Wire across the back of it from the Center Pin -to- the Outer Ring; making it a Direct Short "Shunt" Plug. Scew this Shunt Plug into the un-used OUT Switch Position. Now when you are Not using your Radio : You can turn the Coax Antenna Switch to the Shunt Plug's OUT Position and your Radio's Antenna Input will be protected from most of the things that can come down your Coax Cables into the House and to your Radio. {Except for a Very Near or Direct Lightning Strike.}

choices check-out this Universal-Radio.Com webpage :

When the RF Systems MLB first came out some years ago, a mate of mine bought one.
I couldn't wait to test it against the homebrew matching transformers (9:1) that a ham had made for me. I and a couple of other lads did comprehensive testing between the homebrew MLB's and the fancy expensive RF Systems one.

We could hardly tell any difference between our el cheapo's (about $5) and the RF systems, with a bit of a bias towards ours being better.

If you are the least bit handy roll your own.

Telamon,

In reality the 'portable' HD-Radio will be part of the Third Wave of HD-Radio deployment and adoption.

The First Wave - Presently there are first and second generation HD-Radios for the Home; and these Home
HD-Radios do not have Power as an identifiable issue :
Because they run-off of the House's AC Power {Mains}.

The Second Wave - The "Big Advancement" toward the Earliy Adoption of HD-Radio will come in the placement of HD-Radios in Cars and Trucks. Again like in the Home Power is not and identifiable issue with HD-Radio in the Car since the HD-Radio runs-off the Car's self-charging 12 Volt Systems.

NOTE - A Rental Car with and HD-Radio in it Exposes 50 or more Radio Listeners to HD-Radio each year. Allow them to Experience HD-Radio for themselves.

IMHO - The History of HD-Radio will follow the path of FM Radio becoming 'intergrated' over time into the now

"Ubiquitous" AM/FM Radio.

Sometime In-the-Future - When the FCC mandates that all new Radios will be fully Digital "All Mode" AM/FM/DS Radios
-aka- All Digital IBOC "HD" AM/FM Radio with Direct Satellite
(DS) Plug-and-Play. Once that FCC Requirement happens Digital Radio Broadcasting will be "The Standard" in the USA within Five Years after it's implementation.

Hi,

Much thanks for all the suggestions.
Really appreciate it, and your time.

Sure does look like the Grove offering (at twice the price), allright.
Probably is.
Seems to be made in China, from the pix ton the Impact Acoustics site.

I like the Daiwa unit, I think, but am hesitant to get it as they say it is usable (only) up to 650 MHZ.
I have a scanner, and would like something good to 1 GHZ or so, as I do a lot of listening in the 800 MHZ range.

Doubt that the attenuation goes up all that steeply from 650 to 1.0 GHz, but don't really know.

Any thoughts on the Daiwa coax switch (Grove doesn't but Universal does I believe) for a scanner listening application ?

Thanks, and best regards,
Bob

To the Group,

Do any of you read the information on this site?

< http://www.ticon.net/~n9ewo/index.html >

It always has interesting items. I believe that "Dave" is associated with PASSPORT TO WORLD BAND RADIO.

In any case, look at the first item in his "Radio News" - just scroll down the page a bit - it is dated March 4 and concerns the Sony ICF-SW35 and the ICF-SW11 (an analog model) which have just been discontinued.

I'm afraid he's correct in saying that the '7600GR will be "gone before too much longer now."

If anyone is reading this and is truly interested in the Sony ICF-SW7600GR, the time to buy it is NOW.

The basic design of this receiver goes back to 1994 with the ICF-SW7600G. (The somewhat revised ICF-SW7600GR - better in every way - was introduced in 2002 and has been made continuously since then.) In all the time since, NO ONE has introduced a compact receiver anywhere near its price that can match this Sony model in sheer excellence in performance, construction, and longevity.

Kchibo has introduced a compact portable model that features a sync circuit, which, until now, has only been available on this Sony model (see PASSPORT 2008, page 92). But, according to PASSPORT, this Kchibo model's sync does not perform adequately and the set, incredibly, does NOT offer SSB reception!

And you can be sure that NO "Chinese-made" radio will be as well constructed or as long-lasting as the Japanese-made ICF-SW7600GE.

So -- we're still waiting for something "as good" and I do not see anything on the horizon.

Therefore I strongly recommend that you do not wait - and don't buy this Sony model "used" off eBay or anywhere else. You're just asking for trouble. No one in his right mind would sell a '7600GR unless there were something wrong with it (dropped or damaged otherwise). And you don't need someone else's problems!

You can still buy a new '7600GR from AES, Universal, J&R Music World, Amazon, and probably some other dealers as well, for $150.00 or less. That price, for a new receiver, is VERY reasonable, especially when you consider all you get for your money with this one.

I hope you'll at least consider my advice. It represents, of course, strictly my own opinion.

Best,

Joe

Since this is an SWL list and not a ham one, I thought it important to point out the the U.S. band plans are not worldwide. For example, the 40m band is split up into a CW portion and a phone portion which access to parts of each portion based upon license class.

Canadian hams can use any mode anywhere in the same band. Here in Israel, we only can use 7.000-7.100 mHz and can do anything legal on any frequency in that band. We recently have been given permission to use 7.100 to 7.200, but since the SWBC users of it still fill it with very strong signals, it's of no use when there is propigation beyond ground waves.

A similar situation occurs with 80m/75m. Our 80m band stops at 3.850mHz and the rest is filled with SWBC.

We don't have access to 60m, 222mHz, and 900mHz.

Geoff.

"DAB Gets Gloomy Prognosis Down Under"

DAB's recent round of negative press in the UK is now being echoed in Australia, where the technology has only just begun building out.
According to a Feb. 27 article by Asher Moses in the Sydney Morning Herald, Professor Jock Given of Swineburne University predicts DAB will face a tepid response at best from consumers, who are already comfortable with Ipods and other portable devices for delivering their daily music fix, while online and conventional radio continues to serve specialized programming needs, such as sports and news content.

The fact that Givens formerly served on the Australian government's Digital Radio Advisory Committee lends his view a significant degree of credibility among industry observers there.

A major part of the problem, according to the article, is that Australia's digital radio planning process has spanned a period of almost 11 years, while parallel technologies have moved forward. The current DAB pullback by commercial broadcasters in the UK is seen as a warning sign that the economic viability of Australia's system, which involves tens of millions of dollars of private investment, may be questionable. Other DAB critics point to Canada's flagging DAB rollout as more evidence that the technology will fail to ignite consumer interest down under.

Commercial Radio Australia CEO Joan Warner has offered no response to Given's statements, and maintains that DAB will generate excitement among consumer's there.

Who makes a good outdoor, omni-directional fm antenna ?

I prefer to use RG6 as the lead in, and I definitely need an omni-directional antenna.

Radio Shack used to make a dual element, folded dipole outside fm antenna, but I don't find it on their website.

Thanks for any tips !!

I'll probably get flamed here... but there is really no such thing as a good omnidirectional FM antenna. None of them have any multipath rejection whatsoever, and since multipath is most likely what you're trying to alleviate, you're just as likely as not to end up with just as bad a signal (stronger, yes, but no less garbled and noisy) as you would have with your indoor antenna. In fact, a cheap pair of rabbit ears will usually outperform one of those turnstiles, unless you live in a perfectly flat area with no surrounding tall structures.

I just received the 5/8 inch diameter ferrites today and wound a LW and a MW loopstick. Signal level is approximately 10dB higher than the 3/8 inch ferrites that I was previously using.
The LW loopstick covers from 90kHz to 580kHz, while the MW loopstick covers from 410kHz to 2500kHz.
I finished the PC board layout yesterday and e-mailed the design to Palstar, so I should be seeing prototype boards soon.
This one looks like a winner.

I would like to address this "2 wave" if you don't mind. Another individual tried to pass this off as second generation but I don't see it that way. Here you make the argument that the same radio in placed in cars and trucks constitutes a second wave.

I don't see it that way. For me the change would have to be much larger than sticking the same thing in a mobile unit. This kind of change looks like 1.0 to 1.1 instead of 1.0 to 2.0 and is minor at best. The change is too small to warrant a 1 to 2. For a 1 to 2 change it would have to have a real impact on how people use it or how its use would affects the user. That would be looking at it from the user perspective.

From the generational perspective an example would be tube to discrete solid state to integrated circuits would be 2 generations. Here HD has not changed either so where does the "2nd wave" or "2nd generation" come from? Beats me.

No real impact on the user or change in implementation means wave or generation 1.

Generally these UNUNs work better with a ground on the right terminal but from the web site I can't tell if this unit even has a ground terminal.

Another thing to look at is the Local/DX and INT/EXT switches. The switches set in the wrong combinations could be causing you problems.

Here you would start with DX and EXT.

No flames. The radio shack antenna is a turnstile. Basically two folded dipoles at 90 degrees to each other with cross feed.

I have a friend who wants to listen to two particular medium wave AM broadcast stations. I entered the coordinates of his apartment building into the FCC webpage and then the frequency for each station.

The first station is KDHL 920 kHz AM in Faribault MN. It appears as if he is almost 40 miles away from the station transmitting 5 kW daytime and nightime. I haven't found out anything about their antenna patterns, however.

The other station is KCHK 1350 kHz AM in New Prague MN. It looks like they are about 20 miles from that station transmitting 500 watts daytime, but only 70 watts at night! I don't know anything about their antenna patterns either.

Anyway, sorry to bore you with all of the details, but he is wondering if he should even bother putting any effort into trying to receive either station or if it is simply going to be an exercise in futility. He is confined to a wheelchair, but I will do what I can, within reason, to help him out.

What recommendations would folks here make for a radio? I am somewhat partial to the Superadio III because it is pretty reasonably priced, but obviously there are other receivers up to the task. Also, the only AM antenna I have is a Terk AM Advantage.

I will probably stop by his apartment sometime with a Superadio and the AM Advantage just to see if we can get any reception on either 920 or 1350. I do also have an original C Crane radio that I can try. Any other thoughts on this?

A few years ago, I bought a Cambridge Tuner that came with flexible dipole (wire) antenna. I also bought a Magnum Dynalab - ST-2 FM

http://www.audioadvisor.com/prodinfo.asp?number=MDST2

Guess what, indoor, the flexible dipole beats the ST-2 hands down in everyway. No contest.

Two weeks later, the APS-13 antenna I have ordered arrived.

http://www.antennaperformance.com/

Then went to Fry's and bought a rotor with wire-dial control, a pole (2) and RG6 cable (I'm sure) at high-end store. Then installed them on the roof by fastening on the chimney and came down to listen.

If there is such thing as miracle on the roof, THIS is IT.

I caught so many stations that I begun to loose count after 105.
I first started listing them one at the time earnestly for the next 4 or 5 days, and then got tired. If I turn the antenna's rotor using the control at, say, 180 degrees, I'd get an altogether different station -- in the same dial! They're all clear except when it's overcast. The stations that comes clear nearby, comes clearer. I get stations from as far as 75 to 100 miles and perhaps farther than I care to know. I dreaded it each time I came accross and saw this (unfinished) list 'cause I feel guilty. I really don't wanna do that anymore.

- No flames. The radio shack antenna is a turnstile.
- Basically two folded dipoles at 90 degrees to each - other with cross feed.

Yes Telamon,
```

The Turnstile FM Antenna does work very well in Urban Areas; where you have strong FM Signals coming from many FM Radio Stations who's signals are originating from several locations and directions spread-out all around your Home or Office.

"Turnstile" Omni-Directional FM Antenna (FMSS)
http://www.mindspring.com/~brucec/turnstil.gif http://www.solidsignal.com/prod_display.asp?prod=FMSS

Mounting the Turnstile FM Antenna Up-in-the-Air at least 6 Feet about the Roof.

Use RG-6 Quad-Shield Coax Cable for the feed-in-line.

The more complex and expensive alternative would be a directional FM Antenna with a Rotor.

571. THE CHURCH OF EUTHANASIA

The One Commandment:
"Thou shalt not procreate"

The Four Pillars: suicide · abortion
cannibalism · sodomy

Human Population: 6,665,906,111

SAVE THE PLANET KILL YOURSELF

Greetings, and welcome to the Church of Euthanasia's FAQ (Frequently Asked Questions).

1. What is the Church of Euthanasia?

The Church of Euthanasia is a non-profit educational foundation devoted to restoring balance between Humans and the remaining species on Earth. We believe this can only be accomplished by a massive voluntary population reduction, which will require a leap in Human consciousness to a new species awareness.

The Human population is increasing by one million every four days. This is a net increase of 95 million per year, the current population of Mexico. Even major wars or epidemics hardly dent this rate of growth, and modern wars also have tremendous environmental consequences. It is for these practical reasons, as well as moral ones, that we support only voluntary forms of population reduction.

The Church has only one commandment, and it is "Thou Shalt Not Procreate." In addition, we have four "pillars" or principles, which are Suicide, Abortion, Cannibalism and Sodomy.

Note that cannibalism is only required for those who insist on eating flesh, and is strictly limited to consumption of the already dead. Also note that sodomy is defined as any sexual act not intended for procreation: fellatio, cunnilingus, and anal sex are all forms of sodomy and are still illegal in some parts of the United States.

2. Where can I find the Church on-line?

http://www.churchofeuthanasia.org/index.html

The web site contains everything the Church has ever released, including all issues of Snuff It (complete with color photos and graphics), the complete e-sermons, a resources page with links to Church-approved sites, and an on-line catalog with an order form. This is the best way to experience the Church on-line, particularly if your browser supports graphics. The web site URL is http://churchofeuthanasia.org.

b. ftp archive

If you don't have access to the web, or if you want plain text rather than HTML, try the University of Michigan's ETEXT archive:

ftp: ftp.etext.org /pub/Zines/Snuffit

3. How do I order stickers, buttons, t-shirts, etc.?

The Church of Euthanasia merchandise is no longer available. It was a very successful form of outreach for almost 10 years, but eventually the product line aged, national distributors lost interest, and the merchandise was no longer self-sustaining. Plus we got sick of packing boxes. We apologize for any inconvenience.

4. How do I become a member?

If you choose to not procreate, you're a member already, but why not make it official? Membership includes a life-time subscription to the printed version of Snuff It, a 28-page e-sermon booklet, and a lovely embossed certificate suitable for framing, all for only $10. Make checks payable to:

The Church of Euthanasia
P.O.Box 261
Somerville, MA 02143
USA

We take our one commandment very seriously. Membership implies a lifetime vow to not procreate. Procreation means guaranteed excommunication. There are no exceptions; abortion will be required, period. Of course, such difficulties can be avoided by faithful adherence to the fourth pillar (sodomy).

5. Do I have to kill myself?

Of course you don't have to kill yourself! If you really want to, though, wait until after you've joined the Church. That way, you automatically become a saint, without any additional paperwork. Don't forget to leave a note thanking and/or blaming the Church, and feel free to will us your estate, if you have one.

6. I've already procreated. Can I still join?

Absolutely! So long as you don't have any more. We have a number of members with children, and we even have a member whose son joined too. What's done is done. What matters is your commitment now.

7. How can I help?

The most important way you can help is by not procreating. If you feel comfortable taking the lifetime vow, then you should consider officially joining the Church. It would also very helpful if you could manage to abstain from eating non-human flesh.

You could also make a tax-deductible donation. The Church is exempt from federal income tax under 501(a) and 501(c)(3), EIN 04-324-9910.

Finally, you can help by spreading the word. Talk to people. Proselytize shamelessly. Write a letter to the editor of your local paper. Get on the radio or TV. Be a nuisance. Cause trouble. Piss people off, especially your breeding friends. Carpe diem.

8. What's the best way for me to kill myself?

Please consult the alt.suicide.holiday website.

9. Why haven't you killed yourself yet?

I'll kill myself when I feel like it. Suicide is OPTIONAL, remember? Maybe if people stopped having so many babies, we could build a compassionate, sustainable future, and I wouldn't want to kill myself anymore. Just kidding!

10. How many members are there?

The Church currently has hundreds of card-carrying members who've taken the vow, plus clergy, directors, and thousands of "e-members" on the Internet. We have members as far away as Italy and Latvia, though the majority are still in the USA.

11. Can I distribute or reprint Church propaganda?

All material on the Church of Euthanasia web site is yours to use, in any way you like, with the following important exception: Rev. Chris Korda's music is copyrighted and owned by various record labels. You are permitted to download the MP3 files for your own personal use, but distributing Rev. Chris Korda's music in any other way, without permission from the appropriate record label, is a violation of applicable laws.

12. Where can I get EMERGENCY CONTRACEPTION?

The Office of Population Research at Princeton University maintains an emergency contraception world-wide web site and toll-free number. Both allow you to get information on the "morning after" pill and other forms of emergency contraception, and then find the clinics, hospitals or doctors nearest you that will prescribe them. Call 1-800-584-9911 or access http://ec.princeton.edu right away. Don't "wait and see what happens." You have 72 hours!

<snip>

You should have some success with the right antenna to deal with any locally generated noise; I would suggest using an auto radio known for good AM sensitivity powered by an adequate 12 volt supply. Recently I found that a Sony CDX-110 (Xplode) radio/cd-player worked very well indoors in my hostile RFI environment with just a three-foot whip to receive 830 WCCO from Mpls here in Duluth during the day (night is always much easier); no other radio I have including well-regarded communications receivers worked as well. Many auto radios have better sensitivity, noise limiters and AGCs than most table radios. You may need to consider using a magnetic loop antenna to null local interference, but it is worth trying a longwire first.

The topography around Faribault and New Prague is pretty flat so unless you have a lot of tall pines to deal with nearby, ground wave shouldn't be much impacted. I doubt that at those distances antenna patterns would make much difference, since those stations serve farm markets that cover the majority of that part of the state.

If for whatever reason you don't solve this problem with radio, you might convince someone in either town to relay broadcasts as a VoIP call over the Internet to a computer in your friend's apartment.

Michael

I picked up a new Radio Shack 6 element FM antenna for $5 and a new Radio Shack rotor last year for $20. I'm looking forward to putting the system together this spring just to see just what I'll be able to pick up.

I love that R7.....that's while I still have mine. I did repair the power supply on my friend's unit. The 24 volt supply has two iterations. The early version uses a pair of TIP31s in a multivibrator configuration, is rectified by a quad of 1N4148s, and regulated by a 78L24 regulator.
Later versions used what appears to be some kind of sine wave oscillator that uses a TDA2002 audio amp chip. Everything else is the same, except an LM317Z regulator is used for the 24 volt regulator.
The problem with the power supply on this unit was two bad electrolytic coupling caps in the TDA2002 circuit. One of them is a 22uF unit whild the other one is a 10uF unit. Replacing both of the caps solved the problem.
This is still one more problem with the unit.....the high band VCO doesn't lock unless you are in the 28MHz range. This tells me that the connection from the phase detector to the VCO is ok, as evidenced by the tuning voltage being stuck high.
This also tells me that there is a break in the feedback loop between the VCO output and the 1/N chain that feeds the input of the phase detector. I will dig into that later.....

I am not sure where my post went, so I am redoing this update. I e-mailed Palstar the completed PC board design yesterday, so I should have some prototype boards in the next couple of weeks or so.
I received the 5/8 inch diameter ferrites yesterday and woulnd up a LW and a MW loopstick. They work better than anything I have seen so far.
In addition to that, the LW loopstick tunes from 90kHz to 580kHz, while the MW loopstick tunes from 410kHz to 2500kHz.
I am very excited about this design!

James,

"Snake" [Mono-Pole] Vertical Antenna for the FM Radio Band

One of the simplist and cheapest Omni-Directional FM Antennas that you can make yourself is a 5/8 Wave-Lenght Vertical Antenna.

The 5/8-Wavelength Mystique -by- L. B. Cebik [W4RNL] http://www.cebik.com/gp/58.html

Vertical Antenna Calculator
http://www.csgnetwork.com/antennaevcalc.html
CopyRight© 1973-2008 - CSGNetwork.Com - All Rights Reserved.

Wave-Length (WL) ~ Feet
- - 1/4 WL ~ 2 Feet. 7 - 15/16 Inches -or- 0.810 Metres
- 1/2 WL ~ 5 Feet. 3 - 27/32 Inches -or- 1.621 Metres
* 5/8 WL ~ 6 Feet. 7 - 25/32 Inches -or- 2.026 Metres *
+ 3/4 WL ~ 7 Feet. 11 - 3/4 Inches -or- 2.431 Metres
Full WL ~ 10 Feet. 7 - 21/32 Inches -or- 3.242 Metres

What makes this Antenna Simple and Cheap is that it is make of a Single Piece of Coax Cable.
-ps- It's a "Snake" [Mono-Pole] Vertical Antenna for the FM Radio Band.

Start by taking a 25~ 50 Foot piece of RG-6 Quad-Shield
Coax Cable with "F" Connectors on both ends.

25-Ft. RG-6 QuadShield Coax Cable (Black) # 15-1567
http://www.radioshack.com/product/index.jsp?productId=2103071

50-Ft. RG-6 QuadShield Coax Cable (Black) # 15-1568
http://www.radioshack.com/product/index.jsp?productId=2103072

Cut off one of the "F" Connectors from one of the ends.
This is now the Antenna-End of your "Snake" [Mono-Pole]
Vertical Antenna.

FWIW - The End of the Coax Cable with the "F" Connector still attached is the Radio-End of your "Snake" [Mono-Pole] Vertical Antenna.

Measure 8 Feet along the Coax Cable from this Antenna-End and place a Plastic Wire Tie around the Coax Cable to mark the spot. This is your Zero-Point for Measuring.

Black UV Cable Tie Assortment (75-Pack)
http://www.radioshack.com/product/index.jsp?productId=2103326

Very Carefully {Very Carefully worth repeating} slowly Cut around the Outer Insulation of the Coax Cable on the Antenna-End side of the Zero-Point. Then make a 6~8 Inch lengthwise Cut through the Outer Insulation along the Coax Cable toward the Antenna-End.

Carefully Peel-Back the Outer Insulation from the Shield Braid and exposing the Braid; and Secure it temporarily with Black Electrical Tape.

Very Carefully {Very Carefully worth repeating} slowly Cut through the all four layers of the Braid and Foil Shielding and exposing the Inner Insulation for several inches.

NOTE - When I refer to Inner Insulation : I am also referring to the Center {Inner} Wire Conductor inclosed within it.

Again Very Carefully and slowly make a lengthwise Cut through the Outer Insulation and along the Coax Cable all the way to the Antenna-End; and Remove the Outer Insulation.

Again Very Carefully and slowly remove all four layers of the Braid and Foil Shielding one at a time; all the way to the Antenna-End; exposing the Inner Insulation.

Return to the Zero-Point where you place the Plastic Wire Tie to mark the 8 Foot Point. Measure from it 79 - 3/4 Inches* from it toward the Antenna-End.
* 5/8 WL ~ 6 Feet. 7 - 25/32 Inches (79 & 3/4 Inches)
Take a Felt-Tip Marker and mark this point on the Inner Insulation. There should be about 4 Inches of Inner Insulation left-over. Fold this Inner Insulation back over on to and parallel to itself; measure about One Inch from the Bend and place a Plastic Wire Tie at that spot; The place two more Plastic Wire Tie back down the two parallel Inner Insulations about each Inch. Now att the Bend in the Inner Insualtion spread open the two Inner Insulations to from an End-Eye "O".

This is your True Antenna-End and the Rigging Point attachment for the top of your Antenna.

Next return to the Zero-Point where you place the Plastic Wire Tie to mark the 8 Foot Point. Measure toward the Radio-End 32 Inches* and a Plastic Wire Tie at this Point. Affix a Snap-On Ferrite Core Bead on the Radio-End side of the Coax Cable; next to the Plastic Wire Tie; and then place another Plastic Wire Tie on the 'other' side of it to Secure it in place.
* 1/4 WL ~ 2 Feet. 7 - 15/16 Inches (32 Inches)

Snap-Together Ferrite Choke Core # 273-105
http://www.radioshack.com/product/index.jsp?productId=2103222

Return to the Zero-Point where you place the Plastic Wire Tie to mark the 8 Foot Point. Place two more Plastic Wire Ties around the Un-cut Outer Insutlation about a 1/4 Inch apart. Cover the 3 of them from top to bottom in Coax Seal plus a Half-an-Inch on either side.

Coax-Seal
http://www.universal-radio.com/catalog/cable/1194.html
Non-Conductive & Non-Contaminating Waterproof Sealant for Out-Door Antenna Connections and/or Connectors.

RIGGING - MOUNTING :
Use Nylon/Poly Rope to Rig this "Snake" [Mono-Pole]
Vertical Antenna for the FM Radio Band by the End-Eye.
From an House Eave or Tree Limb. Idealy the Top-End of this Antenna would be at least 16 Feet above the the surface of the ground; higher would be better.

That-Something-Extra - This can be a good "Portable"
Camping FM Antenna; and it can be Rigged as a Sloper Antenna at 45 Degrees with the Bottom pointed in the direction of best/desired FM Radio reception.

TIP - For On-the-Roof / Above/Over the House Mounting use a 10 foot Piece of 1/2 Inch PVC Pipe as an "Form" for the Wire Antenna Element. Measure and cut the PVC Pipe to 9 Foot 5 Inches (113 Inches). Drill a 1/8 Inch Hole about One Inch from one of the ends of the PVC Pipe.
The Hole end is now the Top-End of the "Form". Thread the Wire Antenna Element into the center of the PVC Pipe.
Align the End-Eye with the Hole in the PVC Pipe; and place a small 1/8 Inch Metal Machine Screw through the Hole and the End-Eye; capturing the End-Eye with the Machine Screw; and place a Self Locking Nut on the threaded-end of the Machine Screw. Glue an End-Cap on the Top-End of the PVC Pipe and cover the Machine Screw Head and Nut with Glue too. Use two to three Large Hose Clamps or a half-dozen Plastic Wire Ties to Secure the Bottom of the PVC Pipe to a Vent Pipe or something else coming out of the Roof.

Finally connect the "F" Connector to yoyr FM Radio's External Antrenna Input. { What Could Be Easier ! }

Telamon,

You are clearly Thinking along Technology Change Lines and that is well and good.

While I am simply Thinking along The Line of Social Change :
Experiance to Knowledge to Acceptance to Adaptation plus Acquisition and Intergration of a Technology by an Individual as a Member of a Society : Reflecting That Society.

Micro and Macro Social Change in the Use of a Technology

CP FM has inherent multipath rejection. I have a 4 element slightly directional Winegard FM only antenna pointing South. I stll get stations from all around, but I can get virtually every FM station in Los Angeles and San Diego quite nicely.

Without a doubt, a good Yagi on a rotator is best. I wonder what the cheapest rotator is these days ?

Tandy quit making their rotatable outside RV antenna. It was not sold at Radio Shack. Radio Shack does have a similar looking round unit that does not have the motor.
The thing that might be nice is like the old antennas that used a multiple transmission line going to a box that selected element pairs for directional control. You can also do this using two antennas. I bought an RCA unit that went bust. Its an amplified little square box I lay on the roof. Works pretty well.

I remember my grandparents had different TV antennas and knife switches for different channels.

The problem with searching for a dx station of known frequency with the Superradio is its analog tuning dial is so inexact. A digital tuning dial that shows exactly the frequency of the station will at least tell him he is on frequency.

I've had pretty good luck with the Select-a-tenna loop -- it works well on weak AM stations IF their frequency is in the clear.

Beyond that, if a wire thrown out the window doesn't do the job, there are plenty of homebrew MW loop designs all over the web.

I remember reading last year that Sony announced it would be dropping out of the shortwave radio market. No date was mentioned, but the information on that blog seems to tie in. Of the many companies that once made shortwave radios Sony has probably taken the most time to back out of that market entirely.

Let the FCC computer make the list for you. Get your latitude/longitude in Degrees/Minutes/Seconds notation and go to the FCC web site (www.fcc.gov), link to the Media Bureau section and find the license database search page for FM. (They have ones for TV and AM, too).

Enter in your location and the maximum distance, and the search page will give you a list of the stations (in a bunch of different formats).
The lists give the bearing and distance to each station from your location.

"Schneider Moves to Ibiquity from BE" 3.07.2008

Ibiquity is reaching out to develop new business in Latin America and it has hired a sales executive from BE for the job. John Schneider has resigned as sales manager for Latin America and the Caribbean for Broadcast Electronics after 10 years in that position. He informed colleagues and clients in an e-mail Thursday. Schneider starts his new duties March 26 and will be promoting HD Radio technology to radio broadcasters and regulators in that part of the hemisphere. As Ibiquity seeks more international business, this is its second notable hire from the manufacturing community recently. As we reported earlier it hired another broadcast equipment executive, Hal Kneller, from Harris to become its international business development director.

A New President Comes on Board at a Time of Market Softening

by Paul McLane, 11.07.2007
Editor in Chief/U.S.

Broadcast Electronics is approaching its 50th anniversary in 2009 and I was pleased to see BE plan a salute to Larry Cervon, its retired president, in October, with a ceremony in Quincy and a live Webcast.

Good for BE for honoring its history. We'll have more about Cervon's tenure in an upcoming issue.

BE is going through some less pleasant changes right now. Within a few weeks' time the manufacturer of transmitters and digital audio and data products lost its global sales VP; it laid off some of its employees; and it announced the retirement of its CEO of eight years, John Pedlow -- news that came, at least to me, suddenly.

Because these developments emerged in a flurry and because BE is one of the "bellwether" manufacturers in our industry -- it calls itself the largest radio-only broadcast manufacturer -- I asked Neil Glassman, vice president of strategic marketing, to talk about what they might mean.

"We did have a reduction in staff over the summer," Neil confirmed. "But the company still has more employees today than a year ago. You hate to get rid of people; but this was more a correction of an 'over ramp-up.' Everything was being built up a little too fast. We'd been building in every department for growth and had to correct for a little too much enthusiasm."

Glassman declined to say how many people had lost their jobs; he said the cuts came in several departments. He said BE still has more than 150 employees, that it continues to use the recent 20,000-square-foot expansion to its main facility in Quincy, Ill., and that delivery and customer service response times have not been affected by the cutbacks.

Separately, Michael Burgett recently resigned. BE had welcomed Burgett with fanfare in late summer of 2006 when it created the position of vice president of global sales; officials said then the hire was important because BE was expanding in new overseas markets and also integrating digital media with RF transmission activities, studio with over-the-Internet and HD Radio activities.

Glassman said Burgett left for personal reasons unrelated to other changes and said the sales position is now open. BE's international sales efforts have strengthened, he said, including good growth in AudioVault sales outside of the United States.

Growth

The departure of Pedlow is unfortunate because he's an executive I've always found to be affable and accessible; but it also seemed notable in part because it came right after the layoffs and because it felt sudden. Glassman said it had been in the works for a while behind the scenes.

"We collectively decided (John) could retire when he found his replacement ... after almost nine years in which the company grew tremendously." In announcing the change, BE called Pedlow's tenure successful and noted that during those years, BE had "set a course for the future of terrestrial radio with ground-breaking HD Radio products," achieved double-digit revenue growth for four consecutive years, increased manufacturing capacity and acquired The Radio Experience product line.

Pedlow will move back to his home state of Washington to pursue boating, among other interests, and will continue to consult to BE.

Meanwhile new CEO Joseph W. Roark is getting his sea legs. He's former president of four Weir Group PLC companies and two Danaher companies; BE describes him as strong in industrial business experience with an emphasis on converging technologies. Roark -- pronounce it "ROH-ark" -- will relocate from Salt Lake City to Quincy. He and Pedlow issued mutually supportive statements in announcing the change.

'Bit of a null'

Glassman said BE has been through many such departures over its 48 years.

"It's really cool in a way that BE is both a personality-driven company, with people who are visible like John Pedlow, Jerry Westberg, Richard Hinkle, Tim Bealor and others, but that it is enough of a company that it transcends people's life transitions. It has a personality and force of its own."

But while not connecting business trends to Pedlow's departure, Glassman didn't pretend that BE's equipment market has not softened.

"It's probably no secret that the rate of HD Radio adoption has slowed in the United States. There are new opportunities that exist in other countries; Mexico and Brazil come to mind; sales there are few but promising. The whole industry is in a bit of a null in the HD transition but I don't think anyone's long-term plans have changed."

I asked Neil if he remains optimistic about the longer-term uptake of digital radio here at home.

"Absolutely. We continue to see increasing dialogue with people in the middle markets; we're getting more people who are beyond 'Uh, I'm not interested' to 'Hmm, should I do this?' and starting to go toward, 'OK if I'm going to do this, when is the right time?' We're seeing more middle-market stations and/or mid-sized groups inquiring. Even if it's just 'I'm buying a new analog rig but want to be sure I'm not going to be painted in a corner.'"

Though BE is not relying only on business in the United States, he said, "right now, we're still bullish on the U.S. market. I can't speak for the owners; but the way they're continuing to support us, it seems the owners are also bullish about the future of radio." Since early 2006 BE has been owned by the Audax Group in Boston, a private equity firm that also owns the Boston Herald, among other holdings.

As you know from previous columns, BE is not the only company that has had to scale back its workforce in light of business trends in broadcasting. And CEOs do change from time to time. I wish BE and its new leader well and wish for it more growth ahead. A healthy broadcast equipment marketplace is good for equipment users and for trade publications, of course; but it's also reflective of the underlying radio industry.

We'll continue to watch and root for a vibrant manufacturing sector. Glassman, for one, is optimistic that smart broadcast owners will do what's necessary to redefine what "radio" means. Our medium is now a multiplatform environment, he said; and Glassman is bolstered by seeing entities much bigger than BE, companies that own stations and produce programming, continuing to invest in it.

http://www.rwonline.com/pages/s.0044/t.9546.html

Of course, no interest in HD Radio in Latin America, either:

http://www.google.com/trends?q=hd+radio&ctab=0&geo=BR&date=all&sort=0

Smells of desperation - adding to the list:

"A Significant Sign in the Death of HD Radio"

"The radio industry is giving off signs that HD Radio is dead, even though we keep hearing bright comments being uttered by iBiquity execs... While the public's pulse on HD isn't beating, the latest glaze over this problem is in a rebuilt HD Radio Alliance web site to educate retailers and sales personnel on the benefits of HD Radio...This is death sign #1... HD Radio's death is imminent. It's only a matter of time, if you read the signs."

I am just north of St. Paul in White Bear Lake and get both stations fairly well on my Superadio 3. KDHL is typcially the better of the two Haven't heard them yet, but I've enjoyed looking at the DX spots this afternoon and have heard some good ones, including C91R (Mozambique), who had a very good signal here on the 200' W-E wire.

I've always had fine performance from the cheap wire dipoles. I tried Question - Should this Ferrite Rod Antenna be "Tiltable" ?

Ferrite Rod AM/MW Antennas : To Tilt ? -or- Not to Tilt ?
{What's The Difference... If Any ?}

Pete,

I think that Tilting works best for a Constant and Predictable
Skywave RF Signals which usually means the first Reflection {Bounce-Skip}. After that things get more scattered and Tilting seams to work less. [That's My One-Man's-Opinion.]

Consider these Two View :

1st - Ferrite Rod Antenna Element that is used in the Flat [Horizontal] position and is simple Rotated 360 Degrees around to Receive {Peak or Null-Out} a Radio Signal.
[This is a Broad-Side : Point-and-Shoot]
With a Ferrite Rod type Antenna in the Horizontal [Flat] position and simply Rotated : The normal Angle of Signal Capture is incident and Equal on Both Horizontal Sides of the Ferrite Rod.

> || <
> || <
> || <
> || <- Directions of the Incoming RF Signals
> || <
> || <
> || <
> || <

"||" Ferrite Rod that is Flat {Horizontal}

2nd - With a Ferrite Rod type Antenna that is "Tilted" the normal Angle of Signal Capture is Incident to the Top Surface that is position to accept Incoming RF Signals directly from the Sky-Wave; and therefore the Bottom {Back Side} is postioned for Incoming RF Signals that are Refected "Off" the Ground. Top and Bottom Signals are NOT Equal*.
* There is a Difference {Delta} between the Direct Sky-Wave Signals and those Reflected Ground Signals. This Delta is what "Tilting" the Antenna Element is supposed to do to Enhance {Optimize} the Surface of the the Tilted Top of the Ferrite Rod Antenna to Maximise the RF Signal being received.

|| <
g . || < r . . . || <
o . . . . . || <= Direction of the Incoming Sky-Wave RF Signal
u . . . . . || < n . . . . . ||
d . . . . . ||
```

USING - The Tilled Ferrite Rod Antenna :
The Ferrite Rod Antenna is first Tilted at 45 Degrees and then Rotated around the Compass 360 Degrees to achieve the Best RF Signal from the Target AM/MW Radio Station; after which adjustments to the Tilt and Rotation can be made to Fine Tune the position of the Ferrite Rod Antenna.

Former Georgia Congresswoman and Green Party Presidential candidate Cynthia McKinney raves, "This film catches the spirit of the electorate! It's a clarion call to all of us to get involved, run for office, and become the policy makers of our dreams."

"Washington, You're Fired" dissects legislation such as the USA PATRIOT Act, the Military Commissions Act, and the John Warner Defense Act, which have crippled the U.S. Constitution and weakened the liberties that Americans once thought they could never lose. The loss of Habeas Corpus and Posse Comitatus, coupled with a new definition of "torture" are just the tip of the Orwellian iceberg. If enacted, HR 1955 will, for the first time, put "thought crime" laws on the books, robbing citizens of their right to freedom of conscience thought.

From the National ID card controversy, to the atrocities committed in the wake of hurricane Katrina - one thing is made perfectly clear in the film - we need immediate political change in Washington or the liberties enjoyed by the people of this country will continue to quickly disappear - possibly forever.

There is still a fair amount of work on this one, but maybe in the future, I can send out a prototype. I think I am going to take a look at some regeneration circuits. I think the optical coupler approach might work.

Thanks for the info.....it looks like this might be a good approach.
Features are always easier to implement in the early stages of the design. I am going to take a look at some regeneration circuits.....this might also be a good thing. The next thing will be the tropical band loopstick.....

Bob Miller and J&D Schnoor,

I recommend the Selact-A-Tenna Model 541-M -and/or-the Terk AM Advantage AM/MW Loop Antenna because they both have the 1/8" Mono Jack Input / Output feature.

Selact-A-Tenna Model 541-M AM/MW Loop Antenna
http://www.selectatenna.com/
http://www.universal-radio.com/catalog/mwant/4316.html

Terk AM Advantage AM/MW Loop Antenna
http://www.universal-radio.com/catalog/mwant/2774.html
http://www.ccrane.com/antennas/am-antennas/terk-am-advantage.aspx

Take your Long-Wire Antenna and a Ground Wire and connect then to a 1/8" Mono Plug.

Plug the 1/8" Mono Plug into the Selact-a-Tenna Model 541-M.

Place the Selact-a-Tenna Model 541-M next to the AM/MW Radio {Inductive Coupling}.

Then 'use' the Selact-a-Tenna Model 541-M as an AM/MW Antenna Tuner for the Long-Wire Antenna in conjunction with your AM/MW Radio.

Add a Lazy Susan and your are Good-to-Go DXing ! :o)

Beyond the Ready-Made AM/MW Loop Antennas like the :
Select-A-Tenna, Terk AM Advantage, and the former RadioShack AM Loop Antennas. Building you own AM/MW Loop Antenna is another Option to consider. But If - You are considering IT; then consider Building IT Big. Takes very little more work than a smaller size Loop Antenna and provides much better Results. The minimum Size that I would recommend for a Home Made AM/MW Loop Antenna is 18 to 20 Inches. IMHO One Yard (36 Inches) to One Metre is the Right Size for a Home-Brewed AM/MW Loop Antenna.

BUILDING - One of the Bigger Box AM/MW Loop Antennas :
The One Metre AM/MW Loop Antenna
-aka The Square Yard AM/MW Loop Antenna
These are about as big as you want to get when . . .
considering an AM/MW Loop Antenna for In-Doors Use.

1 - Open up the Ends of the Hula Hoop
2 - Place the Ends in to the two end Holes of the Switch Box.
3 - Thread the Hook-Up Wire into the Switch Box and around the inside of the Hula Hoop 9 times.
4 - Trim off the Extra Wire.
5 - Solder the Wire ends to the Variable Capacitor's Frame and Rotor.
6 - Drill a 3/8" Hole in the PVC Cover Plate for the Switch Box and Mount the Variable Capacitor.
7 - Place the Cover on the Switch Box
8 - Tune, Postion and Enjoy your home made

WOW! It's 0920z and no on-air activity yet. Also no update to the website either. That's interesting. Hope everything is OK and will be up soon.

OK on C91R. There doesn't appear to be much DX activity as of late, basically the regular items with an occasional semi rare to rare one showing up to pick things up.

Sony ICF-SW7600GR AM/FM Shortwave Radio http://www.universal-radio.com/catalog/portable/0360.html runs on 6 VDC and uses Four "AA" Batteries and has a Battery Life of approximately 40+ Hours.
-imho- This is a very good run-time for a set of 4 "AA" Batteries.

Buy ~US$20 and Use one of these with the Sony :
Energizer Sliding Charger and 4 AA 2500 mAh Batteries
http://www.walmart.com/catalog/product.do?product_id=4291460 Charge the set of these 4 Batteries ~8 Hours during the

Sony AN-LP1 Portable Active Shortwave Antenna
http://www.universal-radio.com/catalog/sw_ant/3676.html runs on 3 VDC and uses Two AA Batteries for about 40 Hours.
Buy an extra set (2) of NiMH 2500 mAh AA Batteries and use the Charger to charge them once a week for ~8 Hours during the Day to use the Active Antenna all week long.

The Sony ICF-SW7600GR AM/FM Shortwave Radio; and

You probably have more trouble putting on your Depends than the President would have putting on a parachute. He was after all at one time a qualified pilot. And you, just another retard on the short bus.

New York City is within range of European stations; not to mention Caribbean relays and Sackville. In Los Angeles, we have our best shortwave listening in the early morning (local) when Asia comes in from the West. What those pinheads at WRTH call shortwave primetime is very disappointing out west.

Not only a pilot, but an F102 pilot...one of the hardest aircraft to fly. And his own wing commander proudly stated he was one of the MOST accomplished F102 pilots in the Guard.

That doesn't come easy.

Tim Worstall writes:

Even in peacetime conditions, F-102 pilots risked their lives on every flight. Only highly-qualified pilot candidates were accepted for Delta Dagger training because it was such a challenging aircraft to fly and left little room for mistakes. According to the Air Force Safety Center, the lifetime Class A accident rate for the F-102 was 13.69 mishaps per 100,000 flight hours, much higher than the average for today's combat aircraft. For example, the F-16 has an accident rate of 4.14, the F-15 is at 2.47, the F-117 at 4.07, the S-3 at 2.6, and the F-18 at 4.9. Even the Marine Corps' AV-8B, regarded as the most dangerous aircraft in US service today, has a lifetime accident rate of only 11.44 mishaps per 100,000 flight hours. The F-102 claimed the lives of many pilots, including a number stationed at Ellington during Bush's tenure. Of the 875 F-102A production models that entered service, 259 were lost in accidents that killed 70 Air Force and ANG pilots.

Hi,

Know this is OT, but was wondering if any of you "old timers" might have a good bulb cross reference.
Have been on Google for quite a while, but cannot come up with anything.

Have some very small, miniature incandescent bulbs (with leads) apparently made by OAK, and the package has LA 474 (or perhaps LA474 without the space)

Would like to use in a home project.

Anyone have info on it that might say what the voltage for it is ?

Bulbs are Very old, probably a good 20 years, or more.

Thanks,
Bob

You can probably get the best accessible reception either out on the piers near the 72nd street boat basin; or the Trump Pier slightly south of that;

- nice little cafe up at 72nd st. Boat basin, BTW; open if the temperatures above 60.

or out in the parks..

Central park is probably OK to go into at night (IN A GROUP ! ! !)
onto The Great Lawn near the Metropolitan Museum , but you can pick up some faint signals in the early A.M.even just walking down the east / west streets with a portable, listening on headphones or ear buds

For a city, reception just ain't all that bad in NYC

8 March

"Turns out it was very much yesterday today than it was the day before. The clouds that were present at dawn disappeared by 7am allowing for the full force of the south pacific sun to express itself. By 10:30am, it was 110 degrees at our base camp and hotter at the CW station. The heat has compounded our work load and Arnie, N6HC had his hands full dealing with sunburns and mandatory work and water breaks every 30 minutes to ensure each team member's safety. By 1pm the heat was so intense our work pace drew to a crawl. With safety being our main concern, we cut back our work loads until it was bearable later in the day to resume. By mid afternoon, some cloud appeared and we were able to continue erecting our antennas and complete our operating stations. Both the cw and ssb camp are very near completion. the few antennas remaining to be erected at daybreak.

We are approximately 24 hours behind our intended schedule, but believe now that the majority of the work is behind us with the remaining antenna erection to be completed at daybreak while temperatures are bearable. We anticipate being on the air with both CW and SSB stations by midday.

At 1800z, we're very close to coming on the air."

In 2008 the Euro-African Medium Wave Guide celebrates its 10th anniversary. For ten years it has been the primary source of information for medium wave enthusiasts all over the world.

To celebrate the anniversary the EMWG is running a free to entre contest open to everyone interested in radio.

The competition is open during March and April and it has a range of exciting prizes - the list continues to grow!

If you fancy a bit of fun and a chance to win a prize check out:

I just received an email from Jeff, F6AOJ. Here is what he has to say:

Hi Steve,

1 hour ago , i received a sat phone call from my old friend Mic FM5CD a member of the TX5C team.

Around mid day , they had a big tropical storm, several antennas ready to run shut down, the camp has been saved from a fly to ocean (due to high wind) now they have to recover from damage.
They expect to start with a part of equipement 3 or 3 stations only around EU sunrise 0500z

The temperature on the isl is very high average 43ï¿½c !
some members get sun burns and some others have difficulties with temperature.

When wimax expands and is everywhere, what's to prevent the model Pandora.com used from making the leap to HD Radio? seems a two-way connection through wimax and an intelligent HD radio could communicate very well.

OK - So those are Two "Criteria" for 'being' President :

1 - Can Fly an Aircraft {George "W" Bush}
- - - = = = O R = = = - - -
2 - Serviced in Vietnam {John 'ff' Kerry}

So here are the three major Presidential Candidates in 2008.

A - Hillary Rodham Clinton = HRH = Her Royal Clintoness

0 = Can't Fly an Aircraft
0 = Never Went to Vietnam.

B - Barack "Hussein" Obama Jr. (BHO)

0 = Can't Fly an Aircraft
0 = Never Went to Vietnam.
Oops... I mentioned his Middle Name "Hussein" :

C - John Sidney McCain III (JSM)

Indeed, Circuit City did have a sell-off of old-stock E1XMs about 3 months back or so. Given the problems with QC with the Eton E1, one is best off buying new from a seller that will guarantee that the item is new stock (e.g. Universal Radio). In addition to concerns over QC, one should also consider that the newer E1 radios are more stable on SSB reception (the drift issue in the older ones seems not to be a problem with the newer ones). Lastly, if one is looking to purchase a unit with a valid warranty, consider Eton's warranty rules: http://www.etoncorp.com/warranty "limited warranty begins on the original date of purchase, and is valid only on products purchased through an authorized Etón retailer". A list of some of these retailers can be found at the bottom of the E1XM product page on the Eton Corp website: http://www.etoncorp.com/product_card/?p_ProductDbId=5971 (e.g. Universal, Grove, HRO, NPR, and so on).

Dear, Clear Channel, Cox Radio, Citadel, Emmis and want to be's.
It's a matter of time before the FCC and our bumbling congress forces all stations to turn off their analog frequencies and go 100% digital. Or maybe radio is a dying industry. By 2020 radio as we know it will be irrelevant and replaced by other technologies Like cassette, 8 track tape 45's and dial-up have become. FM jukeboxes cannot compete with the technologies we currently have never mind the future gadgets. Once cheap wireless internet become available everywhere radio is done. Once cheap wireless internet finds cars.. it's not good for radio. Radio should bet on content not towers or frequencies. The time for HD was 10 years ago and where the F....K were you? HD feels like Am stereo.. it sounded great. But with two competing flawed technologies nobody cared enough to go out and buy receivers. Static and Am stereo.. what was radio thinking? Hear the same thing on HD that you can hear on an analog radio that I already own? mmmm I'm not sure what are you guys are really thinking? I'll give you a hint.. It's not working.. And I'm not even an over paid "con"sultant..

Thanks to your leadership and greed. Total radio listening is trending down slowly. Radio ad revenues are flat and declining. And because you've fired everybody. radio employment has declined sharply. The current crop of management "your flunkies" are struggling to make the Internet a profitable and viable solution to the problems you've created. But they simply don't have a clue. Oh well you might as well fire them too. I'll give you a another clue.. Advertisers want accountability. Hype, and an intangible radio ad schedule won't due, thanks to the internet and Googles point and click.. I'm witting in Mr. Google for president!

Radio must go back to it's roots.. Serve it's communities and bring personalities back to radio. Hello Mcfly...What's missing is creativity, personality heart and sole. Thanks to your leadership radio isn't grooming it's future stars, if anything it's doing the exact opposite and killings it's future. The bottom line is important, but when the bottom line is more important than the art you end up killing the very things that made radio great!.. Hey it's ok... it's before your time. so you're forgiven..

Before you guys ran evil empires, and were children....Wait were you children? I'll save that for another time. Could you even imagine an ipod, computer or internet? I couldn't.. Yet, today children by the age of five, "radio's future" are already tapping on the key board. And by the age of 8, they're downloading music from the web to their ipod. Music lovers want to hear what they want, when they want it.. And some day we'll be downloading music from a wireless internet connection right to our automobiles.. I personally can't wait..

To the great one, Clear Channel radio really, really, sucks.. It's so bad. I'd dump Clear Channel to any sucker who can still pass a credit check And for the CC Clones. Cox, Emmis, Citadel and want to be's. Radio really sucks. Its time to sell radio while they still make suckers. It's over boys..and time to pack the golden parachutes. Screw the employees...Oh I'm sorry.. I forgot you already did. Hey have you thought of running a mortgage company? I hear you can screw customers, kill an industry..and get huge bonuses..I think all of you are qualified and pefect for the job.. It's great work if you can find it..

NO NEED TO COMPLAIN AND COMPLAIN AND COMPLAIN. JUST DON'T LISTEN TO
IT. THERE ARE THOSE OF US WHO LISTEN TO OUR RADIOS SEVERAL HOURS EACH WEEK AND ENJOY IT. THOSE WHO THINK RADIO WILL DIE HAVE LITTLE INSIGHT.

East coast and central USA are directly targeted by Europe and those signals are much weaker in the Western USA. West coast does better with Australia and New Zealand and other Pacific rim countries. I also do well here with central, south American, and Caribbean stations.

"Digital Audio Broadcasting Systems and Their Impact on the Terrestrial Radio Broadcast Service"

15. We will not establish a deadline for radio stations to convert to digital broadcasting. Stations may decide if, and when, they will provide digital service to the public. Several reasons support this decision. First, unlike television licensees, radio stations are under no statutory mandate to convert to a digital format. Second, a hard deadline is unnecessary given that DAB uses an in-band technology that does not require the allocation of additional spectrum. Thus, the spectrum reclamation needs that exist for DTV do not exist here. Moreover, there is no evidence in the record that marketplace forces cannot propel the DAB conversion forward, and effective markets tend to provide better solutions than regulatory schemes.

16. iBiquity argues that in the early stages of the transition, the Commission should favor and protect existing analog signals. It states that this could be accomplished by limiting the power level and bandwidth occupancy of the digital carriers in the hybrid mode. At some point in the future, when the Commission determines there is sufficient market penetration of digital receivers, iBiquity asserts that the public interest will be best served by reversing this presumption to favor digital operations. At that time, broadcasters will no longer need to protect analog operations by limiting the digital signal and stations should have the option to implement all-digital broadcasts. We decline to adopt iBiquity's presumption policy because it is too early in the DAB conversion process for us to consider such a mechanism. We find that such a policy, if adopted now, may have unknown and unintended consequences for a new technology that has yet to be accepted by the public or widely adopted by the broadcast industry.

Making these toy-like, table-top and wall mounted antennas to work is as rewarding as giving lessons to teach a baboon the fine art of French cuisine. Compared to an outdoor, roof-top well-designed yagis with rotor, these mini-omnidirectionals are like pinworms contending with anacondas.

All you say is true but remember that Circuit City IS an authorized retailer, so even if you got a defective one (as I did) it will be repaired or replaced with a new one (as mine was).

So I got a great deal through Circuit City. However I would not buy one from eBay or any non-authorized seller as warranty is key with any expensive purchase.

When Sporadic E happens almost anything will give you a catch. There's nothing wrong with a folded dipole tacked to an outside wall, especially in a higher-up room or apartment, if that's all you can do.

True. My comments on authorized sellers was not meant to suggest that CC was not one, although at this point it would seem that they've discontinued the E1 from their inventory.

Agreed, unless the ebay price was somehow just too sweet to resist (although that'd be unlikely, given the various cocerns that would come into play in offsetting any perceived benefit from a price reduction).

My comment on authorized sellers was meant to get at this point here: eBay sellers generally do not qualify as authorized eton sellers; so even if a warranty card or what-have-you is provided and even if the item is in a new state, a buyer could well find him/herself without a valid warranty....not a good thing with this product. Admittedly, there have been a few authorized eton sellers on ebay, if i recall correctly: sharper image, for instance sold the e1 on ebay for a brief while.

As a kid growing up in the 70's I loved radio. I built many transmitters and programmed many low power stations. I loved radio when personalities were allowed to bring their personality to work and on air too. There was a time when you could tell what city you were in by simply listening to a radio station. To be honest I find most radio today stale. With the exception of a few great stations it mostly all sounds the same. Corporate monolithic programming for all. When I'm in the mood for music.. I love Pandora.com and Slacker.com among other great web sites. When the radio is on it's mainly background noise while driving. I never listen to radio when home, because I have so many more great choices.. The spice of life is variety and excitement.

The average Metro-Area {Local} FM Radio Listener does not buy and use a "Turnstile" Omni-Directional FM Antenna for FM Radio DXing. {Distant Listening}.

They buy and use a "Turnstile" FM Antenna because it does work very well in Urban Areas; where they have strong FM Signals coming from many FM Radio Stations who's signals are originating from several locations and directions that are spread-out all around their Home or Office.

A whip or a open ring, depending on polarization. Or maybe an Andrew V.

Scooter,

The Future of Free Over-the-Air AM/FM Radio is Web-Based Inter-Active Participation by the Radio Listeners.

=IF= An FM "HD" Radio Station ran an Inter-Active WebSite that allowed the Radio Listeners to Choose from the 300 current Audio Selections; and Program* the Next Hour of Radio Listening : They would have a Nexus between the Radio Listener and the Radio Station.
* Certain Selection Algorithms would have to be in-place to precude repetitive and redundant playing of one piece of Music over-and-over-again for hour-after-hour.

Add-in an On-the-Web "Audition" of new Audio Selections to be Added to the Play List by the Listeners.

Yes - Such a System would create Brand Loyality between the Music Radio Station and the Music Radio Listener; and Radio Advertisers would PAY to Tap into that Brand Loyality.

-ps- This would apply equally to Analog or Digital AM/FM Radio and the Next Generation of Radio Listeners who are PC and Web Centered Audio Consumers who are Interested in Making Their Own Choices.

I concur.
The only reason none of the other media don't follow this line is that all were threatened with loosing access to the Pres and white house media pool. The republicants management of the media is pretty similar to how Putin managed the media. The question is, who learned from whom?

Would a circular loop be better??

I constructed a double dipole, and it is better tahn a yagi with 5 el.

| |lenght=75 cm = 1/4 wavelength
---------
| |
| |
```

wire is connected at A, the upper U and lower U.
I do not know if the ant is 75 OHM.

- Wouldn't the best omni-directional antenna

RG,

Here are Five Good Omni-Directional FM Antennas :

1 - Indoors the Whip Antenna built into the Radio is a very good Omni-Directional FM Radio Antenna.

2 - The common FM Folded Dipole mounted Vertically
On-a-Wall is a very good Omni-Directional FM Antenna.
Ready-Made and Low Cost plus Good Perfromance

3 - A single 96" long piece of Wire going Up-the-Wall from the Floor to the Ceiling that is Tapped at 32" from the Floor with TV 300 Ohm Twin-Lead to the FM Receiver can be a very effective Omni-Directional FM Antenna*.

| - 1/2 WL ~ 64 Inches
|
|
|
|
|
================= Twin-Lead to Radio
|
| - 1/4 WL ~ 32 Inches
```

* Also the Single Wire can be replaced by 300 Ohm Twin Lead too.

That Something Extra : This Flood-to-Ceiling Antenna can be used a 'bad' Weather In-Doors Shortwave Antenna too.

4 - Simple FM Radio Band Loop Antenna can be used as a Horizontal FM Loop Antenna and is fairly Omni-Directional Antenna too.
http://groups.google.com/group/rec.radio.shortwave/msg/db5d513ceb21150d
-Or- Mount it Vertically and it is very Directional.

5 - For Out-Side consider the "Snake" [Mono-Pole]
Vertical Antenna for the FM Radio Band

Problem with whips is that they have vertical polarization. FM is always transmitted with a strong horizontal component, the vertical component is optional.

The proof was already presented. From multiple prospectives even. The real issue is that you have chosen to believe the "controlled" media inspite of the fact of the other evidence and also the lack of evidence (where was he during this time?).

Concluding, Bush's record poor performance as president and his inability as a corporate manager is example enough of his inability to make intelligent decisions that one would have gained if he had server as a pilot in the AF.

Not true. FM is transmitted almost universally as circular polarization.
This has been so for at least a couple decades now.

I'm looking for an antenna switch (2 antennas, 1 receiver) and I've noticed that many are rated for 1.8-30 MHz, such as the MFJ models. Are these typically attenuating the MW band, or can they be used efficiently down to 500khz?

And yet, you, yourself have only presented gratuitous assertions.
Which, by the rules of logic, may be gratuitously denied.

Present some supporting information, and you may find an entirely different level of discussion.

But by your own language, you have provided precisely the assertions expected. Suggesting precious little grey matter for an argument, yourself.

Do have a nice, though, apparently, agitated day.

- - Problem with whips is that they have vertical polarization.
- - FM is always transmitted with a strong horizontal
- - component, the vertical component is optional.

- Not true. FM is transmitted almost universally as
- circular polarization. This has been so for at least
- a couple decades now.

IIRC - Initially like TV the Horizontal Polarization scheme was great for the Visual Line-of-Sight broadcasting from the TV Station's Tower to Home TV and FM Radio.

But FM Radios problem was the Automobile and getting a good quality FM Radio signal to the Cars and Trucks which 99.73% of the time had Vertical Whip Antennas.

Circular Polarization allowed FM Radio to be broadcasted equally well to both Home and Automobile; plus Circular Polarization did help to eliminate some Multi-path problems.

Brian,

Shortwave Radio Antenna Switch and AM/MW Band Coverage

The problem is not on the Lower-Side below 1.8 MHz : The actual 'problem' will manifest itself on the Higher Side lets say beyond 300 MHz [VHF]. They all work great for the AM/MW Radio Broadcast Band (BCB) 500 kHz to 1.8 MHz; and all the way down into the Long-Wave Radio {Low Frequency Band}.
http://cache.eb.com/eb/image?id=6887&rendTypeId=4
http://cache.eb.com/eb/image?id=4621&rendTypeId=4
http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Medium_Wave http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Long_wave

Note - The MFJ Antenna Switches all have a greater-than 50 dB Isolation at 500 MHz.
http://www.universal-radio.com/catalog/switch/2811.html

MATTER-OF-FACT - For the most part it ain't a 'problem' at all since these Switches are designed and being sold to High Frequency {Shortwave} Radio Users and Listeners.
The 1.8 MHz to 30 MHz Frequency Coverage Specification is simply stated to communicate to them that the device is good for the entire High Frequency {Shortwave Radio} Band.

The vast majority of these devices are fitted with SO-239
Jacks to accept PL-259 Plugs; that themselves are fitted to RG-8 & RG58 and their 'variations' of Coax Cables which is/was widely used in the AM/MW Radio Applications.

- Would a circular loop be better??

USER,

It would be 'easier' for many people to make and support a Square "Quad" Loop Element then a 42 Inch Diameter Circular Loop Element.

-but- Some Very Large Hula-Hoops have 42 Inch Diameter.

BUILDING - One of the Bigger Box AM/MW Loop Antennas :
The One Metre AM/MW Loop Antenna
-aka The Square Yard AM/MW Loop Antenna
These are about as big as you want to get when . . .
considering an AM/MW Loop Antenna for In-Doors Use.
http://groups.google.com/group/rec.radio.shortwave/msg/80dfaec741994999

FM Modification - Just make this 42 Inch Hula-Hoop Loop Antenna into a Single-Turn (1T) Loop and you have a Full Wave-Length FM Loop Antenna.

now that was easy - iane ~ RHF ~ RHF {pomkia}

HD radio doesn't have the luxury of 30 years to evolve like Fm did. Before Fm, Am was king and we still lived in a world with 8 tracks. 45's, cassettes.. Computers, digital, and the internet weren't even on the horizon. Technologies are advancing faster than most of us can keep up.. The internet and wireless connections have touched just about every industry. Radio, the music industry, and other mass media's are more vulnerable because their content is easily created. And because of technology, some dude in his basement can create radio shows and broadcast to cars through the air like radio via a wireless internet connection. Podcast's and music can also be created. You don't need a tower anymore to be a broadcaster and you don't radio or a recorded label to be a rock star.

OH MY GOD HERE WE GO AGAIN! ,,,,
Available in Europe soon. Can the US be far behind?
And no, it doesn't require WiFi or WiMax.
Click here for the video that explains it all <http://www.cnettv.com/9742-1_53-32463.html>.
As CNet's Brian Cooley says, BMW is "the first car company to embrace a factory-optional Internet connection."
As one correspondent noted to me, imagine if BMW owners could have their own branded internet radio station with format choices. BMW rocks, Jazz on BMW, BMW plays the classics.
When your brand is BMW you certainly don't need Clear Channel.
Not unless you want Ryan Seacrest, and Clear Channel is the only way to get him.

John Hogan, dump Clear Channel to any sucker who can still pass a credit check And for the CC Clones. Cox, Emmis, Citadel and want to be's. Its time to sell radio while they still make suckers. It's over boys..and time to pack the golden parachutes. Screw the employees...Oh I'm sorry.. I forgot you already did. Hey have you thought of running a mortgage company? I hear you can screw customers, kill an industry..and get huge bonuses..I think all of you are qualified and perfect for the job.. It's great work if you can find it..

I'm not endorsing or dissing any canidate - but am I to understand that now the only requirements for being president are being able to fly an aircraft and having served in Viet Naum. Wow. We either have really slim pickings for president or we really need to take a look at what we expect from the person. There's more to it than just being

What the scumbags at iBiquity, and especially the JB didn't count on, was that there are now a zillion competing technologies, versus 35 years ago for analog FM. Major-radio stocks are down 90%, CC is down 2/3 and stopping all investments in the future and dumping HD Format Lab streams, due to lack of interest:

"CLEAR CHANNEL PULLS THE PLUG ON SOME HD RADIO STATIONS"

"After conducting a survey of 340 HD2 stations to determine their programming needs, the folks at Clear Channel have dumped a number of their HD 'Format Lab' stations due to a lack of demand."

http://talentfilter.blogspot.com/2008/02/clear-channel-pulls-plug-on-some-hd.html

"Clear Channel's murky future"

"Sad because eliminating new hires (including sellers), failing to replace those who leave, stopping all investment in the future, and halting all advertising and research is the equivalent of saying that necessity requires us to strangle the goose that lays the golden eggs, even as the goose is up for sale."

http://www.hear2.com/2008/01/clear-channels.html

HD Radio is a dinosaur.

I ain't white, but unlike you, I dislike no one.

I said it before, and I say it again... Vicente Fox is a stinking piece of Mexican shit.

Hey, buttfuck boy... try to pay attention, you little piece of non-listening excrement.

Damn, the Canucky Niggah didn't have a damn thing to say...

Run along little Canucky dweeb.

Stuff a taco in it, Ramon!

Did I say it was, shit for brains?

You dumb sand niggers (sorry, I categorize ya all this way) need to understand that you need to get your collective shit together...

I thank the Great Spirit every day for the fact that I'm not white like you.

Ace is doing ok!

They don't call me 'Ace' for nothing!

All of my DX is better than your DX no matter what I do.

After eating the taco's wouldn't they be capable of gassing themelves?

It is then my patriotic friend, you must reach in the closet, place your hands upon the weapon, and blow the cock sucking, bean blower back into Mary's arms....

You claim to be 'Cherokee'... I think you're just 'Wannabee'...

How many American lives were affected by the slant eyed shit throughout the entire war?

Wonder why.... could it be that the Canucky Niggah is timid, afraid...?

No need to do anything more productive than cash the checks, invest the money, do some DX'ing, and rile up the mentally ill Canucks!

Why is it that you queers always seem to SIGH a lot? (1)

LOLOLOLOLOLOL... what a damn dumb cunt you are!

Now get your homo ass working on that documentation, boy!

Give it a shot queer boys, I dare ya!

Dumbass Canucks, sure ain't Rolex wearin' respectable folk...!

Cocksuckers such as your self.

Hit the road, 'tard.

Toss 'em all, especially the Canucks!

So, just why is it that you queers always seem to SIGH a lot? (2)

Now go suck on some sushi, you little miscreant.

I just asked you to have the cunt send me a letter, boy.

So, just why is it that you queers always seem to SIGH a lot? (3)

Yes, I am witty, and I am wise!

"I'm so obese I had to get the extra heavy duty plastic blow-up doll"

Let me sum up, you Canucks are assholes!

So, just why is it that you queers always seem to SIGH a lot? (4)

Hit the road, drug addled fool.

Shame on CanaDuh for killing thousands of people every day.

Be sure to tell the bitch to send me that letter, faggot!

get your bitch daughter to send me a letter

Inquiring minds want to know just why is it that you queers always seem to SIGH a lot? (5)

Have the bitch send me the letter!

Well, go tell your other cocksucking countrymen.

Hey, have the bitch send me a letter

I can show her mine, and she can show me yours?

Ain't gonna happen, ya got no air farce, ya got no ne vuy, va goy nuthitin?

If you think for a moment that they'll listen to a drunken dumbass Canuck you'd be sadly mistaken!

Have the bitch send me a f00kin letter!

You folk really think ya got balls?

Now run along to wherever it is you little debutantes run off to...

I'll be waiting for that letter from your daughter, asshole!

Oh yeah, tell me baby...

Hey, little pussy boy, we spell it "cunt" out here, just like I think I spelled it originally, boy.

Never touched the skanky,,,

If I don't get that letter, boy, then you and your daughter must both be drunk, eh?

Finally shut you up, eh boy?

Have the bitch send me a letter on whatever letterhead YOU might make up.

Ain't that just speshul! He's got to go find somewun to fake him a lettter.

Have the bitch send me a letter on her firms letterhead, boy.

Great, then get your bitch daughter to send me a letter on her firms letterhead within the next two weeks!

Have your daughter draw up a contract, BOY!

Hey, 'Edurado', have your daughter get in touch with me, amigo

True, ain't it, little faux Hispanic BOY... (Heavy emphasis on the BOY!)

Guess that shut the little boy up!

Stuff it up your prancing ass, 'Tardo!

I'm LMFAO, since I've busted the f00kin faggot!

You are after all a drug addled 'tard boy who obviously knows little about the SWL/DX hobby.

Go blow some IBO Cock, and leave the real radio hobbyists alone, OK?

Let the faggot boy prove it!

LMFAO at the f00kin faggot

Yes, I learn more and more with each passing day!

LMFAO at the pathological liar!

Lying 'tard boy, much like the other debutante, malcontent, faux boys who inhabit the lace we call RRS.

You, on the other hand are nothing more than a sorry little homosexual 'tard

Liar, liar, pantalunes on fire! (1)

New history will be made when we crush CanaDuh!

Kan you just imagining that, you little faggot Cannucky boy?

Anybody, even Bozo, is worth more than some dumbass, faggot, Canuck!

Get busy, boy!

But you can't prove it, retard boy!

I know you faggots have dreams

Blow it out your ass, you dumbass Canadian! You and the rest of your dumbass countrymen, and women too!

You'd not be very happy if I returned, little bitch boy!

Go get some IBOCock, 'tard boy, and bring home a taste for yer mama.

Go give your boyfriend a blow job!

Talk about misery, you're in f00kin CanaDuh, boy!

Something for your faux Hispanic cock sucking brain to think about, eh?

Or better yet, go get yourself some IBO Cock!

Poor little cocksucker just had it handed to him

Eh? You sum dumass Canucuy bithyboy...

As long as it screws you Canucks, I'm a happy camper!

They are mere asswipes, suitable for flushing.

That's because you're a fucking liar!

Cry me a f00kin river.

Awwwww... the poor whiny dumbass Canuck is back at it again today.

Huh... you be just another stupid white boy outta Cleveland...
I suggest you get together with your "significant other" and bump butt with each other,

Because I hate White Boy Canucks who suck cock...

Best you shuffle down the alley! That's what your mama wanted!

Crazy Retarded Australian People?

"Even 2 cents is more than a totally worthless Canuck"

Funny how the US Govt. sent me over $50,000 last year

You can preDICK all you want, you fraudulent cock sucking, pathologically lying old bastard boy!

Hey, dumbfuck Canuck, I was not asked to leave!

I don't use Chink stuff

I went and bought ammo... I still gots it case them tard boys such as edweena gets stirred up.

And 10,000 rounds isn't a lot.

It was Russian ammo. I don't like the Chinese stuff.

Now where did I put that other case of ammo..

I don't use Chink ammo.

That's not Canuckian, boy!

Kiss my ass, pedant!

I'm LMFAO, Mr. Gay-Lick!

Obfuscate, you little prancer!

LMAO at the 'tard.

Thing is, you 'tards are pretty fixated upon one set of parameters.
That is after all why you are considered to be 'tards!

As always, your head is up your f00kin ass.

You fuckin' Liberal asswipes are always ready to give somebodys else's goodies away...

And, hopefully, my dumbass cousin in Mill Valley will leave me her Corvette.

Obviously, you leep your head up your f00kin ass all day long.

I don't 'fear' homos, oh faux one!

Liar, liar, pantalunes on fire! (2)

Apparently you are the 'bendover boy'....

Do you spit or swallow?

Oh, I certainly have, time after time.

At least I went farther than you!

Good lubricant for you and the boys?

It's what dxAce uses!

that's good enough for me!

One can never slide the BS by dxAce

Not as well as you, fudge pack.

Go for it, dumbass!

Oh come on... it's Fall forward and Spring back. Everyone knows that!

Hit the road, drug addled fool.

Hey, I love kickin' gay-lick ass!

Pretty much what I indicated to you a while back, you f00kin prancer.

The only thing you know about short wave is that that is what your mother gave you when she sent your f00kin ass packin' outta Cleveland.

Screw the drug addled retards.

Nah, I only attack the messenger when he/she/it is obviously drug addled.

So, beat the rush and get the hell off of RRS, you f00kin retard.

Well, in you, we have a drug addled retard in our midst.

Get over it, you fake Hispanic piece of excrement.

And when you do confront HD, you'll have Cocksucker Dave and
The Prancer Boys to thank for it.

Damn... I'm of mixed race ancestry myself, what ever should I do?

Next time we come over the pond once again to save your sorry ass's we'll have to dismantle that stuff.

Heck, I bought 1000 shares of FSEAX the other day.

Don't do business with the Huntington Investment Company,

At any rate, I'd bet it beats the Canucky Third World state of care...

CanaDuh sucks...

Wanna go to war, shit head?

Think you might win? Think you got a chance?

If you don't... I'd keep my fookin Canucky mouth shut, boy...

Meanwhile, I plan for the Spring campaign, looking forward to the

http://www.watchec.com/news/Jaeger_leCoultre_replica_watch.html
Jaeger-LeCoultre watches have been a tradition since 1833. The Jaeger LeCoultre Reverso replica watches are rectangular and have cases that reverse to show either finished side; the Master Control replica watches are round and have passed a 1000-hour test. Other than these distinguishing characteristics, each collection of Jaeger LeCoultre are pretty different. Jaeger-LeCoultre replica watchThere are plain watches, chronographs, dual-time watches, moonphase watches, and more.
http://www.watchec.com/news/Jaeger_leCoultre_replica_watch.html

Today, the Jaeger-LeCoultre Reverso is one of the most famous watches ever produced, but were you aware that the company got its start Jaeger-LeCoultre replica watch producing ebauches for other companies? A little known fact about Jaeger-LeCoultre is that in addition to producing movements for its own watches, the company has also produced movements for famous watch houses such as Vacheron Constantin, Jaeger-LeCoultre replica watch Audemars Piguet, and IWC. As a matter of fact, in the early part of the 20th Century, Jaeger-LeCoultre even supplied ebauches to the great firm of Patek Philippe. Then as now, Jaeger-LeCoultre was considered one of the finest watchmakers in Switzerland.

The year was 1833 when thirty-year-old Antoine LeCoultre, Jaeger-LeCoultre replica watch son of Vallee de Joux watchmaker Jacques LeCoultre, opened a small factory in the town of Le Sentier. Amazingly enough, the current Jaeger-LeCoultre factory is only a few feet away from the site of the original factory. In any event, LeCoultre soon proved himself to be a gifted watchmaker,Jaeger-LeCoultre replica watch but an even more brilliant inventor. In 1844, LeCoultre revolutionized the watch industry with the invention of the millionometer,Jaeger-LeCoultre replica watch an instrument with which measurements of up to one thousandths of a millimeter could be made accurately.Jaeger-LeCoultre replica watch As a result, precisely finished components could be manufactured, resulting in greatly improved accuracy in timekeeping. Likewise, Jaeger-LeCoultre replica watchthe metric system became the universal measuring standard in watchmaking, while other systems were rendered obsolete.

LeCoultre's motto -- "we must base our experience on science" - was particularly true when it came to manufacturing precision movements and tools. Jaeger-LeCoultre replica watchThe artistry came later at the hands of a master watchmaker, who assembled, decorated and regulated the movements. Jaeger-LeCoultre replica watch In short order, LeCoultre became the leading supplier of movements, parts and tools to the watchmaking industry in Switzerland.

LeCoultre movements were so highly regarded, in fact, that until 1910, Jaeger-LeCoultre replica watch the company provided Patek Philippe with most of its raw movements. It was only in later years that Patek Philippe built its own movements from scratch. In the meantime, other companies had come to rely exclusively on LeCoultre's products,Jaeger-LeCoultre replica watch from which they would create finished watches. LeCoultre's success was so great that between 1900 and 1919, 40,000 raw movements were produced. Movements sold for between 100 and 400 francs each, not an inconsiderable sum of money back thenJaeger-LeCoultre replica watch.

In 1925, the grandson of the firm's founder, David LeCoultre, merged his company with that of Edmond Jaeger, the exclusive supplier of watch movements to Cartier. This is when the modern company known as Jaeger-LeCoultre first came into existence. Incredibly enough, up to this point, Jaeger-LeCoultre had not sold any watches under its own name. The merger, however, prompted further technical innovations, not the least of which was a case made from stainless steel, as well as the creation of the smallest mechanical movement in the world, Jaeger-LeCoultre replica watchwhich weighed less than one gram.

The year 1931 saw the introduction of the Reverso,Jaeger-LeCoultre replica watch a wristwatch that could be turned 180 degrees within the case, thereby protecting the crystal and dial. It was a fantastic creation and one that was enthusiastically received by the public. Jaeger-LeCoultre replica watchUnfortunately, the worldwide economic crisis and World War II conspired to prevent the Reverso from achieving its full potential. Jaeger-LeCoultre replica watchChanging fashions coupled with the advent of waterproof watches might have forever doomed the watch to obscurity, had it not been for an Italian dealer who visited the factory in the 1960's and noticed a number of unused Reverso cases sitting in a watchmakers' drawer. Jaeger-LeCoultre replica watchThe Italian dealer bought the cases and fitted them with movements. The finished watches were an instant sell-out and the rest is history. Today, the Reverso is by far Jaeger-LeCoultre's most popular model.

Another interesting story concerns David LeCoultre's bid for Patek Philippe.Jaeger-LeCoultre replica watch In 1932, Patek Philippe was in major financial straits and looking for a white knight. LeCoultre, whose company manufactured movements for Patek, wanted to acquire a majority interest. Jaeger-LeCoultre replica watchHe came close to finalizing a deal, but the Stern brothers, whose company supplied the dials used in Patek Philippe replica watches, ultimately acquired the company. Although Patek Philippe has certainly prospered under the Stern family's management, it is nonetheless interesting to contemplate what effect a Patek Philippe/Jaeger-LeCoultre merger may have had on the Swiss watch industry.

Needless to say, the company has continued to thrive, introducing such innovations as the Memovox, Jaeger-LeCoultre replica watchFuturematic, Atmos Clock (which in and of itself could be the subject of an article) and strikingly original movements such as the world's thinnest automatic with a thickness of just 2.35 mm, just to name a few. Jaeger-LeCoultre replica watchThe thin automatic movement in particular was an incredible success, as both Vacheron Constantin and Audemars Piguet featured it in wristwatches advertised as being the world's slimmest self-winding timepieces. During the 1970's and early 1980's, Jaeger-LeCoultre produced a 36 jewel, self-winding calibre for Patek Philippe. Once again, both companies had come full circle.

On a final note, it is worth noting that Jaeger-LeCoultre is one of the few companies in Switzerland that still produces its own movements, cases, dials, hands, and bracelets. Virtually every single component in a Jaeger-LeCoultre replica watch is hand-finished, produced in-house, and this in turn results in strict quality control. As a result, Jaeger-LeCoultre replica watches are recognized as being among the very finest hand-crafted watches available and evidence of this can be seen in the fact that Jaeger-LeCoultre regularly produces such masterpieces as the Reverso Tourbillon and Reverso Minute Repeater. There is also the Master Control series of watches, which boast 1,000 hours of testing and assembly at the patient hands of a master watchmaker.

In any event, if you are contemplating the purchase of a Jaeger-LeCoultre wristwatch, you've made an excellent choice. It's a highly prestigious and respected brand with a long and wonderful history, Jaeger-LeCoultre replica watch as well as a proven track record.

Don't forget about Afghanistan.

First off you realize that once we leave the many factions over there will continue fighting one-another as they have for centuries no matter who happens to be and invader du jour. Next you have to realize that someone equally bad will fill the power vacuum that we have created by deposing two regimes. Finally you have to read up on the history of unsuccessful incursions in that part of the world. Then just start pulling back and find a tall hotel with a flat roof that we can land a helicopter on and evacuate the last invaders before we turn the lights out.

Not always. There are FM stations with no horizontal pol at all, due to spacing considerations with TV channel 6.

If it's just for receiving, most cable TV A/B switches are more than adequate. The normal frequency range is DC to at least 870MHz (and will work well above), and they are inexpensive (a few dollars/pounds).

What you're looking at is probably the spec for a unit which is suitable for transmitting, and 1.8MHz is the lowest frequency in common use by radio amateurs. This switch probably also works down to DC, but no one at MFJ has actually bother to measure it!

Threatening to kill election workers is almost as smart as when you said that the only good air marshal is a dead air marshal.

Why are some of the craziest people on this newsgroup ex US Military?

I ain't white, but unlike you, I dislike no one.

I said it before, and I say it again... Vicente Fox is a stinking piece of Mexican shit.

Mouth wide open, ready to take a load.

Hey, buttfuck boy... try to pay attention, you little piece of non-listening excrement.

Why are the retards mostly dumbass Canucks?

Damn, the Canucky Niggah didn't have a damn thing to say...

Run along little Canucky dweeb.

Stuff a taco in it, Ramon!

Obviously you're just a retard boy who failed as a corporate manager.

Did I say it was, shit for brains?

You dumb sand niggers (sorry, I categorize ya all this way) need to understand that you need to get your collective shit together...

I thank the Great Spirit every day for the fact that I'm not white like you.

Because you're a moron, Druggie!

Ace is doing ok!

They don't call me 'Ace' for nothing!

And you, just another retard on the short bus.

All of my DX is better than your DX no matter what I do.

After eating the taco's wouldn't they be capable of gassing themelves?

It is then my patriotic friend, you must reach in the closet, place your hands upon the weapon, and blow the cock sucking,
bean blower back into Mary's arms....

You claim to be 'Cherokee'... I think you're just 'Wannabee'...

How many American lives were affected by the slant eyed shit throughout the entire war?

Wonder why.... could it be that the Canucky Niggah is timid, afraid...?

No need to do anything more productive than cash the checks, invest the money, do some DX'ing, and rile up the mentally ill Canucks!

Why is it that you queers always seem to SIGH a lot? (1)

LOLOLOLOLOLOL... what a damn dumb cunt you are!

Now get your homo ass working on that documentation, boy!

Give it a shot queer boys, I dare ya!

Dumbass Canucks, sure ain't Rolex wearin' respectable folk...!

Cocksuckers such as your self.

Hit the road, 'tard.

Toss 'em all, especially the Canucks!

So, just why is it that you queers always seem to SIGH a lot? (2)

Now go suck on some sushi, you little miscreant.

I just asked you to have the cunt send me a letter, boy.

So, just why is it that you queers always seem to SIGH a lot? (3)

Yes, I am witty, and I am wise!

"I'm so obese I had to get the extra heavy duty plastic blow-up doll"

Let me sum up, you Canucks are assholes!

So, just why is it that you queers always seem to SIGH a lot? (4)

Hit the road, drug addled fool.

Shame on CanaDuh for killing thousands of people every day.

Be sure to tell the bitch to send me that letter, faggot!

get your bitch daughter to send me a letter

Inquiring minds want to know just why is it that you queers always seem to SIGH a lot? (5)

Have the bitch send me the letter!

Well, go tell your other cocksucking countrymen.

Hey, have the bitch send me a letter

I can show her mine, and she can show me yours?

Ain't gonna happen, ya got no air farce, ya got no ne vuy, va goy nuthitin?

If you think for a moment that they'll listen to a drunken dumbass Canuck you'd be sadly mistaken!

Have the bitch send me a f00kin letter!

You folk really think ya got balls?

Now run along to wherever it is you little debutantes run off to...

I'll be waiting for that letter from your daughter, asshole!

Oh yeah, tell me baby...

Hey, little pussy boy, we spell it "cunt" out here, just like I think I spelled it originally, boy.

Never touched the skanky,,,

If I don't get that letter, boy, then you and your daughter must both be drunk, eh?

Finally shut you up, eh boy?

Have the bitch send me a letter on whatever letterhead YOU might make up.

Ain't that just speshul! He's got to go find somewun to fake him a lettter.

Have the bitch send me a letter on her firms letterhead, boy.

Great, then get your bitch daughter to send me a letter on her firms letterhead within the next two weeks!

Have your daughter draw up a contract, BOY!

Hey, 'Edurado', have your daughter get in touch with me, amigo

True, ain't it, little faux Hispanic BOY... (Heavy emphasis on the BOY!)

Guess that shut the little boy up!

Stuff it up your prancing ass, 'Tardo!

I'm LMFAO, since I've busted the f00kin faggot!

You are after all a drug addled 'tard boy who obviously knows little about the SWL/DX hobby.

Go blow some IBO Cock, and leave the real radio hobbyists alone, OK?

Let the faggot boy prove it!

LMFAO at the f00kin faggot

Yes, I learn more and more with each passing day!

LMFAO at the pathological liar!

Lying 'tard boy, much like the other debutante, malcontent, faux boys

Bob [K5QWG],

One Political Program on TV that I watched over the Weekend made-up of a Panel of Talking Heads; had one who was very Cynical who Inferring that "IF" Hillary R. Clinton should lose the Democrat Party Nomination in 2008 : HRC and Bill Clinton would do everything that they could to sabotage the Barack Insane*
Obama Campaign against the Republican Nominee John "Smiley" McCain. - http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/John_McCain

* Yes you can call him Barack "Insane" Obama or refer to him as BHO -but- You can use his legal middle name of "Hussein" -cause- To do so is both Racist and Anti-Islamic.

The Talking Head's 'theory' was that "IF" Barack Insane* Obama won the US Presidency in 2008 : Then HRC would never have another chance at the Presidency because BHO would most like be President for 8 Years; and then the American People would Seek-a-Change; and would Elect a Republican for the next President in 2016; at which time HRC would be Age 69 going on 70 and look like a Tired-Old-Women to most of the Younger Voters.
http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Hillary_Rodham_Clinton
* By 2016 most/many of the Post WW2 Baby-Boomers will be Dead and the Next Generation of Voters will be seeking out Political Leaders that are Of-Their-Generation.

Note - The same Taliking Head said that because of John "Smiley" McCain at Age 72 would be a one-term President and HRC could have another shot at the Presidency in 2012.

Let me ask a legitimate question...

Do you think the wing commander's statement may have been influenced by the commander knowing that W's daddy was a big shot in Washington?

Or maybe he should have committed a career ending move by telling the truth. What would you do?

P.S.

Speaking of career ending moves, how about the Generals in Iraq 2 or 3 years ago who said "We need more troops" (a 'surge', if you will) and got forced into early retirement for their trouble.

A few years later, W 'came up' with the brilliant idea of a 'surge'. I wonder if W ever apologized (or re-instated) those generals who originally brought it up...

No, I don't think so. GHW Bush was a military hero, himself. He knew and understood the value of the truth in training pilots to serve in combat.

More importantly, a wing commander doesn't get to be a wing commander without the hide to tell the truth and fade the heat.

> Or maybe he should have committed a career ending move by telling the I'm no stranger to politically sensitive situations in my career. And while not as visible as the President and his son, I have been put in a situation where telling the truth to a corporate vice president about his own kid could have been instantly fatal to my career, and being out of the public eye, I could have been launched from the building and no one would have been the wiser.

I told the truth.

Things got a little warm in my chair for a while. But the VP knew that truth is a much more actionable, and substantive commodity than a lie. And though he didn't like it....he accepted it, and acted accordingly.

I was with the company for another 11 years.

A wing commander worth his salt would tell the truth, as well.

As I recall, there was no forced retirement.

And as I recall, the politics of the comments didn't involve only the White House.

The problems with the comments is the way they were made, and where they were made. Not what was actually said.

The surge had been under discussion for some time well before it was discussed publicly. And it didn't originate with Mr Bush. It originated with his Generals. And would not have been publicly discussed had it not been for political opposition leaking the strategy to the press.

Sheesh...why has everybody got such a hard-on against his middle name? It was given to him by his parents when he was very, very young. It's not like -he- picked it.

...or are you implying that children are responsible for the 'sins' of their parents?

I'm sure anything is possible.

Converting an R390a to use all solid state components instead of tubes would seem to defeat one of the key values of the radio.

Personal opinion, but I vote a resounding "NO".

What would be the point of doing it? Why bother?

Why try and make it into something it isn't?

Do you have all the necessary lab test equipment to measure IMD and other parameters to make sure you're not worse off than when you started?

Yes, the ballast tubes are rare -- but there are work-arounds for just that specific issue rather than modifying the entire radio.

Huh?????

Thank a liberal?

The Republicans have been in power for over 7 years; Republicans in general (and this Administration in specific) have been (notoriously) pro big business (as in Exxon, banking, the mortgage companies, etc, etc) and yet you say "Blame a liberal" for the housing mess and the energy mess. Are you are saying the Republicans are liberals?

If this isn't just a knee-jerk reaction on your part, you have some 'splaining to do cuz ALL of the above happened on those liberal Republican's watch. The buck stops there...

I am selling a Ten Tec RX-320D Receiver with the Worldstation software.
I believe this package sells from Worldstation now for $415.00.The radio is in the box with manual and accessories and is in like new condition.
Bought it fully intending to set it up and DX with it but personal circumstances have changed and it just didn't happen.

$300.00 plus $15.00 shipping. I will take PAYPAL or a US Postal money order only.

My eBay feedback is under OFFDAN.

E-mail if interested:

Ya know, I noticed that myself. Had to do a bit of looking to see just what party (no pun) he was with.

I think my first clue was that no party (no pun) was mentioned in the first number of articles I read. No surprise.

Fookin 'retard.

Indeed, I'm now at WAR with Canuckistan..

May the Great Spirit help the hapless bastards.

Actually VA facilities are quite good, but if you Canucky niggahs poke around one might find a lot of things wrong.

At any rate, I'd bet it beats the Canucky Third World state of care...

CanaDuh sucks...

Wanna go to war, shit head?

Think you might win? Think you got a chance?

If you don't... I'd keep my fookin Canucky mouth shut, boy...

Meanwhile, I plan for the Spring campaign, looking forward to the Blind River Massacre.

I collect stamps!

Radio faces challenges in the near future because too many gadgets are coming to the market that do a better of of providing music and entertainment. Fm radio has become nothing more than a jukebox and cannot survive in a world of Ipods, wimax, satellite, internet and other new technology on the horizon that's unknown.

Clear Channel .. I'd dump Clear Channel to any sucker who can still pass a credit check And for the CC Clones. Cox, Emmis, Citadel and want to be's. Radio really sucks. Its time to sell radio while they still make suckers. It's over boys..and time to pack the golden parachutes. Screw the employees...Oh I'm sorry.. I forgot you already did. Hey have you thought of running a mortgage company? I hear you can screw customers, kill an industry..and get huge bonuses..I think all of you are qualified and perfect for the job.. It's great work if you can find it..

Hell, how many 'Final Concerts' did The Who have before their final concert which wasn't their final concert as Daltry & Townshend got together themselves & called their return concert tour 'The Who.'

So, I guess Steve has a few departures & re-arrivals to go in order to catch up. Sure wish he could play music like The Who though.................

It's been done for the R-392, so I don't see why you couldn't do it for the R390A.

This R-392 page
http://www.roveroresearch.com/r392/r392.html will eventually lead you to this page http://users.erols.com/mdinolfo/r392ss1.htm

It's all very primitive, but that was the state of the net back then.

As the others have mentioned, the goal is to a box of fire bottles, so the value would be to restore to a tubed version, not solid state.

-his- AWOL statement.

You live up there don't you.

What do you think today will bring.

The only thing that makes it bad on him is all the BS he has put out in the pass. How he has to eat his words.

My wife and I talked about it this morning when it came on TV, I told her that's why I haven't cheated on her. If I got caught I would sure hate to have to face her. Did you see the look on her face but then she may have done the same thing!

I got a big boil on my face, I took my med's and I'm going to bed.

Night.

Radio has become . . . "The Stuff" - That Sells STUFF !

It is not simply Clear Channel : It is the present day Corporate Media Cuture of Broadcast AM/FM Radio in Search of the Right Demographics and Good Numbers.

* The only thing that would change it is a Federal Mandate to Localize Over-the-Air Radio Broadcast Content from 6~9 AM and 4~7 PM.

* Shut-down 3/4ths of the AM Radio Stations from 10 PM to 5 AM {Over-Night}

* If you Ain't going to do DAB Eureka 147 http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/EUREKA_147 http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Digital_Audio_Broadcasting Then Expand the present FM Radio Band from 76 MHz to 88 MHz and migrate many of the AM Radio Stations {especially Rural AM Radio Stations} to the AM Radio Band.

924. New "portable" HD chipsets still very power hungry

"HD Radio"

Until now, portable HD Radio receivers have been unavailable because the chipsets needed by this technology required too much power to be practical for a battery-operated device. However, in January 2008 at the Consumer Electronics Show (CES) in Las Vegas iBiquity unveiled a prototype of a new iPod-sized portable receiver. It is based on a new chipset developed by Samsung. Although portable, it is still a relatively power-hungry device (it will run on an average set of alkaline batteries in about two hours, according to an iBiquity engineer). But Samsung engineers at CES say a second-generation chipset due in 2009 will be about 40 percent more power efficient and then a third-generation chipset due about a year later will use even less energy. According to iBiquity, Sony and others have expressed an interest in using the first-generation chipset and that the first portable HD Radios could be on the retail market in the USA as early as Christmas 2008."

http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/HD_Radio

Let me get this straight, Eduardo - the current "new" Samsung chipset has a battery life of only 2 hours, and the next-gen chip, due out in 2009, will be 40% more efficient - that leaves about 3 hours of battery life. DAB radios in the UK (DAB now defunct) have a bettery life of 10 to 16 hours. Let's see - my little Sony ICF-S10MK2 analog pocket-radio, will probably go 200+ hours on two "AA" batteries. Lots-of-luck!

IBOCcrock,

In reality the 'portable' HD-Radio will be part of the Third Wave of HD-Radio deployment and adoption.

The First Wave - Presently there are first and second generation HD-Radios for the Home; and these Home
HD-Radios do not have Power as an identifiable issue :
Because they run-off of the House's AC Power {Mains}
as their Source of Energy.

The Really All Important "The Second Wave" will be the BIG ADVANCEMENT toward the Earily Adoption of HD-Radio : Will come in the placement of HD-Radios in Cars and Trucks. Again like in the Home the Power Source is not and identifiable issue with HD-Radio in the Automobile; since the HD-Radio runs-off the Car's self-charging 12 Volt DC Systems.

NOTE - A Rental Car with and HD-Radio in it Exposes 50 or more Radio Listeners to HD-Radio each year. Allow them to Experience HD-Radio for themselves.

IMHO - The History of HD-Radio will follow the path of FM Radio becoming 'intergrated' over time into the now
"Ubiquitous" AM/FM Radio.

Sometime In-the-Future and That-Time-Will-Come !
When the FCC Issues Rules and Regulations that Mandates that All New Radios will be fully Digital
"All Mode" AM/FM/DS Radios
-aka- All Digital IBOC "HD" AM/FM Radio with Direct Satellite (DS) Plug-and-Play.
Once that FCC Requirement happens Digital Radio Broadcasting will be "The Standard" in the USA within Five Years after it's implementation.

Hello Everyone - You don't have to Like -or- Dislike {Hate}

All,

For all that it is worth via the net, I can vouch for the veracity and accuracy in regards to the descriptions of Mike's radios. I will also vouch for the quality of the radios he's selling. I bought a set from him and the set was EXACTLY as described (this was an as-new RF2200). Packing was professional quality. You can deal with confidence in this seller.

"Is HD Radio Toast?"

"There are serious issues of coverage. Early adopters who bought HD radios report serious drop-outs, poor coverage, and interference. The engineers of Ibiquity may argue otherwise and defend the system, but the industry has a serious PR problem with the very people we need to get the word out on HD... In other words, everything you can find on the regular FM dial... The word has already gotten out about HD Radio. People who have already bought an HD Radio are telling others of their experience (mostly bad) and no amount of marketing will reverse this."

I shipped mine off to Eton yesterday for warranty repairs. They responded to my warranty request right away, and gave me no static about it at all. I hope that the issues are dealt with and I can enjoy the radio for many years. It is an overall nice set. I noted on my cover letter that they could send me back a non-XM model if they wished.. don't know that they would/will.. but I left the option open for them.

Indeed, Circuit City did have a sell-off of old-stock E1XMs about 3 months back or so. Given the problems with QC with the Eton E1, one is best off buying new from a seller that will guarantee that the item is new stock (e.g. Universal Radio). In addition to concerns over QC, one should also consider that the newer E1 radios are more stable on SSB reception (the drift issue in the older ones seems not to be a problem with the newer ones). Lastly, if one is looking to purchase a unit with a valid warranty, consider Eton's warranty rules:
http://www.etoncorp.com/warranty "limited warranty begins on the original date of purchase, and is valid only on products purchased through an authorized Et&#65533;n retailer". A list of some of these retailers can be found at the bottom of the E1XM product page on the Eton Corp website: http://www.etoncorp.com/product_card/?p_ProductDbId=5971 (e.g. Universal, Grove, HRO, NPR, and so on).

Here is my stand alone internet wi fi radio http://www.amazon.com/Intellitouch-ITC-IR1000B-Grace-Wifi-Radio/dp/B000YGNZN4

I love it!
It is like an old school AM table radio with one big speaker. HOWEVER it has stereo output in the back and it was easy to setup with the http://reciva.com/website to set the presets on the radio. It is not web controlled but the presets are and all it takes is a click on the website....then a push of the button on the radio and the new preset is there in about 10 seconds total.
It sounds great....like like FM mono in the single speaker.

Check out the forums at the reciva site for details knowing it is sold as a couple other brand names in Europe.

It depends upon your definition of radio. :-)

There are many radio stations streaming their programing over the Internet that never were, and probably never will be broadcasting over shortwave.

If you want to listen to those programs, they are a good alternative to "top 40 via satellite" or Rush Limbaugh. Having a radio type interface instead of a computer extends access to those programs to the less technical, or in places that a computer would not really fit, such as besides your bed.

In my case, it won't replace my beside radio (a Kenwood R-5000, with 20 meters of random wire antenna), but it might replace my wife's, a Sony AM/FM portable.
It could very easily replace my clock radio.

BTW, did you know that there was a failed effort to produce one 10 years ago: http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Kerbango and that there is a U.S. patent issued (to someone else) on the idea of presenting Internet Radio programs and actual radio programs together.

Geoff.

Fry's stocks the Roku and Squezebox. Both do radio and play streamed music. I was able to get $50 off the Squeezebox using a special code and directly ordering from Logitec. I think it was "whiteisnice" and you had to buy the white version.

The Squeezebox needs to plug into high fidelity equipment, i.e. think of it like a CD player and tuner. The Roku can do both, i..e it has some cheesy speakers if you want boombox sound. The Squeezebox is about twice the cost, but very high quality. It also supports FLAC streaming. That is, you store your audio in FLAC format on your hard drive. The software can stream the FLAC as I states, or convert to MP3 on the fly if you want to stream over the net rather than your LAN. The Roku doesn't support FLAC.

If you go to www.sourceforge.org, there is a software emulator for the squeezebox called softsqueeze. This lets you emulate the box to make sure your network and software are working before you buy the box. If all you want is streaming radio, you can get that just by attaching it to your wifi and logging into their network.

IBOCcrock,

Kicking up the Power of the FM "HD" Radio Signal from the present 1% of the Analog ERP will solve 95.45% of the problems that you have 'cited' for those FM Radio Listeners living within the 60 dBu (1 µV/M) Service Contour of any 'local' FM "HD" Radio Station. - http://www.lpfm.ws/interference/

GSM,

The "All Mode" AM/FM/DS/WF Radio - Is It the Next Step in the Evolution of the Radio {Sound Box} ?
+ AM Radio
+ AM & FM Radio
+ AM & FM-Stereo Radio
+ IBOC Analog and Digital AM-Stereo & FM Multi-Channel Radio
+ WiFi Internet and IBOC Analog and Digital AM-Stereo
& FM Multi-Channel Radio

Will Audio Consumers Want the All Digital Mode AM/FM/DS Radio ?
http://groups.google.com/group/rec.radio.shortwave/msg/f937d82990d558be

A Revolution in Audio Content Delivery May Be in the Making . . . The All Digital Mode AM/FM+DS Radio
http://groups.google.com/group/rec.radio.shortwave/msg/fd5918c62cb6a3b7

NOTE - The Price Point of these All Digital-Mode AM/FM/DS
"HD" Radios will Drop Annually over a Period of several Years
http://groups.google.com/group/rec.radio.shortwave/msg/efc8bced15215f63

What About the All Digital IBOC "HD" AM/FM Radio with Direct Satellite (DS) Plug-and-Play.
-aka- "All Mode" AM/FM/DS Radios
http://groups.google.com/group/rec.radio.shortwave/msg/79bbda2241262e55 http://groups.google.com/group/rec.radio.shortwave/msg/6e4fa8254e237d12 http://groups.google.com/group/rec.radio.shortwave/msg/61569565b11d0e23

So what is needed to take this "Sound Box" to the next level is the same sort of Plug-and-Play Optional WiFi Module that would allow the "All Mode" AM/FM/DS Radios to become
"All Mode" AM/FM/DS/WF Radios

+1 = Basic AM/FM "HD" Radio {IBOC Analog and Digital}

+2 = Standard Input for an "Optional" Direct Satellite (DS)
Plug-and-Play Module {Tuner & Antenna}

+3 = Standard Input for an "Optional" WiFi (WF) Internet Plug-and-Play Module {Tuner & Antenna}

connectivity in all things - sky-net... it's out-there ~ RHF

I don't realy know. IBOC and satellite radio are U.S. specific.

WiFi and Internet radio is world wide (but not anywhere near 100% coverage). Some places would surprise you, for example, Estonia has 100% WiFi coverage.

In industrialized nations, LW,AM and shortwave broadcasting are on their way out because of increasing levels of RF noise.

Internet delivery of realtime audio programs (aka Internet Radio) is very attractive to producers because it does not require big investment in equipment, licenses, and is easily scaleable.

In the past if you wanted to reach a large audience with little money, you had to modify a ham radio and become a pirate. Now you can publish you programs with very little investment, 100% legally with YouTube, Miro and many other websites.

Real time delivery is more expensive, but certainly a lot cheaper than obtaining a broadcast license, or buying time from a licensed SWBC station.

Once you leave your local time zone, the attraction of real time delivery lessens. How many people are going to get up at 3am to listen to a talk show? Sporting event? "Live" concert?

I never could figure out Habitat For Humanity. Around here, I've seen at least a few of the homes go up. Then, the folks move in, and they always seem to have brand new, fairly expensive vehicles, and I've seen some wearing what I'd consider to be 'office apparel', so they look to be doing quite well.

What gives with that?

I use the $200 Everex PC from WalMart. It's cheaper than a standalone web radio. It uses about 20 Watts of electricals, or about 10% of what a "normal" desktop uses. As a bonus, I can type on usenet whilst listening to web radio.

Icom R9500 operating manual, almost 150 pages,available as a PDF file at: http://www.radioworld.ca
Jan. 2008 QST ran a product review, and astonishing AM sensitivities were shown, as follows:
At 1 MHZ 2.8 microvolts Preamp Off
0.82 microvolts Preamp 1 On
0.52 microvolts Preamp 2 On However some confusion arises with AM sensitivity shown as 6.3 microvolts from .01-1.8 Mhz, still impressive. This latter sounds more like it, but if 1 Mhz figures above are right. what an awesome AM broadcast receiever !!

Radio's big problem is content! I'm sorry jukebox stations playing the same hits, with robotic voice trackers won't cut in the age of ipods and wireless internet. And it appears new gadgets are coming to market faster than any of us can keep up. Owners and management must groom new young talent. Imagine if your favorite baseball team stopped going after new talent? Stations must start taking risk's again. IBOC is the right direction, but just doing the same old thing is not.. And hello CC it's not working. nobody really cares enough to rush out and buy a new radio... If you radio had the same rush Ipods have received none of this would be a problem. But IBOC is DOA.
and revenues for terrestrial radio is flat and trending down. And that's a trend. yes people are still listening, but cume is trending down, slowly with revenues!. If IBOC grabs any market share it will fracture and decrease shares of terrestrial radio listening. And that's not good!

Get your terms right. Cume today (total number of persons using radio) is about the same as it was in 1985. Time Spent Listening is slowly trending down, as it has from the late 80's... way before iPods and satellite and DSL.

Iboc is failing because programming is the same old thing as with good old Am & FM.
I'm not happy with the trends with Am/Fm never mind Iboc..
Bottom Line
During the quarter 1 2006 study, Bridge Ratings attempted to learn why these latest findings indicate that time spent with traditional radio has slumped again. When participants in the study responded they were listening to AM/FM radio less than they were three months ago, the following were results of asking "why":
Chart 3 Decreased Use of Traditional Radio Due to...
12-24 25-49 35-64
More Cell Phone Use 10% 16% 14%
MP3 Use 27% 22% 18%
Satellite Radio 2% 3% 2%
Radio programming is "Same old-Same Old" 22% 17% 31%
Podcast Listening 3% 3% 2%
Activity Related* 25% 19% 23%
More Time on Computer 6% 15% 5%
Other 5% 5% 4%
*Behavior or listening locations changed, i.e. more time in-car/more listening in-office.
An update of data collected during Q2 2006 will be released by Bridge Ratings the first week of July 2006.

Telescopes and probes (and possibly rovers) are the best use of resources. No logical reason to do manned anything; except the extremely rare instances when a repair would be cost-effective.

"Ibiquity Publishes Proposed Rule For Merger"

"This represents $100's of millions of dollars if the premium is only $10 per chipset. How much is the premium in reality? $20? $30? This information is needed to consider exactly what is being placed on the table by Ibiquity. Ibiquity is looking for such a concession so that they will no longer have to spend hundreds of millions of dollars, and negotiate with OEM partners. While seeing exactly what their proposal seeks is helpful, there are still more answers that are needed. Taking away hudreds of millions of dollars in synergies is not a viable answer at this point."

http://siriusbuzz.com/ibiquity-publishes-proposed-rule-for-merger.php

"Leech"

Leeches are annelids comprising the subclass Hirudinea. There are fresh water, terrestrial, and marine leeches. Like their near relatives, the Oligochaeta, they share the presence of a clitellum. Like earthworms, leeches are hermaphrodites. The medicinal leech, Hirudo medicinalis, which is native to Europe, and its congeners have been used for clinical bloodletting for thousands of years.

All leech species are carnivorous. Some are predatory, feeding on a variety of invertebrates such as worms, snails, insect larvae, crustaceans, while a very few are haemophagic parasitic blood-sucking leeches, feeding on the blood of vertebrates such as amphibians, reptiles, waterfowl, fish, and mammals (including humans). The most important predators of leeches are fish, aquatic insects, crayfish and other leeches specialized for predation on leeches.

Haemophagic leeches attach to their hosts and remain there until they become full, at which point they fall off to digest. Leeches' bodies are composed of 34 segments. They all have an anterior (oral) sucker formed from the first six segments of their body, which is used to connect to a host for feeding, and also release an anesthetic to prevent the host from feeling the leech. They use a combination of mucus and suction (caused by concentric muscles in those six segments) to stay attached and secrete an anti-clotting enzyme into the host's blood stream. Some species of leech will nurture their young, providing food, transport, and protection, which is unusual behavior in an invertebrate.

R8B manual shows sensitivity on AM as 1.5 microvolt nominal...100
-30,000 Khz with preamp Off. and less than 1.0 microvolt with preamp on. What does 'less than' indicate as to actual value ? R8B is a great receiver, but R9500 is broad spectrum and in my opinion overall is a better receiver, BUT here we go--lots of opinions coming.
To each his own, and time and a plethora of reviews probably won't change too many minds. I am continuing my perusal of the PDF manual and am really impressed. Icom, I believe has come up with a real classic receiver. QST reviewer calls it "the best reciever I've ever

In my several decades in the hobby, virtually all of the 'broad spectrum' receivers had serious faults. In most cases it might be better (and more economical) to obtain separate receivers that are more optimized for the task at hand. And, at better than 10k for the 9500...one can get a bunch of good stuff! (Heck, ya can get a couple hookers!)

Made by Tecsun in China.

Hongkonradioer site has many pictures of visit to factory.

I called Eton this week, they say they should be available near end of April, Universal first predicted March. The radio is shown in a press release at Eton's Website.

Looks like another nice cheap radio. Retail price supposed to be $300.
That sure blows away the Sat800 or the E1. But, is it a "quality" set??

To be determined, I guess.

Oh, and someone was circulating some pics of a working demonstration model from this year's Consumer Electronic Show in Vegas....so, I guess at least one has been produced.

Acculturation takes years. But, yes, since I was baptized "Eduardo" by my mother who lived many years in Europe, I had the second name even then.

The funniest thing is though, you never used it when you were in the heart of the Hispanic world. Never signed anything with that name, never used it.

It only crops up when you adopted the 'Eduardo' shtick starting circa 2000.

Heck! I've been 'Hispanic' longer than you have. One of my nicknames, starting around 1975 or so has been 'Raoul'.

As I said before, I never used it until I wanted a name for BBS and, later, Usenet and, later, Internet boards. My first two names seemed appropriate to differentiate.

Actually, it goes back to The Well and CIS circa 1985.

As in "Eating Raoul?"

"Raoul" is not an Hispanic name, anyway. "Ra&#65533;l" is.

Using a Boonton Model 103D rf generator into a 50 Ohm thru load, the R8 easily hears signals at a 0.15uV level across the whole tuning range, preamp off. This is using the "hard" measurement technique that results in a more conservative measurement vs the "soft" measurement technique that the Japanese manufacturers use in order to make their numbers appear better. Every Icom radio I have ever used/measured is a brick on the MW range, until you remove the full-time 10dB attenuator that they always seem to use. After you remove the attenuator, Icom radios aren't too bad, except for the audio quality.
Yes, I have two Icom receivers.....the R-72 and the R-75. The R-72 has better sounding audio quality, but the IMD performance isn't in the same league as the R-75. Opinions? No.....just hard lab data.

"David" is an Hispanic name. It is also used with the same spelling in many other cultures.

Last names or surnames often have no relationship with the current culture of a person. A distant relative, with the last name "Gleason" was for decades a professor at the UNAM in Mexico. Another was the wife of the Mexican ambassador to Great Britain.

"O'Higgins" is the surname of the liberator of Chile. And on and on.

Lots of people with long names don't use them.

People think of the Alamo and General Santa Anna.

His real name is Antonio de Padua Mar&#65533;a Severino L&#65533;pez de Santa Anna y P&#65533;rez

More like 1985. And, really, who cares? I also know plenty of people who were, for example, fine with Tommy as a young adult, who became Tom and then Thomas as they grew older and achieved certain career milestones.

A lot different than adopting the 'Eduardo' shtick at around age 55.

It's a matter of dynamic range. On the pro-gear, they assume some sort of external preamp or pigs of an antenna. The pro gear may not be as sensitive, but if it can handle a wider dynamic range. So much the better. The front end is where you set the SNR. Not so much preamp determined for HF and MW since the natural noise levels there are high.

We did a shoot out one day with the R8B and the AR7030. And by day, I mean day. It was an afternoon. All we had to listen too were the overseas aircraft. Then again, they were weak signals. The R8B was fine. So was the AR7030. Its a matter of can your brain handle the menus of the 7030. If you are an old fart, get the R8B. Plenty of buttons.

Incidentally, the R8B computer control is really crap. I've seen the interface. For computer control, the AR7030 is vastly superior. In fact, AOR allows too much to be hacked since some of the adjustments are done via the 232 port.

I saw some rant about the 9500 on radio reference. The buyer was not very happy.
